Armed Ship Bill Rushed to House; Debate Is Limited To Day and Hour

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday approved arming of American merchant ships as "a matter of extreme urgency" and cleared the way for House action tomorrow.

With unequaled speed, the House Rules Committee added its indorsement and sent the armed ship bill to the House with a rule prescribing one day and one hour of debate.

Leaders predicted passage by the House before nightfall tomorrow by a margin of more than 100 votes.

"Pirate Attacks" Cited

The brief resolution repealing Section 6 of the Neutrality Act to permit American flag ships to be mounted with guns manned by naval gun crews was approved by the House Foreign Affairs Committee without a record vote.

Chairman Bloom filed a report with the House protesting "piratical attacks by German submarines and aircraft on American vessels."

The report said the safety of the crews and "the success of our program of all-out aid to those nations resisting aggression" make the legislation urgent.

Six Republican members of the committee immediately submitted a minority report, asking recommittal of the bill for "adequate" hearings.

Subterfuge Is Charged

The dissenting report termed the proposal "part of an Administration plan to destroy our neutrality laws and to put us into war by subterfuge." It denied arming of merchantmen will furnish "effective" protection to the crews.

Signing the minority statement were Representatives Tinkham of Massachusetts, Chiperfield of Illinois, Vorys of Ohio, Mundt of South Dakota, Jonkman of Michigan and Mrs. Bolton of Ohio.

Four Republican members did not sign—Fish of New York, Eaton of New Jersey, Rogers of Massachusetts and Stearns of New Hampshire.

In answer to minority charges of "gagged" hearings, bill managers meanwhile prepared to cite to the House the House record of speedy approval of the late President Wilson's armed ship bill.

Passed 403 to 14

Though later killed by a 12-man Senate filibuster, that measure passed the House, 403 to 14, on March 1, 1917, after only three hours general debate and without any witnesses appearing at committee hearings.

Republican leaders, including the late Speaker Longworth and former Republican Minority Leader Snell, supported the Wilson ship bill, and Representative Tinkham voted for it. The late Representative Charles A. Lindbergh, of Minnesota, father of the flier, was among the 14 who voted "No."

Complying with President Roosevelt's request for "all speed" on the present ship-arming bill, the House was called into session at 11 a.m. today to vote on the rule giving it right-of-way.

General debate, confined to repeal of the Section 6 ban on armed merchantmen, will continue all day today and for an added

Catoe Calm As Murder Jury Is Picked

Mrs. Abramowitz's Husband May Take Stand Today

Eleven men and one woman stood up in District Court yesterday and placed their right hand on Bibles and swore to Justice James W. Morris that they would give Jarvis Theodore Roosevelt Catoe, confessed sex slayer, "a fair and impartial trial based on evidence in the court" and regardless of what they have heard or read. Catoe is on trial for the murder of Mrs. Rose Abramowitz in her Sixteenth Street apartment.

Shortly after, Justice Morris ordered that the "jury be kept together until the end of the trial." The 12 jurors, with three United States marshals, will stay under guard at the Hotel Continental when they are not in the courtroom.

The 36-year-old Negro defendant, in a dark blue suit, sat with his legs crossed, his eyes straight ahead, and his face expressionless during the proceedings. Occasionally he glanced to the left, as person after person approached the jury box. Many of the potential jurors admitted that they had "already reached a decision as to the defendant's guilt" and that they could not give him a fair trial.

A score more talesmen were excused from the jury when they answered "yes" to Assistant United States Attorney Fihelly's often repeated question: "Do you have any conscientious scruples as to the imposition of the death penalty in a first degree murder case or in a rape case where the facts warrant such a verdict?"

At 3 p. m., after two criminal court panels of jurors, or 52 persons,

Schulte Calls For Suburban Subway Links

Also Urges District To Require Garages In New Apartments

Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, yesterday urged two means of helping solve the District's traffic dilemma.

He demanded of the District Government rules which would require all apartments and private dwellings in Washington to provide off-street parking facilities for their tenants.

And he declared that a system of rail and subway transportation must link the suburbs with downtown Washington to relieve traffic pressure.

Would Welcome Aid

Suggesting at a hearing of the subcommittee of which he is chairman that underground parking might aid the problem, Representative Schulte said, "I'm under the impression the Federal Government is going to have to come into the picture financially."

Director of Highways H. C. Whitehurst replied that the District would welcome Federal aid.

"I cannot recommend an underground garage system and put the cost up to the taxpayers of the District," he declared. The cost of such a system would run between $1200 and $1500 per auto, he said.

The fringe parking bill which the subcommittee is considering is "but a part of the whole," Whitehurst emphasized. "All the problems have to be correlated. You can't do any one of them and solve the entire problem," he said.

Thousands on Street

Representative F. Edward Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, touched off rapid-fire exclamations when he demanded, "Why doesn't the zoning commission require that all new buildings have off-street parking facilities?"

Schulte—"There are thousands of cars on the streets—"

Hebert—"It's about time some head is found for this District Government. Capt. Whitehurst is attacking it from one angle, but—"

Showers Tease; Drought Continues

Erratic showers yesterday failed to break the drought in the Washington area, and the Weather Bureau said that still no appreciable amount of rainfall was in sight.

Southerly winds will shift today, bringing in cooler and drier air from the north, the forecaster said.

Innovation for Capital

Industrial Accident Prevention Board Is Authorized for D. C.

The White House announced yesterday that the President had signed a bill to set up the District's first industrial accident prevention board.

Under provisions of the bill, sponsored by the A. F. L. Central Labor Union, the District Minimum Wage Board becomes the Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board, with authority to hold hearings and establish regulations.

The Central Labor Union undertook the fight for the accident prevention board last March after a number of union construction laborers were killed and injured on a sewage blasting project. A committee investigating reported that in 1940 there were 76 workers killed and more than 31,000 injured on the job here.

Through Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, of the House District Committee, a bill creating the new board was introduced and passed in the House, but when it came up in the Senate, District Committee Chairman McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, suggested that the duties be given to an already existing bureau.

Thus the job falls to the three nonsalaried members of the Minimum Wage Board, Mrs. William Kittle, chairman and representative of the public; Fred S. Walker, representing labor, and John E. Laskey,

Pay Raised In Navy Yards On East Coast

Increases Benefit Thousands From Maine to Georgia; Effective Monday

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Navy last night authorized pay increases for thousands of Navy Yard workers here and at other naval "activities" along the Atlantic seaboard.

Effective as of last Monday, the increases are designed to bring wage rates from Maine to Georgia into line with wages in commercial shipyards.

Naval officials said the increases covered some 180 classifications of workers and that the increases varied from one locality to another. They, therefore, would not estimate the average percentage of the pay rises, the number of workers affected, nor the total amount of additional money in this week's pay envelopes.

Orders Go Out Today

Orders listing the scale of increases will go out from the Navy Department today, and any further information must come from the local navy yards, it was said.

Officials at the Naval Gun Factory here said they had been expecting the order, but knew nothing of its contents.

The new pay schedules are understood to make a departure from the existing scale in that one rate will prevail for workers in standard trades throughout the Atlantic Coast. Heretofore, pay rates varied in the various localities.

Wages increases already have been granted to navy yard workers on the Pacific Coast and in other parts of the country. The present Atlantic pay rates have been in effect since November, 1940.

In announcing the wage increases, the Navy Department said:

"The present revision has been made by the department on its own initiative to comply with the promise of the Secretary of the Navy last June.

"At that time he stated, with special reference to conferences between management and labor to stabilize wages for the shipbuilding industry, that whenever agreements resulting from those conferences established commercial shipyard rates, with which Navy Yard rates are inconsistent, necessary action would be taken as promptly as possible.

National Airport, Bolling Field Strike Nears End

A. F. of L. workers at the National Airport and Bolling Field who staged a walkout Tuesday in protest against alleged hiring of nonunion labor by the contractor will probably return to their jobs today or tomorrow, Frank J. Sheehan, of the Labor Department Conciliation Service, predicted last night after a meeting with both sides.

Approximately 60 men are involved on the two projects, costing about $750,000. The men are engaged in road surfacing and grading operations at the two air fields. Representatives of the Engineers Local 77, Teamsters Local 539 and the Laborers Union, all units of A. F. of L., conferred with members of the Tufano Contracting Co. and Sheehan yesterday.

560,000 Seized, Freeing Men to Close In on City, Berlin Asserts

By the United Press

Berlin, Oct. 15.—German motorized columns are streaming four abreast over feebly defended highways to Moscow, at places only 50 or 60 miles distant, while the steel pincers closing on the capital have smashed through Kalinin and Tula, Nazi informants said tonight.

Far behind the Moscow front, the high command reported in a special communique, the annihilation battles of the Vyazma and Bryansk pockets raged toward a bloody end as the number of Soviet prisoners taken there mounted to 560,000.

Berlin Diary

The communique also said the encirclement battles netted 888 Russian tanks and 4133 guns. Red Army forces trapped north of Bryansk were "smashed with heaviest casualties," while the mop-up in the woodlands south of Bryansk went on relentlessly. Four Soviet armies were reported "completely destroyed" in the Vyazma pocket.

Adolf Hitler's field headquarters proclaimed that the bulk of the German forces engaged in the gigantic battle now were "released for continuation of operations"—evidently to join in the battle for Moscow.

Moscow Reported Bombed

Paced by dive bombers helping siege artillery to soften up Moscow's outermost defenses, Panzer spearheads were said to be blazing trails of destruction toward the capital, with legions of mechanized infantry swarming in their wake to consolidate the gains.

The high command said Moscow itself was under German aerial bombardment, a Nazi strategem often reflecting the expectation of the imminent arrival of ground forces at the bombing objective.

(A Berlin broadcast heard in New York said strong German bomber forces Tuesday attacked and cut in several places Russian railway lines to the White Sea—a route by which American supplies are being moved into the Soviet battle line by way of Archangel. Unconfirmed reports also said a British expeditionary force had been sent to Archangel. Many trains were destroyed by the bombing, the radio said.)

Amid a dearth of specific reports here on the paramount battle for

Panama's 2-Hour President Named New Envoy to U. S.

Panama, Panama, Oct., 15 (AP).—Ernesto Jaen Gardia, who served as President of Panama for two hours between the regimes of the overthrown Dr. Arnulfo Arias and the pro-American Ricardo Adolfo de LaGuardia, was formally named Panamanian ambassador to the United States tonight.

Guardia, also Panama's second vice president, will leave for Washington by plane tomorrow morning, going via Mexico and accompanied by his first secretary, Max Huertematte.

Arias remained incommunicado in jail tonight, 24 hours after he walked ashore from the Honduran steamer Cefalu, which brought him home from Cuba, and surrendered to Panama police.

The Panama Government was reported making plans to fly him into exile in Costa Rica, under an agreement officially announced with Arias last night. His wife, however, said she was unable to interview him in jail and had no knowledge of such plans.

Nippon 'Itching for Action'

Spokesman Calls Relations With U. S. 'Extremely Critical'

BULLETIN

Tokyo, (Thursday), Oct. 16 (AP).—The Japanese foreign office announced today that the Russian foreign commissariat had advised the Japanese Embassy staff to prepare to withdraw from Moscow.

By the United Press

Tokyo (Thursday), Oct. 16.—There were increasing indications today that Japanese-American relations are approaching a new crisis and a navy ministry spokesman publicly warned the nation that the "final cross-roads" may be at hand.

It was the first time that the navy, which heretofore strongly has supported efforts for a Japanese-American understanding, had admitted the immediate danger of a Japanese-American war.

The spokesman, Capt. Hideo Hiraide, did not mince words and said that "in fact the Japanese navy is itching for action."

Emphasizing the gravity of the outlook, the spokesman said:

"Despite our government's most strenuous efforts the situation now seems to have reached a final parting of the ways. The fate of our empire depends upon how we act at this moment. It certainly is at such a moment as this that our navy should set about its primary mission."

(In Japanese naval circles the term "primary mission" ordinarily means offensive war.)

"Japanese-American relations are extremely critical," Capt. Hiraide told Japanese correspondents at Kyoto yesterday, and later said in a lecture that "our navy is in an excellent condition and getting stronger."

Outlining the situation from a Japanese naval viewpoint the spokesman said that President Roosevelt unfailingly will seek compensation for the assistance he is giving Russia in her war with Germany. This "compensation" is almost certain to be of a nature which will affect Japan, he asserted.

So far as the Navy knows, Capt. Hiraide continued, Moscow has not yet promised the United States the

Balkan Revolt Drives Italians Out of Villages

German Garrisons Ask Help Against Guerrilla Fighters

By the Associated Press

Ankara, Oct. 15.—Serb and Montenegrin guerrilla activities have become so intense that Italian troops in former Yugoslav territory have withdrawn principally into the larger cities, while the German garrisons are calling for more help, well-informed sources in the conquered area declared tonight.

The guerrilla operations are of such a large scale southwest of Belgrade that entire towns have been taken and held temporarily until German bombers and land reinforcements blasted them out, these sources said.

The town of Uzice, of 12,000 or more population, has been captured and recaptured so many times that it has been virtually destroyed, it was said, while heavy damage also has been done at Shabata and Zvorkik, both repeatedly held by guerrillas.

The Italians and Germans were described as equally stern in reprisals, but the Italians were said to be less successful in suppressing patriot bands.

For example, when the Italians called for surrender of guns in Montenegro, only two were turned in, these informants said.

Both the Montenegrins and the Chetnik patriots in old Serbia were described as well armed with rifles, machine guns and light cannon, with substantial ammunition stocks.

Withdrawal of an armored German division from Serbia for service elsewhere complicated the German problem, because nonarmored forces suffer far heavier losses every time they have to recapture a town, it was asserted.

U. S. Called on To Meet Part Of Pay Rises

Increases Would Break Company, Consolidated Aircraft Head Says

By the Associated Press

San Diego, Calif., Oct. 15.—The Government was called upon suddenly today to pay a part of the increased wages granted A. F. L. machinists in the huge bomber plant of the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation.

Maj. R. H. Fleet, company president, publicly stated at a luncheon honoring Sidney Hillman, cochief of the Office of Production Management, that he would not sign a recent compromise wage agreement with the machinists unless the Government promised to help defray a part of the cost.

Fleet asserted the wage schedule would cost the company 82 million dollars on its present backlog of 750 million dollars in orders, and added:

"That would break the company. I will not sign the contract unless assured that the Government will stand by us."

Fleet said he was invoking the escalator clause of his bomber contracts to meet the wage raises. A company spokesman said this clause required the Government to pay any additional costs in the manu-

A. F. L. Calls for Racket Purge, Rejects Indicted Vice President

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Oct. 15.—The American Federation of Labor overwhelmingly rejected George E. Browne, indicted head of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes, as an A. F. L. vice president today after taking a stand earlier in the day against racketeering or law-breaking in any form within the labor movement.

The vote for Browne's contested eleventh vice presidency was 37,944 for Edward Flore, of Buffalo, the incumbent twelfth vice president, and 421 for Browne. Browne and William Bioff, West Coast labor leader, are on trial in New York on charges of extorting $550,000 from motion picture firms.

Flore is president of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes Union.

The other 12 vice presidents and Secretary George Meany were reelected by acclamation.

The only votes for Browne were the 420 allotted to the three delegates of his stage employes' union and the one vote of the Colorado Federation of Labor. The latter was cast by George W. Brayfield, also a member of Browne's union.

The convention earlier amended its constitution to reduce the number of vice presidents from 15 to 13. The executive council had recommended the action to expedite the obtaining of quorums for coun-

Break-Through 'Compelled' Reds To Fall Back, Russians Say

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Thursday), Oct. 16. A vast German force of tanks and motorized infantry has broken through the defenses west of Moscow, forcing the Russian central armies into retreat, it was acknowledged officially early today, with the hour of supreme crisis for the Soviet capital admittedly at hand.

The communique announcing this staggering blow to the Red armies of the center was issued two to three hours later than the usual midnight report by the Soviet Information Bureau.

Although vague as to details, it left no doubt of the peril pressing on Moscow and on the Soviet Union with these three sharp sentences:

"During the night of October 14-15, the position in the western direction of the front deteriorated.

"Compelled to Retreat"

"The German Fascist armies hurled a large quantity of tanks and motorized infantry against our units, and in one sector broke through our defenses.

"Our forces opposed the enemy heroically, inflicting heavy losses, but were compelled to retreat in this sector."

There was no phrase to relieve the stark impact of the announcement, no word to intimate that the Nazis might have been stopped after this break-through which occurred more than 24 hours ago.

From that point the communique went on merely to detail destruction of 36 German planes Monday and 9 Tuesday in the approaches to Moscow.

Other and less official accounts of the great western battle, issued last night, portrayed the Germans as imperiling the Red line along the upper Volga and pushing with steady power from the west.

Their present whereabouts and the scene of the break-through were not disclosed.

Critical North of City

In the northwest about Kalinin, 95 miles above the capital, the invaders struck with tanks, armored cars, planes and infantry spearheaded by parachutists dropping behind the Russian formations, and while a force of these latter was declared annihilated it was admitted that isolated Nazi salients were being extended.

Italian Editor Heckles Radio Ghost Heckler

By the United Press

Rome, Oct. 15.—It remained tonight for Mario Appelius, Italian radio commentator, to engage in debate with one of the "ghost" voices which have been heckling British, German and other radio programs.

Listeners throughout Italy heard the following exchange between Appelius, who is chief editorial writer on Benito Mussolini's newspaper Popolo D'Italia, and who was discussing the international situation, and the heckler speaking on the Rome radio's wave length:

"You are an Italian ass," said the heckler.

"That's better than being a British citizen," Appelius replied, thus becoming the first broadcaster to talk back to a heckler.

"But you have sold out," the heckler said.

"Yes," said Appelius, "sold out to my country, but you have sold out to foreigners."

"But victory will be Germany's, not Italy's," the heckler said.

"Yes, victory will be Italy's, too, and you know it," the editor said.

"Then tell us what is happening in Italy," the voice demanded.

"It's raining," Appelius replied, "which is good for our crops."

"It isn't true that the Russians are beaten," said the voice.

"What about the three million Russian prisoners?" said Appelius. "Are they winning?"

(In an official version put out by the official Italian news agency, the ghost voice was said finally to have "dissolved in the British fog.")

Voice From the Depths

Moscow, Oct. 15 (INS).—A special radio broadcast tonight from the Soviet cruiser Kirov—claimed by the Nazis to have been sunk—derided German assertions that the Red banner fleet was at the bottom of the sea.

"We have sunk many German warships and troop transports," said the broadcast, "and have smashed a dozen Fascist shore batteries."

Prince Gets Harvest Leave

Further Restrictions Follow New Wave Of Anti-Semitism

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Oct., 15.—A new wave of anti-semitism in Berlin these days is characterized by the following developments:

1. The Jewish kulturbund which provided theatrical performances, concerts and movies to the Jewish population has been dissolved and its artists sent to work in munitions factories, on road building projects and similar chores.

Jews already were barred from all cultural institutions available to non-Jews.

2. Grocers dealing in vegetables and fruits may not inscribe Jews on their customers lists for these two kinds of products.

Every German household is required to register with a definite grocer, meat market or dairy products shop which alone may then supply it with the quantities allowed under Germany's strict rationing system.

For some time before Jews had been barred from purchasing sweets, condensed milk and many other canned goods.

Synagogues Closed

3. The synagogues in Levetzow and Muenchener Streets, which remained among the few houses of worship permitted to the Jews, were closed recently and all space available inside filled with straw sacks. It is believed the buildings will be used to house large numbers of Jews.

4. Some 2000 Jewish families living in flats and apartments received notices during the past ten days to prepare to leave them.

5. Persons receiving such notices were forbidden to look about for other quarters. They were told they would be assigned quarters when the time comes to move.

6. All Jews receiving the evacuation notice must fill out an inventory of all their possessions, from pianos to collar buttons.

7. They must fill out a list entitled "normal needs of consumer," but not to include objects on this list on the general inventory.

The normal needs of an adult Jewess are listed as two dresses, two occupational dresses if a profession so requires, two aprons or professional smocks, one pullover or knitted jacket, one raincoat or rain costume, one winter coat or large shawl, one pair winter gloves, three under shirts or union suits, three drawers, two pajamas or nightgowns, two petticoats, six pairs of stockings, six handkerchiefs, and other articles from bedsheets to gymnasium shoes in the same quantity as the man.

The President's Day

FAMILY WASH: The Roosevelt family wash will be pleasantly heavier next Monday with a daughter and son-in-law put up in the guest room. Daughter Anna Roosevelt Boettiger and her husband John bounded up the White House steps yesterday to be greeted by breakfasting Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt. The Botettigers will go up to Hyde Park with the Roosevelts over the weekend, hang around for a day or so next week before entraining for home in Seattle, Wash.

DAM OVERSIGHT: Senator Josh Lee, Okla. and Representative Clyde Ellis, Ark., came in to see the boss about setting up an Arkansas Valley Authority along the lines of the TVA because of the now-operating Grand River Dam. The boss reminded them that he had already approved an AVA and the the rest was up to Congress. Exit Congressmen.

ROMANS: "No connection whatsoever between their returns to the U. S.," but also in to see the President yesterday was Ambassador to Rome William Phillips, following the call of Special Envoy Myron Taylor by only a few days. Conversational subject was Italy—the subject delicate in diplomatic circles just now, as the American Embassy in Rome, like the American Embassy in Greece, is handling Free French and British business as well as it's own.

BELGIAN ALLIES: Following a brief chat with Harry Hopkins' man Friday, Dave Niles, the President signaled the usher to show in Belgian Ambassador Georges Theunis and Belgian Minister of Foreign Affairs Paul Henri Spaak. They talked a while, exchanged best wishes, separated.

EDIFICATION FOR EDITOR JOHN: After adding-machine Harold D. Smith, Director of the Budget, came and went, leaving a mess of figures for the President to look over, Big Bill Knudsen came in the front door of Mr. Roosevelt's office, son-in-law John Boettiger strolled in via the French door opening on the garden. Lunch finally came in, en wagon, through the third door, and for well over an hour, editor and publisher Boettiger listened to some interesting news about national defense, interrupted occasionally with questions. Daughter Anna and Mrs. Roosevelt lunched without benefit of husbands in the White House small dining room.

AND THE WINDSORS: The White House again yesterday repeated that "there are no further plans" to receive the Duke and Duchess of Windsor on their return trip to Washington.

560,000 Reds Captured, Berlin Claims

Moscow, military dispatches told of stout Russian counterattacks in unspecified sectors of both the northern and southern fronts. All were reported beaten back with heavy Soviet casualties.

The D. N. B. news agency said Red Army units in the south, supported by lumbering herds of Russia's heaviest tanks, struck time after time at an area occupied by one German army corps. It said Germans repulsed all onslaughts and destroyed many tanks.

Perhaps related to the report was a propaganda company dispatch tending to substantiate persistent reports that the Germans had broken through strong Soviet defenses separating the Crimean Peninsula from the mainland.

Dispatches said the Germans laboriously fought their way through line after line of the defenses, with the Russians bringing up fresh tank regiments in an effort to stem the German advance.

"The Russians have lost the tank battle," the dispatch concluded. "The gate to Crimea has been smashed and cannot be shut again."

(A Hungarian communique said Axis forces had captured strategic positions along the Donets River, "creating conditions necessary for the annihilation of enemy forces still operating west of the river." The Donets extends from the Kursk area to a junction with the Don 40 miles above Novocherkassk.)

In the north, D. N. B. said, the Russians made a determined attempt to force a crossing of a lake lying between the Soviet and German positions. They put out in storm boats under a devastating German fire which shattered their ranks and turned them back with crippling casualties, the agency said.

Unofficial but usually reliable Nazi quarters said German forces Tuesday advanced about 9 miles in the Kalinin sector, less than 100 miles from Moscow on the railway to Leningrad.

There was no confirmation that Kalinin, communications center and concentration point of the capital's outer defense ring, had been taken.

Also lacking was specific information on the status of the German drive through the area of Tula, arms center of the main railroad 100 miles south of Moscow.

(A Helsinki radio report heard in London quoted Berlin reports that German forces had occupied Kaluga, 50 miles northwest of Tula and another center of Russian defenses.)

The high command said that in an air raid on Moscow during the night several fires were started. D. N. B. called the raid "successful" and said many of the heaviest bombs were dumped among military objectives, after which the airmen saw great blazes leaping up.

Competent Nazi sources said the only real fighting was being done by the Panzer spearheads. Airmen reported that they could see immediately behind those spearheads huge columns of motorized forces pouring endlessly along the highways to Moscow.

They were protected by German planes and armored car curtains covering their flanks. Admittedly the Soviet defenses were very good, but the Germans said they could not stand up under the terrific blasting of mass dive-bombing.

R.A.F. Ties Up ½ Luftwaffe, British Claim

BULLETIN

Berlin, (Thursday), Oct. 16 (AP).—Weak R. A. F. forces dropped incendiary and explosive bombs in western Germany last night, causing slight damage, it was announced today. Three bombers were reported downed.

Copyright by New York Times

London (Thursday), Oct. 16.—The day and night offensive of the Royal Air Force has succeeded in tieing down in the west more than half of Germany's strength in fighter planes, the air ministry said last night.

This is one way in which Britain is aiding Russia "on a scale which few imagine," it was added.

Yesterday seven British bombers and one fighter failed to return home from sweeps over enemy-occupied territory, in the course of which they destroyed five Messerschmitts, bombed the waterfront at Le Havre and strafed shipping off the coast of the Netherlands. More British machines were out again after dark, judging by flashes of gunfire and the agitation of searchlights seen across the Straits of Dover.

The past 24 hours have been busy ones for the R. A. F. commands. A communique issued yesterday morning told about a successful bombing operation of shipping off Norway carried out Tuesday by Beaufort bombers. One of them torpedoed a vessel described as of medium size, which was the fourth attacked between noon and midnight that day. This particular aircraft's young Canadian navigator brought his plane home despite three wounds in his leg.

Bombers singled out targets in southern Germany early yesterday. They were hampered by bad weather. No details were given about the raid beyond a report that four aircraft were missing. nOe of the coastal command's machines was likewise lost.

Pilots, telling their stories about yesterday's fights over French soil, said four German fighters burst into flames before they reached the ground. Enemy planes darting in to attack British bombers above Le Havre were pounced on by protecting Spitfires and Hurricanes, more often than not before they had a chance to do any damage to the raiders.

A sergeant pilot who had followed his quarry down close to the ground found himself drawing the fire of a gun battery near the docks, yet he managed to polish off the enemy plane and then "beat up" the gunners.

Italian Airfield Blasted by British

Cairo, Oct. 15 (INS).—British naval aircraft caused three violent explosions in an attack on the Italian airdrome at Castelvetrano, Sicily, it was announced tonight.

Other air units attacked an enemy convoy in the Mediterranean, scoring two hits on a medium-sized merchantman which was later seen settling in the water. An enemy destroyer picked up survivors.

War With U.S. Near, Japan's Navy Says

concessions which Washington probably wants, since Russia, for the present, desires at all costs to avoid complications with Japan.

If Russia is defeated by Germany, however, the whole Far Eastern situation is likely to deteriorate rapidly, he said, adding that the United States then might send troops into Russian territory, as she did at the end of the World War.

The United States Navy has been greatly expanded and placed on a full war footing, the speaker said, but still is not strong enough to fight a two-ocean war. The imperial navy is confident it can oppose any force the United States might throw against it in the Pacific, the spokesman said.

If war should come, the captain continued, the United States Navy probably would attempt to enforce a long range blockade of Japan, backed by raids on Japanese shipping and attempts to bomb Japan and her outposts from the air.

The United States lacks bases for effective attacks on Japan, the captain said, discounting the danger of large-scale bombing attacks on major Japanese cities because of the great distance American bombers would have to fly. Japan would suffer losses in her overseas trade, he admitted, but would be able to survive because of the preliminary work she already has done in establishing a Far East economic blocfi the Russians had withdrawn from Kalinin after fierce battles in the neighborhood.)

Russians in Retreat as Germans Pierce Defenses West of Moscow, Reds Admit

To the west, from the theater of Vyazma, which itself is 125 miles from Moscow, even greater German forces were pounding forward in the most terrible fighting of all the war—advancing, said the official Soviet army organ Red Star, "only across the heaps of their own dead."

The situation, the paper added plainly, was now "more serious than at any time. . . . Moscow is in danger!"

Too, it urged the Red troops to hold on to their guns at any cost, saying:

Civilians in Flight

"Lost arms—lost honor. You must follow the iron-clad rule—guard your arms better than your very life. . . . This is decisive, especially now when the enemy has hurled against us all the reserves of his equipment and when British-American aid is only beginning to develop."

The Soviet press urged a people's defense of Moscow—such as has helped in holding Leningrad so long—and appealed that not a square yard of the city be abandoned.

Last night the capital remained calm, although people not required for the defense of the city still were leaving. The black tomb of Nicolai Lenin, one of the founders of Bolshevism, was closed. (It was not stated whether this had any direct connection with Moscow's military peril.)

Said the government newspaper Izvestia:

"From behind every stone on the approaches to Moscow the enemy must be met with fire and steel, every factory must become an arsenal forging arms for the defenders. Every man must learn to handle a gun."

Challenged the army organ Red Star:

"The enemy will never enter Moscow. He will choke on his own blood. The defense of the city must grow not daily but hourly—making it impregnable."

Just how far the Germans had progressed in the drive from the west was not known here, but as far as could be learned they had not yet reached Borodino, 70 miles west of the capital, where Napoleon fought his last great battle short of Moscow in 1812.

An authoritative source in London said, however, that fighting was heavy around Mozhaisk, 10 miles beyond Borodino and within 80 miles of Moscow, although the Germans apparently had not yet captured the town.

As to the situation above Moscow he declared it was possible that the Nazis had occupied Rzhev, which is 125 miles northwest of the capital, and advanced on to the east.

The British news agency Reuters reported that in the far south—a theater now overshadowed by the great struggle for Moscow—the German advance east of Mariupol along the coast of the Sea of Azov toward Rostov on the Don River had been halted, suffering in the process heavy losses.

Snow and rain were said to be hampering large-scale movements in the Ukraine.

A high ranking neutral observer in London thus summed up the situation about Moscow:

"Hitler for the first time in two years of war has thrown every available gun and tank into one attack. If he fails to take Moscow or destroy the Russian armies in the present drive—and he well may fail—Germany is finished until spring and might well have lost the war."

He expressed considerable optimism as to the Soviet chances of holding off the assaults on Moscow and gaining a stalemate, but was less hopeful of Russia's ability to establish an effective line of resistance in the east if the capital falls.

Military dispatches from the Vyazma sector reported that cold weather was aiding the Germans to some extent—permitting them to use not only the highways but those dirt roads which in the past had been mud bogs.

Beware, Britain, Fascist Writes

Rome, Oct. 15 (INS).—End of the present phase of the war in Russia, Editor Virginio Gayda wrote tonight in the Giornale D'Italia, will be followed rapidly by "frightful and threatening events against the island of Britain and the British Empire."

Knudsen Says U. S. Can Turn Out 54 Billions in Arms by End of '43

Senate Group Sees Chart Showing Steady Step-Ups in Defense Production

OPM Director William S. Knudsen yesterday told a Senate Appropriations subcommittee that 54 billion dollars of defense and lend-lease production can be entirely cleared from American factories by the end of 1943.

Exhibiting a production chart showing steady step-ups in defense output with the existing program completed in about 26 months, Knudsen told the subcommittee four billion dollars from the $5,985,000,000 new lend-lease appropriations can be turned out in completed products in the same time limit.

Chairman Adams of the Senate subcommittee said Knudsen estimated the present defense production program at 50 billion dollars and said his four-billion share of the new appropriation would be "superimposed" on the same production curve.

The Senate subcommittee completed testimony on lend-lease features of the bill with statements by Knudsen, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, Chairman Land of the Maritime Commission and Admiral Stark, chief of Naval Operations.

Hearings on additional deficiency items will continue today and the full committee is expected to pass the bill on to the Senate by the start of next week.

Secretary Wickard, appearing before the subcommittee, denied any inconsistency between his one billion dollar proposed food allotments to Britain and statements by Lord Woolton, British food minister, that England has larger food stocks now than at the beginning of the war.

He said Woolton referred specifically to wheat and sugar and repeated in effect what he told the House committee that Britain stocks of vital food supplies are still below a desirable level in view of the shipping situation and the possibility of an invasion.

He said the amount of dairy products, meats, poultry and fruit the British are receiving is far below the standard necessary for good health and efficient production by England's civil population.

Gives Her Support To Russian Aid

MRS. WINSTON CHURCHILL, wife of the Prime Minister, in one of her rare public appearances in London yesterday gave her support to a campaign for one million pounds for further Red Cross aid to Russia. Said Mrs. Churchill: "It is my fervent hope that the people here will do everything to support Russia in every possible way. The Russians have set up a new standard of courage. We pray to God that we may be saved these trials, but if we are not, I know we can stand up to it"

England Needs More Food, Appleby Tells Rotary Club

The United States is now sending the English food supplies equal to about half their prewar food imports each month, Undersecretary of Agriculture Paul H. Appleby said here yesterday.

Appleby, recently returned from a month's tour of battling England, told members of the Washington Rotary Club at their luncheon in the Willard that "the English never complain, but they need more food."

"They don't have enough to eat," he said.

With all the British have been able to do toward increasing food production in their islands, they have been able to boost their prewar production only about 10 per cent, giving them 40 per cent of what they need, Appleby said.

"Our shipments began last spring, and only last month reached a figure which we hope to maintain for several months to come," he said. "That makes up about half their prewar deficit."

Though hungry, the English people have "amazing morale," Appleby said.

"They are the most unified, the most consecrated people you could imagine, in all walks of life," he added. "There is no profiteering. They are spending better than 65 per cent of their national income in this effort, and that percentage is going up.

"Throughout, England is a country at war as a country has never been at war before, where the front line is in your front yard, in your backyard, on your roof."

To show the English spirit, Appleby recalled his visit to bombed English towns, and a story he heard in one of them. An old English couple had seen their home bombed, and they looked at the ruins. The husband urged his wife to come away to a nearby shelter where they could get warm by a stove.

And his wife exclaimed:

"And let Hitler win?"

Senator Tells Lear to Retire And Not Make Truman 'Goat'

By the Associated Press

Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear of "yoo-hoo" fame became the center of a new controversy yesterday when Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, angrily protested that the general was blaming tactical errors of his Second Army on other officers, among them a cousin of Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri.

Clark told Lear in a telegram that the latter should retire rather than make Maj. Gen. Ralph E. Truman the "goat" for a "tactical defeat" suffered by the Second Army in recent maneuvers.

The Senator sent his wire in response to a telegram from Lear, informing him that Truman, former commander of the Thirty-fifth Division, had resigned effective after a leave beginning October 29. Officials here said Truman had been shifted from the command of the Thirty-fifth to the post of president of the permanent reclassification board of the Second Army.

Lear said in his telegram that Gen. Truman had done "splendid and outstanding service" and remarked that his departure will be regretted by Second Army Headquarters.

"If his services were as satisfactory as you indicate," Clark wired in reply, "why did you personally relieve him of command? It is, of course, the old Army game which does not intend to leave a National Guard officer, no matter how efficient, in command of a National Guard division.

"You are trying to blame the tactical defeat which your army suffered on Truman and various other National Guard officers, which is exceedingly unfair. You should retire yourself rather than make Gen. Truman the goat."

Lehman's Son Off To Join RCAF

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Oct. 15.—Peter G. Lehman, eldest son of Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, flew to Ottawa today where he plans to enlist in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

After trying for several months to enroll as an aviation cadet in the United States forces, the Governor's son was turned down because he was married. He said today that while he hopes to join the R. C. A. F. as a pilot, he would "take anything they give me." The Governor's son has been training as an aviator nearly two years, having made his first solo flight in the summer of 1940. A younger brother, John Robert Lehman, 21, has completed a course in military training and is awaiting a commission in the United States Army.

Plot Thickens

Seamen Got Naval Data, Trial Told

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 15.—Long before Italy entered the current war, German-American seamen were asked in Genoa to "do something for the old country—Germany," according to a statement read today at the trial of 15 men charged with espionage conspiracy.

The statement, allegedly signed by Richard H. Kleiss, 45, veteran cook aboard United States liners and one of the defendants, was attested by FBI Agent Richard Johnson, who said he took it after Kleiss' arrest last June.

The statement said that after having been solicited late in 1939 by two unidentified persons in Genoa, Kleiss agreed to gather information on American naval building for Germany. He was then chief cook aboard the liner Manhattan.

In the statement he was quoted as saying he had procured blueprints of the United States liner America, which was then being converted into the troop transport West Point; details of the armament and performance of a fleet of 60-knot torpedo craft, and some details of the armor plating of aircraft carriers.

"It was understood that every man born in Germany had to do something for his mother country," said the statement.

This, the statement said, Kleiss did—first, sending his information through Paul Fehse, one of 18 who have pleaded guilty to the indictment, and later through William G. Sebold, who ostensibly was the head of a German spy ring here, but secretly was a counter-espionage agent of the FBI.

House Votes 400 Coastal Ships for Navy

The House quickly passed legislation yesterday to add 400 small coastal warships to the Navy and thus free the Atlantic and Pacific fleets for high seas action anywhere in the world.

The measure, approved by voice vote, authorizes the Navy to build or acquire and convert patrol boats, minesweepers and other small coastal craft costing not more than 300 million dollars.

Legislative corners were cut in pushing the measure through. Just a week ago, Secretary Knox asked passage of the bill, declaring that an "acute" shortage in patrol vessels was "seriously hampering" the establishment of adequate coastal naval forces.

The shortage in such craft, he added, has required the commanders of the Atlantic and Pacific fleets to weaken their forces by detaching vessels for coastal patrol work.

Moving quickly to remedy the situation, Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee opened hearings on the bill the following day and brought it to a House vote yesterday. It now goes to the Senate.

Naval officials testified that after all warships now building are ready there will still be a shortage of 452 patrol ships and 153 minesweepers. The 400 ships provided in the bill will take care of the most immediate needs for such vessels.

Gedney Composed At Murder Trial

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Oct. 15 (AP).—The first of three medical witnesses was called today in the trial of Ralph Gedney, Washington, D. C., engineer, charged with murdering his wife.

The witnesses were expected to testify in United States District Court concerning the condition of Mrs. Gedney's body after she was found dead in bed May 3.

Gedney, who pleaded innocent, contends his wife was killed by a fall. The prosecution, which is expected to continue two more days, charges that she was killed by an abdominal blow.

Gedney sat composed earlier while the chief of the police finger-print bureau identified a series of photographs of Mrs. Gedney taken in the bed in their penthouse apartment shortly after her death.

Costa Rican Senate Votes To Register Alien Ships

San Jose, Costa Rica, Oct. 15 (INS).—The Senate tonight approved legislation permitting foreign-owned merchant ships to adopt Costa Rican registry, thereby assuring final passage of the bill.

The measure will permit such ships to arm themselves for self-protection against Axis sea raiders.

Official spokesmen asserted that numerous applications for Costa Rican registry have been received, and that they would be approved immediately after final passage of the legislation.

12,038 Priests Oppose U. S. Entry in War

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 15.—The Catholic Laymen's Committee for peace announced today that 91½ per cent of 13,155 Roman Catholic clergymen replying to a questionnaire sent to 34,616 priests by the Official Catholic Directory voted against the United States entering a shooting war outside the Western Hemisphere. Of those questioned, 21,461 did not reply.

Opposition to aiding Soviet Russia was voted by 90.1 per cent.

The poll was conducted by the Catholic Laymen's Committee for Peace through the directory and replies were sent direct to a certified public accountant who tabulated the vote.

Two questions were asked of the 34,616 clergy on the mailing list.

"Do you favor the United States engaging in a shooting war outside the Western Hemisphere?"

Of the 13,155 replying, 12,036 said "No."

"Are you in favor of the United States aiding the communistic Russian government?"

To this 11,880 replied "No."

Cardinals, archbishops, bishops and Army and Navy chaplains were not polled.

Church Refuses To Recognize Poll

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Oct. 15.—Announcement by "The Catholic Laymen's Committee for Peace" of a Nation-wide poll of Roman Catholic clergy which drew replies overwhelmingly unfavorabe to American aid "to the communistic Russian government" and American participation in an Eastern Hemisphere shooting war, drew a statement from the Catholic chancery office of New York this afternoon that "we have no official knowledge of this committee, its poll, or its results."

"The committee has no official recognition by this diocese or by the church," said a chancery official. "No clergy names are connected with the committee at all. It is not an official Catholic organization."

The poll results were announced by William T. Leonard, secretary of the committee, who is also executive chairman of the Brooklyn chapter of the America First Committee. He said that since the tabulation was made 800 more answers were received and seemed to continue the same proportions.

Pope Pius Suspends Beatification Rites

Vatican City, Oct. 15 (AP).—An unofficial source said today that Pope Pius had suspended all beatification and canonization ceremonies until better times, partly because of the wartime shortage of candles and oil used in illuminating St. Peter's basilica for such rites.

Several beatification ceremonies were to have taken place this fall and canonizations set for next spring included that of Italian-American Mother Cabrini. The ceremonies cost several thousand dollars, largely for brilliant lighting of the immense basilica with candles and oil.

Norwegian Ship Captain Tells Of Daring Escape From Dakar

By the Associated Press

Boston, Oct. 15.—The daring escape of the Norwegian motorship Lidvard from Dakar to join the British was revealed here tonight by her skipper, who described French authorities in that African port as "worse than Nazis."

Capt. Nikoli Lindtner said that when France fell 40 foreign ships, nine of them Norwegian, were in Dakar. To prevent their escape, he said, French officials removed vital engine parts, and from the Lidvard took five heavy pipes.

Through a ruse, Lindtner said, the French were induced to return the parts to the Lidvard for a trial workout after being informed that it was necessary to keep the engines turning regularly to prevent damage from disuse.

During months of plotting escape, he related, Lindtner had made up imitation pipes and when armed French soldiers came to take away the originals after the trial spin they were given the fake ones.

Shortly after midnight on July 26, the Lidvard slipped her moorings and headed out to sea, he said. Her speed was slowed from 15 to 8 knots by accumulation of barnacles on the hull.

On coming to harbor nets which had trapped other vessels trying escape by jamming the propellor, Windtner continued, he ordered motors stopped and the Lidvard coasted over them to open water.

Stealthily the little motorship evaded detection by searchlights on shore and slipped unobserved past a 35,000-ton battleship and five destroyers on duty.

Her absence was not noticed, Lindtner said, until morning when two planes and two submarines set out in pursuit. The Lidvard hugged the shore toward the British African Port of Freetown, once encountering an armed trawler which fired but missed.

A radio message brought two British destroyers from the South Atlantic squadron and they escorted the Norwegian ship to a safe port.

Americans to Speed Burma Road Traffic

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Oct. 15.—American mechanics, terminal managers and other skilled trucking men will soon be at work on the Burma Road, helping to improve its efficiency as the supply route for China's imported war materials, Marco Hellman, one of the three truck transportation experts sent to China by the Government to reorganize traffic on the road for Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, declared here today.

Hellman said he and his two colleagues, who returned from China in September, were now working with the Army in selecting experienced trucking men to be sent to China under the lease-lend program, and "it should not be long before we will send groups over."

missioner, you're new, but some action must be taken immedately on this off-street parking problem."

Hebert—"Don't issue a permit for even one house without parking facilities."

Washington I. Cleveland, of the District American Automobile Association, rose in a corner of the room and said, "There was a hearing, but it didn't come to anything."

Representative Schulte declared: "There's been a vicious group here for too long. Their attitude is 'to hell with the public.' I hope, Mr. Commissioner, that you'll see that this matter of building permits is taken up today."

Back before the subcommittee came Waldo. Schmitt, National Museum employe, who last Tuesday suggested that railways embracing the city be linked by a subway from Twelfth Street and Maryland Avenue Southwest to Virginia Avenue and Rock Creek Park Northwest, thus virtually creating a commuters' belt line with the Federal Government and commercial center.

Asks Army Survey

He urged that Army engineers survey the subway plan immediately. Federal aid would probably make the railroads interested in connecting their service with a subway service, he said.

Charles E. Corcoran, of the Washington, Maryland and Virginia Bus Co., told the committee that his firm has had on order since last June 20 buses seating 36 passengers each, but due to defense priorities has not been able to obtain them yet.

Robert T. Mitchell, of the A. B. & W. Transit Co, and Henry Austin, president of the Bradbury Heights Citizens Association, also testified briefly

The hearings will continue at 10 a. m. today.

Zoning Board to Get Apartment-Garage Issue

Congressional threats to halt apartment house construction work here unless off-street parking facilities are provided in future buildings will be taken up later this month with the Zoning Commission, Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz said last night.

"The proposal, as I understand it," said Gen. Kutz, "would necessitate a changein our zoning regulations and I am not certain that is legally possible."

However, he said the apartment-garage suggestion—which came from Representative William Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, chairman of a special House subcommittee studying the traffic problem, was "very valuable and will be given immediate attention."

The Zoning Commission already has a similar proposal before it and considerable study of the question has been made, said Gen. Kutz. He added that he favored off-street parking spaces for "every single car in the city."

Jury Is Selected To Try Catoe

had been used up and the court had called two jurors on the civil court panel, the 11-man and one-woman jury was accepted as satisfactory by both the Government and the defense. Catoe's attorney, Walter M. Shea, exercised the defense's full quota of 20 peremptory challenges. United States Attorney Edward M. Curran and Assistant United States Attorney Fihelly used only one of the Government's 12 peremptory challenges.

As one of the jurors testified that he had a cold "which might get worse," Justice Morris ordered that a thirteenth alternate juror be selected. Twenty-one persons in succession were disqualified for this position because they stated their opposition to capital punishment, or said they had reached an opinion in the case.

Alternate Still Unselected

Justice Morris adjourned the trial at 4:30 p. m., with the alternate juror still unselected. After he or she is chosen this morning, the attorneys will give their opening statements, and the Government will present its first witnesses. Among those expected to take the stand today is Bernard Abramowitz, husband of Mrs. Rose Abramowitz, whom Catoe is charged with raping and strangling last March.

The courtroom was tense yesterday as Attorney Fihelly told the jurors of the charge against Catoe, that he "allegedly fastened his hands around the victim's neck and choked her in the perpetration of a rape." Outside the courtroom, more than 100 persons jammed the corridors, peering through the narrow glass panels in the court doors to get a glimpse of the defendant.

Catoe Acts Unconcerned

Catoe was silent in the courtroom, but when the marshal led him away at the beginning of the lunch recess he whistled loudly and tapped his foot in accompaniment. He was handcuffed to the marshal entering and leaving the courtroom. During the trial he sat free in front of the marshal, his hands clasped in his lap.

Jurors are Randolph G. Brady, 33, Government auditor, 100 Kennedy Street Northeast; Russell H. Clarvoe, 35, architect, 3336 Quesada Street Northwest; William E. Stansbury, 35, manager, 3285 Worthington Street Northwest; Harry N. Glasco, 35, auditor, 4105 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest; Miss Mary J. 'District Day' Set Monday

House District Day will be held next Monday, with half a dozen matters of District legislation due for consideration, the office of Chairman Jennings Randolph announced yesterday.

District Day, originally scheduled to be held last Monday, was postponed because of the death of Representative Lee E. Geyer (Democrat), of California.

The day was tentatively set for next Monday, but was not assured until a conference of floor leaders yesterday.

House Gets Ship Arming Bill

hour tomorrow before the bill is considered for amendments, likewise limited to section six.

Estimates of the House majority for passage ranged as high as 150, but bill managers said without taking a poll that a "safe" margin of over 100 would be registered.

Although the President and his Cabinet leaders have recommended repeal as well of section 2, to permit delivery of supplies direct to Allied ports, the House rule confines action now to arming ships.

1200 Ships to Be Armed

Bloom told the House Rules Committee anti-aircraft and other guns are available to do the job and work will start as soon as Congress acts. He said there are about 1200 ships to be armed and estimated it would take about three months.

The Foreign Affairs committee convened at 9 a.m. yesterday to vote out the bill. There was no further committee debate on the measure and no demand for a record vote. Representatives Fish and Tinkham boycotted the hearings because of the time limitation.

In reporting the bill, the committee majority confined its statements to excerpts from the President's recommendations and testimony by Secretaries Hull, Stimson and Knox, Admiral Stark, chief of naval operations, and Chairman Land of the Maritime Commission.

A "Dangerous Device"

The minority report signed by six committee Republicans charged the committee "suppressed" answers of the Cabinet witnesses under questioning. It asked recommittal to give the House "a full record of the facts."

The statement, released from the office of Representative Vorys, protested "piecemeal emasculation" of the Neutrality Act and recommended instead of arming ships "forthright and legal action of the President in making available our merchant vessels to Britain." Ship arming, it said, is "a futile, slow and dangerous device for aid to Britain."

LaGuardia Aide Studies Flying To Safeguard Sons

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Oct. 15.—Mrs. Ethel Steuer Epstein, labor secretary to Mayor LaGuardia, revealed today that she has been learning to fly an airplane in order to see whether flying was safe enough for her two sons to undertake.

Mrs. Epstein said that she has been taking lessons since August despite the objections of her husband, Henry Epstein, State solicitor general.

Mrs. Epstein, a daughter of the late Max D. Steuer, prominent New York attorney, said she has become quite proficient and can do "tailspins and things like that."

"My boys, Alan, who is 19, and Eric, 16, were learning to fly," she explained, "and I wanted to see if it was safe. Sort of 'try-it-on-the-dog,' you know."

facture of planes.

Hillman, speaking briefly after Fleet, made no direct reference to Fleet's statement, but said the Government would "give fair consideration to problems of both labor and management."

Company workers by an 82.5 per cent vote last Friday approved a compromise wage settlement with the firm. The plan boosts the beginners' scale from 55-65 cents an hour to 60-75 cents, and gives workers making more than 65 cents an hour a blanket 13-cent raise. Union officials estimated the workers would receive more than $600,000 in pay retroactive to August 9.

Fleet's statement that the raises on the basis of the present employment figure would cost the company 82 million dollars was the first estimate of the amount involved in the proposed contract, which has been approved by the Defense Mediation Board.

The company president complained that his firm had been threatened with two strikes in recent months.

Contending that aviation provided the only means of defeating Hitler and enforcing peace after the war, Fleet said the Government should "quit kicking the industry around, but give it encouragement."

In the presence of Army and Navy officers and Government officials, Fleet said the United States already was "in the war" and that it was only a question of how far the country would go.

cil business, but delegates saw the move as aimed at ousting Browne.

One of the eliminated posts was held by Second Vice President Thomas Rickert, who died last summer.

In addition to calling upon its affiliates to purge themselves of lawlessness, the convention urged the Government to put more labor men in responsible positions and then reelected President William Green to the post he has held since 1924.

The federation's antiracketeering resolution cited that its "autonomous national and international unions have deemed it wise to maintain the form and structure borrowed from the Federal Constitution," hence the A. F. L. cannot discipline them or their subordinates or members.

It said criminal prosecutions were a matter for the courts, but that "the millions of men and women who belong to trade unions will not tolerate the racketeer, the gangster and the criminal in their midst. They will eliminate him."

It therefore "calls upon all national and international unions to . . . amend their constitutions . . . if necessary, so that prompt and diligent action may be taken against locals, officers and members who are guilty of offenses against the public laws and the laws of the national or international union."

It also "calls upon its affiliates to take prompt action whenever racketeering, wrongdoing or other crime is engaged in by any of its officers or members, which tends to bring dishonor on the trade union."

Other resolutions adopted included the sleeping-car porters' measure to put the federation on record against the poll tax, which disfranchises large numbers of workers, and the same brotherhood's proposal to indorse President Roosevelt's fair employment practices committee in its campaign against discrimination.

Unanimous approval also was given resolutions supporting the Administration's foreign policy; recommending the voluntary pay-roll allotments, inaugurated by some unionists as a means of buying national defense bonds; favoring citizenship for Filipino employes of the United States Government (this was particularly in behalf of Chicago postoffice clerks), and opposing the Congressional move to tax labor organizations.

Frank X. Martel, president of the Detroit and Wayne County (Mich.) Federation of Labor, called on the federation for "a public expose of the Postoffice Department 'Gestapo' and the unreasonable trade union actions postoffice officials take against employes."

He complained that "the labor system inaugurated in the Postoffice Department was similar to the automobile factory conveyor line.

"And while Uncle Sam is grouse-eating—and I'm glad he is—in Detroit 200 substitute clerks are working seven hours a day, at 20 cents an hour less than the prevailing scale, and the only way they can get a day off is to feign sickness.

"And when their delegates go to Washington and ask for more clerks, they are threatened by Postoffice Department officials with being run out of the service . . ."

representing the employers.

In preparation for the task, the board has already taken measures for carrying out the new law, and will seek from the District Commissioners an appropriation of $15,000 as authorized by the bill.

Walker, a member of the board, is also a member of the Central Labor Union, and with Willy Arnheim, construction laborers' leader, were instrumental in obtaining passage of the bill.

A second bill approved by the President, the White House stated, allows District municipal workers to testify as witnesses in Federal court cases without loss of pay or annual leave. Similarly, Federal employes will be enabled to be called as witnesses in District cases without losing vacation time or salary.

The bill introduced into Congress because both the office of the District corporation counsel and of the Federal district attorney found witnesses reluctant to testify, since they were docked, in either time or wages.

Al Smith Calls for Unity Behind the President

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith today called for national unity behind President Roosevelt's foreign policy and urged Government and labor "to adjourn politics" in interest of that unity. He spoke to a luncheon of the New York Athletic Club.

Duke Praises Spirit of British Sea Heroes

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 15.—To four British seamen who collectively have had seven ships shot from under them the Duke of Windsor declared today that "they can sink our ships, but they can't break our spirits."

"Men like you will go on fighting, no matter what the odds," the duke asserted during the last of three visits on a tour of war relief agencies.

During the brief call with his duchess at the British Seamen's Institute, the former king chatted with veterans who had seen him on World War battlefields, with boyish cadets, with marines of merchantmen gun crews and with seamen from vessels in Baltimore for repairs.

The duke, after asking some of the men at the Seamen's Institute how they like America and Americans, said in a loud voice:

"I'm glad they're giving us the great backing that they are today."

Several thousand people, lined along both curbings and up the hallway to the Equitable Trust Building, jammed in around the limousine so that it took police about five minutes to clear a path to the office.

For a half hour the Windsors asked questions after questions and talked to donors and those waiting for appointments.

Another stop was at headquarters of the British War Relief Society.

Before they left they signed the register. The duchess wrote "Wallis Windsor" and the duke simply "Edward."

From their informal tour the duke went to the Maryland Club to lunch, while the duchess returned to Salona Farms, home of their hosts.

Tomorrow the royal couple will motor to Annapolis, where they will be honored guests at a luncheon at Government House, then make an informal tour of the Naval Academy before returning to Baltimore for the last night of their visit.

Car Care

What Causes Wear on Your Spark Plugs?

By ED CARL

In the spark plugs of your car the spark fires about 12,000 times a minute. The small electrodes between which the spark fires are essential parts of the plug and the constant explosions burn out the electrodes or force them gradually out of position. This cuts down power, pick-up and gas mileage. Before bad weather sets in have a Call Carl check-up. If your plugs need cleaning adjusting or replacing.

Windsor's 1924 'Bread and Butter' Message To Coolidges Hides Fact Prince Was Jittery

Expresses Sincere Thanks for Real Warmth of Greeting

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

A letter written by the Duke of Windsor (then the Prince of Wales) to President Calvin Coolidge came to light here yesterday. It is a bread-and-butter, or thank-you, note which the future King Edward VIII wrote after the Coolidges gave a White House luncheon for him in 1924.

Ike Hoover, for many years chief usher at the White House, later related that, although "Silent Cal" talked like a chatterbox in an effort to entertain his royal guest, the Prince was clearly ill at ease. However, the ensuing letter of thanks gave no hint of this. The Prince expressed his sincere thanks for the "real warmth of the informal welcome and hospitality which you gave me. . . ."

In Pen and Ink

The letter was written by the Prince with pen and ink in a bold, masculine hand. He used no punctuation except dashes. In place of the word "and" he used a mark corresponding to &. At one point he left out a word, but went back and, using a proof-reader's mark, inserted the word.

The letter, along with many other papers, was acquired by Charles Kohen, owner of the Hobby Shop, 716 Seventeenth Street Northwest, from the estate of the late E. T. Clark, who was a White House secretary in the Coolidge Administration.

The paper on which the Prince wrote the letter bore an ovel crest in the center of which appeared the letter E. At the top, in small type were the German words, Ich Dien (I serve). Around the crest were the French words Honi soit qui mal y pense. This is the motto of the Order of the Garter—"Evil to him who evil thinks."

Letter Verbatim

The Prince wrote the letter from Syosset, Long Island, on September 2, 1924. It follows:

"Dear Mr. President:

"I should like to tell you what a real pleasure it was to meet you and Mrs. Coolidge at the White House last Saturday. I enjoyed my short visit to Washington very much indeed and I have to thank you sincerely for the real warmth of the informal welcome and hospitality which you gave me.

"Knowing how busy you are just now I appreciate all the more your giving up so much time to our personal talk.

"I am very happy to be back in your great country again & am much looking forward to my stay over here. With my kindest regards to yourself and Mrs. Coolidge believe me.

Yours very sincerely
Edward P."

The young man who wrote that and a subsequent Christmas card to the Coolidges is coming back to Washington again tomorrow, along with the American-born duchess for whom he gave up the throne of England, the former Wallis Warfield. They are to be the luncheon guests of Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, at the British Embassy at 1:15 p. m. On their way here from Timonium, Md., they are expected to inspect to CCC camps, one at Beltsville, Md., and the other in Rock Creek Park.

Charles Kohen (top), curio collector, examines the letter, which says, in part, "With my kindest regards to yourself and Mrs. Coolidge believe me. Yours very sincerely. Edward P."

Lincoln Circle Tunnel Plan To Be Studied

The feasibility of a tunnel below Lincoln Memorial Circle whose chief purpose would be to accommodate buses transporting Federal workers to and from the proposed War Department building in nearby Virginia will be discussed tomorrow.

National Capital Park and Planning Commission members and staff experts will debate the plan before winding up the agency's two-day October meeting, which opens this morning in the new Interior Building.

As a preliminary, the commission will make an inspection tour this afternoon of the site of the 31-million-dollar War building at Columbia Pike and U. S. No. 1. Chairman Frederic A. Delano will lead the party.

Other highway-bridge proposals incidental to servicing of the huge structure, which will house 20,000 employes, to be taken up tomorrow include:

Extension of Independence Avenue westward from Fourteenth Street to the Potomac River.

Construction of a Georgetown bypass connecting with Key Bridge.

Construction of a bridge across the Potomac from the foot of New Hampshire Avenue, a project which has Arlington County backing.

A highway plan, still in the blueprint stage, to provide access to and from the War building.

Other matters which the commission will consider at the monthly session include a site for a new playground in the Northwest section, further land acquisition in Maryland for the George Washington Memorial Parkway, extension of the Alley Dwelling Authority and defense housing programs and the proposed addition to the Washington Airport Terminal Building.

The commission also will pass on plans to rebuild Railroad Bridge, strengthening its foundation and replacing the trusses with girder construction.

Man Hangs Self With Shoestring In D. C. Cell

A shoestring looped over a crossbar and tied around his neck, a 35-year-old prisoner was found dead at 5:45 p. m. yesterday in a cell at the Second Precinct Police Station.

The man, John W. Shaeffer, an unemployed salesman, had been arrested 4½ hours earlier on a drunk charge. He lived with an aunt, Mrs. C. W. Rowzee, of 1423 R Street Northwest, who said he had been in ill health for some time.

The body was discovered hanging from the crossbar by Page Robinson, station clerk, who said the cell block had been unattended for 15 minutes while the turnkey, Charles Stello, went on a patrol wagon call. Regulations stipulate that cells be inspected every half hour.

Shaeffer was alone in the cell. The shoestring had been taken from one of his shoes.

10-Fold Rise in Film Sales Linked to Bioff Influence

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 15.—A Los Angeles representative of the duPont Film Manufacturing Corporation testified today that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film purchases from his agency increased from $10,000 to $100,000 a month after William Bioff West Coast labor leader, arrived in Hollywood in 1937.

The witness, John Wesley Smith, of the firm of Smith & Aller, Ltd., appeared at the trial of Bioff and George E. Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes (A. F. of L.), on charges of extorting $550,000 from four major film companies.

Smith said that after negotiations with Louis B. Mayer, M-G-M studio manager, he employed Bioff's brother-in-law, Norman G. Nelson, as a salesman to handle the M-G-M account.

"What did he do?" asked Federal Judge John C. Knox.

"He came in about once a week," Smith replied, adding that orders for raw film were telephoned to him by the M-G-M purchasing agent. Smith then identified three bundles of checks, dated from July 3, 1937, to January 14, 1939, totaling $77,448, and said they represented sums paid to Nelson.

In previous testimony, Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Incorporated, asserted that after paying Bioff $100,000 for 1936 and 1937, he arranged to have a raw film selling subagency created to handle the M-G-M account, with the commissions to go to Bioff. Schenck testified yesterday that because of fear of "strikes and other things" he did not report the alleged extortion demands to officials.

Mayer and Nicholas Nayfack, Schenck's nephew and an M.-G.-M. executive, earlier today corroborated Schenck's testimony with respect to the subagency, and said that a 7 per cent commission was arranged for the subagent, Nelson.

Nelson, who described himself as a contracting mason from Chicago, followed Smith on the witness stand. He said that in June of 1937, while he was unemployed, Bioff called him to California.

When he and his wife, Bioff's sister, arrived in Los Angeles, Bioff explained that M.-G.-M. owed Bioff some money, Nelson testified. Bioff declared, the witness continued, that the commission arrangement had been made to pay off the debt.

Nelson said commission checks totaling $77,448 were paid him during his service as subagent, that he deposited the money in a savings account and turned over cash totaling $55,820 to Bioff. He said his salary was $125 a week and that he made out income tax returns for the full amount of the commissions paid him because "Bioff told me to do so."

Berlin Diary

By WILLIAM L. SHIRER

Journal of a Foreign Correspondent, 1934-1941

(Here's the book everyone is talking about. It has broken all records of its publisher, Alfred A. Knopf, and tops all best-sellers.)

INSTALMENT IV

Munich and After

(September, 1938—April, 1939)

MUNICH, September 30, 1938.—It's all over. At 12:30 this morning, Hitler, Mussolini, Chamberlain and Daladier signed a pact turning over Sudetenland to Germany. The German occupation begins tomorrow, Saturday, October 1, and will be completed by October 10. Thus Hitler gets everything he wanted, except that he has to wait a few days longer for ALL of it. His waiting ten short days has saved the peace of Europe—a curious commentary on this sick, decadent continent.

SHIRER

So far as I've been able to observe during these last, strangely unreal 24 hours, Daladier and Chamberlain never pressed for a single concession from Hitler. They never got together alone once. Hitler met Mussolini early yesterday morning at Kufstein and they made their plans. Daladier and Chamberlain arrived by separate planes and didn't even deem it useful to lunch together yesterday to map out their strategy.

Czecho-Slovakia, which is asked to make all the sacrifices so that Europe may have peace, was not consulted. Their two representatives were told at 1:30 a. m. that Czecho-Slovakia would HAVE to accept, told not by Hitler, but by Chamberlain and Daladier!

Chamberlain, looking more than ever like some bird, seemed particularly pleased with himself when he returned to the Regina Palace Hotel after the signing early this morning, though he was a bit sleepy, PLEASANTLY sleepy.

Daladier, on the other hand, looked a completely beaten and broken man. He came over to the Regina to say goodbye to Chamberlain. A bunch of us were waiting as he came down the stairs. He turned as if to say something, but he was too tired and defeated. He stumbled out the door in silence. The French say he fears to return to Paris, thinks a hostile mob will get him.

How different Hitler at 2 this morning! After being blocked from the Fuehrerhaus all evening, I finally broke in just as he was leaving. Followed by Goering, Ribbentrop, Goebbels, Hess and Keitel, he brushed past me like the conqueror he is this morning. I noticed his swagger. The tic was gone! As for Mussolini, he pulled out early, cocky as a rooster.

(Later)—Chamberlain, apparently realizing his diplomatic annihilation, has pulled a very clever face-saving stunt. He saw Hitler again this morning before leaving and afterwards a joint communique was issued. Essential part: "We regard the agreement signed last night and the Anglo-German naval accord as symbolic of the desire of our two peoples never to go to war with one another again."

PARIS, October 8.—Paris a frightful place, completely surrendered to defeatism with no inkling of what has happened to FRANCE. Fat bankers and businessmen toasting Peace with rivers of champagne. But even the waiters, taxi-drivers, who used to be sound, gushing about how wonderful it is that war has been avoided, that it would have been a crime, that they fought in one war and that was enough. That would be okay if the Germans, who also fought in one war, felt the same way, but they don't. The guts of France—France of the Marne and Verdun—where are they?

Ed Murrow as gloomy as I am. We agree on these things: that war is now more probable than ever, that it is likely to come after the next harvest, that Poland is obviously next on Hitler's list (the blind stupidity of the Poles in this crisis, helping to carve up Czecho-Slovakia!).

ROME, March 9, 1939—A storm brewing in what is left of poor Czecho-Slovakia. Dr. Hacha, the weak little President—successor to the great Masaryk and the able Benes—has proclaimed martial law in Slovakia.

GENEVA, March 14—The radio reports Slovakia has declared its "independence." There goes the remains of Czecho-Slovakia. The radio say Hacha arrived in Berlin tonight. To save the pieces?

PARIS, March 15—The German army has occupied Bohemia and Moravia on this blizzardy day of spring, and Hitler in Prague has proclaimed their annexation to the Third Reich.

Complete apathy in Paris tonight about Hitler's latest coup. France will not move a finger. Ed Murrow telephones that the reaction in London is the same—that Chamberlain in Commons this afternoon even went so far as to say he refused to associate himself with any charges of a breach of faith by Hitler. Good God!

PARIS, March 22.—Someone—I think it was Pertinax, who is just back from London—told me yesterday a weird tale of how Chamberlain suddenly reversed his whole position last Friday in his Birmingham speech. Two days before, he had told Commons that he would not charge Hitler with bad faith. In Birmingham he severely denounced Hitler for "treaty-breaking." Pertinax says that Sir Horace Wilson had actually drafted the Birmingham speech for the prime minister along the appeasement lines, but that half the cabinet and most of the leading London newspaper editors were so up in arms when they heard of it that Chamberlain suddenly felt forced to reverse his whole policy and actually wrote most of his new speech on the train en route to Birmingham.

BERLIN, April 1—Hitler very bellicose today (in a speech at Wilhelmshaven), obviously in a rage against Chamberlain, who in the House yesterday enunciated at last a complete change in British foreign policy and announced that Britain would go to the aid of Poland if Polish independence were threatened. Off to Warsaw tomorrow to see when the German attack is expected.

WARSAW, April 2—Attended a pitiful air-show this Sunday afternoon, my Polish friends apologizing for the cumbersome slow bombers and the double-decker fighters—all obsolete. They showed a half-dozen modern fighters that looked fast enough, but that was all. How can Poland fight Germany with such an air force?

WARSAW, April 6—Beck has been in London and tonight we have an Anglo-Polish communique announcing that the two countries will sign a permanent agreement providing for mutual assistance in case of an attack on either of them by a third power. I think this will halt Hitler for the time being since force is something he understands and respects and there is no doubt in my mind after a week here that the Poles will fight and that if Britain and France fight too, he is in a hole.

I feel uneasy about three things only: Poland's terrible strategic position since Germany (with Poland's help and encouragement) moved her army into the Protectorate and Slovakia, thus flanking this country on the south (it is already flanked on the north by East Prussia); the West Wall, which, when completed next winter, will discourage France and Britain from attacking Germany in the west and thereby aiding Poland; and, finally, Russia.

BERLIN, April 28.—Hitler in the Reichstag today denounced a couple more treaties. He denounces the naval accord with Britain on the grounds that London's "encirclement policy" has put it out of force—a flimsy excuse. The second treaty denounced, the 1934 pact with Poland, is more serious, the excuse, incidentally, being the same.

Hitler in his speech reveals the content of his "offer" to Poland: Danzig to be returned to Germany, and the Reich given an extraterritorial road through the corridor to East Prussia. To scare the Poles he says the offer was made "only once." That is, his terms are higher today. Still much doubt here among the informed whether Hitler has made up his mind to begin a World War for the sake of Danzig. My guess is he hopes to get it by the Munich method.

Signing of Pact With Argentina

Associated Press RADIOPHOTO

AS TRADE TREATY WAS SIGNED—United States Ambassador Norman Armour (left) and Argentine Foreign Minister Ruiz Guinazu sign reciprocal trade agreement in Buenos Aires. The pact, hailed as a major victory for the Administration's Good Neighbor Policy, was made Tuesday night

U. S.-Argentina Trade Pact Is Assailed in Both Houses

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, last night declared he "doubted" whether the new United States-Argentina trade pact" is more than a gesture," as legislators on both sides of the Capitol began to react, unfavorably for the most part, to the treaty's terms.

"I think it is impossible to judge the effect because international trade is utterly upset," O'Mahoney said. "In such turbulent times as these, no very sound analysis can be made of the probable effect of tariff alterations."

In the House, the pact revived demands for revision of the reciprocal trade treaty act to require ratification of agreements by the Senate.

At the same time, Argentine merchant marine officials hastened negotiations for the purchase of four Danish refrigeration ships in order to take advantage of an expected increase in trade with the United States, the Associated Press reported. The ships had taken refuge in Buenos Aires because of the war.

Representative Coffee (Democrat), of Nebraska, told the House that since Congress has delegated reciprocal treaty-making authority to the executive branch of the Government, the protests by members of Congress against these tariff reductions have been futile."

The Argentine agreement, said Coffee, is further evidence of legislation requiring Senate ratification.

The treaty was denounced by Representative Andresen (Republican), of Minnesota, as a "foul and fatal blow" to the American farmer.

"The President has sacrificed his fellow-American farmers on the altar of his so-called 'peace,'" Andresen declared in a House speech.

Senator Ball (Republican), of Minnesota, declared that "however wise the Argentine trade treaty may be from a foreign policy angle," Minnesota and Midwest farmers would suffer ultimately.

The Administration has been trying to relieve the farmer for eight years, declared Representative Reed (Republican), of New York, and "just as a glimmer of hope was beginning to show the Administration makes this trade agreement with Argentina." Reed called the pact a "direct blow to the farmer."

Steagall Insists Price Controls Apply to Rents

By Robert De Vore

Post Staff Writer

Some form of price legislation can be expected to be reported out of the House Banking Committee in the next few weeks, Representative Steagall Democrat), of Alabama, committee chairman, declared yesterday, insisting at the same time that any inflation-control bill should "apply to rents everywhere."

When Isador Lubin, Commissioner of Labor Statistics, told the committee hearing that "thus far the rent problem has not become acute in many areas of the country," Steagall countered

"I am wondering if you are aware of rents in Washington? Have you heard of anyone who could find space here?"

Steagall gave assurances of an early closing of more than six weeks of hearings on an Administration-sponsored price measure when he told reporters that the committee would meet in executive session Monday "and set a definite date at which we will take this bill under consideration for amendments."

Speed Is Urged

Earlier, other committee members clearly demonstrated anxiety to report out a price bill, and at an early date.

Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, who on several occasions has objected to prolonging hearings, declared:

"I think we should report out a bill at once to control prices of critical materials going into national defense, such as copper, aluminum and steel, and then, if necessary, consider another bill later."

Representative Thomas Ford (Democrat), of California, told the committee that inclusion of wage controls in a price bill will only "achieve one result: "You're just not going to have any bill that will pass the House; we've got to stop this inflation."

Lubin's testimony brought from Patman an admission that the witness had changed the legislator's mind, that he has now discarded an early opinion "that wages should be in any bill."

Patman added, however, that there was no telling how long his mind would stay changed and at the close of the day's proceeding announced he had withdrawn his motion for an executive session today in order to give Lubin more time to debate with Representativee Gore (Democrat), of Tennessee, on the Administration bill as compared with Gore's bill which proposes ceilings for wages as well as prices.

Gore accused Lubin of coming before the committee with a "negative attitude" when the economist admitted that he has not read the Gore bill which embodies the "universal ceiling" proposals of Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the World War Industries Board.

Lubin denied prejudice, saying he had merely brought the committee a set of facts which show that industrial prices went up without corresponding wage increases. Gore said he wondered if Lubin had made any attempt to solve the problem of wage control, sent a copy of his bill to the witness table and read with Lubin the wage provisions.

"As I read this bill," declared Lubin, "you are saying to General Motors that if they are paying a man $1 in Buffalo they will have to raise the pay of a man doing similar work in Toledo.

Gore countered that instances of one company paying different wage scales in plants in different localities are "rare." Lubin replied that big corporations, employing 83 per cent of industrial workers, have plants scattered all over the Nation."

Settlement Appears Nearer In Plane Parts Factory Strike

The Defense Mediation Board appeared yesterday for the first time to be progressing toward settlement of one of the defense program's most troublesome strikes, involving Air Associates, Inc., vital aircraft parts factory at Bendix, N. J.

Deliberations, which were thought to be bearing fruit, were conducted with the company's board of directors. Company president F. LeRoy Hill, who last week walked out on the mediation agency, was not present.

The board was informed that a strike at two factories which had paralyzed production of 70 per cent of the transmissions for tanks and combat vehicles had been terminated. In response to the board's request, C. I. O. auto workers at the Spicer Manufacturing Corporation, Toledo, and its subsidiary at Hillsdale, Mich., declared they would return to their jobs, pending board consideration of a dispute involving a rival A. F. of L. union at the Hillsdale plant.

Two New Disputes Certified

Other labor developments yesterday included the certification to the board of two new disputes—a threatened strike at the John E. Roebling Sons, Trenton, N. J., plant, and the three-day strike at the Ingalls Shipbuilding Co., Pascagoula, Miss.—and the inauguration of a dues-picketing campaign which may threaten production of the world's largest steel mill, at Gary, Ind.

Yesterday, it was learned, the board stepped into the role of employe-relations counsel, and "informally" recommended to the Air Associates directors that a personnel officer with full power be installed, to take over the problem. Previously, the mediation board chairman of the panel considering the case, Dr. Frank Graham, had publicly declared that Hill was "doing too much work."

The company directors promised the board to give prompt reply to the recommendation that all strikers be immediately reinstated, and were said to be sympathetic to the idea of appointing a labor-relations expert to carry on negotiations.

In both the new cases certified to the board, Chairman William H. Davis telegraphed a request for continued operations to the unions and managements involved.

In the shipyard strike, where 500 welders are seeking independent recognition, distinct from that given to 3000 A. F. of L. boilermakers. Davis asked that the strikers go back to work on about 150 million dollars of Naval and Maritime Commission contracts.

In the Roebling case, where the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen threatened to call a strike last night that might render 8300 employes idle, Davis asked a postponement of action that might aggravate the situation. The company holds contracts for aircraft and other military parts.

The labor threat at the Gary steel mill followed the establishment of a picket line by C. I. O. steel workers, who were instructed not to permit entrance to anyone who failed to show a paid up union card. However, nonunion employes were allowed to enter and there was no violence. The union's sole purpose is the establishment of a closed shop. More than 22,000 men are employed at the plant, owned by the Carnegie Illinois Steel Corp., a subsidiary of United States Steel.

Funeral Services For Rep. Pheiffer's Mother Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Susan Pheiffer, 70, mother of Representative William T. Pheiffer, of New York, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at the Hysong funeral home, 1300 N Street Northwest. The body will be cremated, with burial later in Rock Creke Cemetery.

Mrs. Pheiffer died of a heart attack Monday in her son's New York City apartment. Last June she left Emergency Hospital here after spending seven months there undergoing treatment. She spent the summer at the seashore and last month visited New York for a checkup on her physical condition.

She was born in New Orleans and was the wife of Judge William Pheiffer, who at the time of their marriage was on the Federal bench in Indian Territory, later to become Oklahoma. Mrs. Pheiffer was a member of the Unitarian Church, of the American League of Pen Women and active in Young Women's Christian Association work.

U. S. to Seize Metals, Some Axis Property

By the Associated Press

The Senate Defense Investigating Committee heard yesterday that the Government was preparing to move speedily to take over large stocks of critical defense metals—some of them "undoubtedly" owned by Axis citizens—in this country.

Donald M. Nelson, OPM priorities director, told the Senate Defense Investigating Committee that machinery now was being set up for the seizure of idle stocks of copper and other metals under a bill recently signed by President Roosevelt.

He said an OPM investigation of inventories had disclosed an instance where 1,378,000 pounds of copper had been stored in warehouses since 1938. He said there was no doubt that some of the metal thus kept out of ordinary channels of industry was "owned by the Axis powers."

Under the new property requisitioning law, the witness explained, the Government will attempt to purchase these metal stocks at fair prices. Failing that, the metal will be seized and payment fixed by the Government, subject to subsequent courtof appeal.

Pledges "No Delay"

"There will be no delay," Nelson said in response to questions by Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York. "We know where these stocks are and we can go get them at once."

Nelson told the committee that there was a prospective copper shortage reaching well into 1943, and that steel uses also will have to be curtailed.

"The defense program has reached a point now where combined military and civilian demand have come to exceed available supplies of a fairly large list of metals and other materials, such as cork, rubber and rayon," Nelson testified.

He said that preference ratings by which the use of supplies had been controlled had not proved sufficiently effective, adding that the OPM was working out an allocation program which it hoped would do the job.

In response to a question, Nelson declared that "bootlegging is going on" in critical materials but that the supply priorities and allocations board, of which he is executive director, was seeking to prevent it.

A check now is being made of 1900 aluminum foundries, he testified, to ascertain whether there is bootlegging in that metal.

Hugh A. Fulton, committee counsel, recalled that Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War, had testified several months ago that 15 per cent of the Nation's productive capacity was devoted to defense. He asked Nelson what the percentage was now.

In reply, Nelson estimated that about 20 per cent of capacity presently was devoted to defense, with the percentage rising toward an expected 27 or 30 per cent. "I hope it gets up even higher," he added.

Nelson said he planned to create soon an appeal board, headed by someone in whom the public had confidence, to hear protests from businessmen who thought there had been injustice or discrimination in establishment of priorities and also a "hardship committee" to deal with special cases.

High Caloric Pills on Army Special Ration

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 15.—The Army went into the market today to buy ingredients for 6000 units of the new experimental "vest pocket" ration for parachute and other troops operating far from their bases.

The "para-ration" is one day's supply of concentrated food for a soldier. Each of the three meals is packed in a cardboard carton 6½ inches long, 3¼ inches wide and 1¼ inches thick. Together they weigh only 32.86 ounces but provide 3726 calories. The packages can be stuffed into pockets or knapsacks.

The rations were developed at the Chicago quartermaster depot's subsistence research laboratory under the direction of Lieut. Col. R. A. Isker and with the assistance of Dr. Ancel Keys, of the University of Minnesota Medical School.

Preliminary tests were conducted last August at Fort Snelling, Minn.

The units will be prepared here and sent out for exhaustive field trials by parachute troops at Fort Benning, Ga., by armored forces at Fort Knox, Ky., and by infantry men at Fort Snelling.

The menus follow:

Breakfast: Pemmican and graham biscuits, 15 modified malted milk tablets, canned veal loaf, two packages of soluble coffee, four cubes of sugar, two pellets of gum.

Dinner: Pemmican and graham biscuits, 15 dextrose tablets (similar to German "courage pills"), canned luncheon meat, one tube of bouillon, one stick of gum.

Supper: Pemmican and graham biscuits, canned cervelat sausage, a bar of chocolate and flour known as "D" ration, two pellets of lemon powder (for lemonade), four cubes of sugar, two pellets of gum.

Officials said the gum would aid digestion and cleanse the teeth and mouth.

28% of Selects Made Officers In Their 1st Year

Advancement to the rank of commissioned or noncommissioned officer is in prospect for 28 per cent of all selectees in their first year of training, William E. Leahy, District director of selective service, was informed yesterday.

On the basis of War Department reports, Leahy pointed out, an additional large number of selectees who remain privates throughout their first 12 months of training will attain specialist ratings and substantial pay increases.

The War Department estimates, Director Leahy asserted, that out of each 1000 men 276, or approximately 28 per cent, may reach commissioned, warrant officer or noncommissioned grades; 307 or approximately 31 per cent may reach the grade of first-class private with increased pay, which leaves 417 out of the thousand as privates, many of whom will receive specialist ratings and pay increases. Increased base pay for specialist ratings is over and above the $10 a month additional pay for selectees serving more than one year.

Navy Ready to Arm Merchant Ships, Man Guns, Knox Says

Secretary Knox said yesterday that the Navy is ready to put guns and gun crews on American merchant ships as fast as they come into port, once Congress modifies the Neutrality Act.

Some weeks ago Knox said it was doubtful whether there were enough guns on hand to equip all merchantmen. Yesterday, however, he announced that it had been found that the guns will be available as fast as the ships "come to us," pointing out that all of them "can't be taken off the sea at once."

The Navy chief declared that arming the vessels would have a great effect in protecting American ships from attacks by U-boats and planes. The arming of British merchantmen, he stated, has had "a profound influence on operations of both the submarine and air forces of Germany."

When attacking an unarmed ship, he explained, U-boats come to the surface and sink them with gun fire. Submarines traveling on the surface are faster than most merchantmen and can carry liberal supplies of ammunition.

But, he added, a submarine must submerge to sink an armed vessel, an action which not only cuts its speed below that of its intended victim but forces it to use one of its limited supply of torpedoes.

The presence of antiaircraft guns on merchantmen, Knox continued, keeps enemy planes at higher altitudes where it is difficult to make bomb hits. Many German planes have been brought down during the war by British merchant ship gun crews, he added.

Knox was asked by reporters if arming merchant vessels did not subject them to attack under international law.

"Yes, it does," he replied, "but what we're dealing with now is utterly illegal warfare. It is sheer piracy."

Expects Reds to Hold

Discussing the Russian war, Secretary Knox said he looked for the Red army to hold out through the winter and predicted the German advance will slow down. American supplies to the Soviet are "moving along" on schedule to Vladivostok without Japanese interference, he stated.

The Navy chief said British troops in Iran will soon go into the U. S. S. R. and should be able to safeguard a considerable portion of the Caucasian oil fields from capture.

Knox said patrol forces of the Atlantic Fleet are keeping a close surveillance over the Greenland coasts to prevent any further Nazi radio stations from being set up there. The station seized last month by the Navy was "well equipped," with provisions to last through the winter and with power enough to radio weather or other military information to the European continent or to German raiders at sea, he asserted.

Censorship Planned

Seizure of the radio station has stimulated Government plans for complete control of overseas communications, and later in the day Knox announced that plans for such censorship are "well under way."

Personnel are being trained for the work, he declared, adding that the "actual censorship" of overseas communications probably will not begin for some time.

Picked Men of 29th Reach West Point

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 15 (AP).—A group of 59 selected enlisted men of the Twenty-ninth Infantry arrived by train today, from Fort Benning, Ga., to form the United States Military Academy's First Infantry detachment.

Maj. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, superintendent of West Point, and Capt. James L. Richardson, commanding officer of the Infantry detachment, greeted the soldiers. The U. S. M. A. band also took part in the ceremonies.

Chief mission of the new unit, which soon will be enlarged, is to demonstrate to cadets the use of Infantry weapons and equipment.

Farm Tenants Ask Fixed Pay, Hit Child Labor

By the Associated Press

Six representatives of the Southern Tenant Farmers Union appealed to Congress today to fix minimum wages for all farm laborers and ban child labor in agriculture.

The six men, weary from riding all night in an automobile to testify before a Senate labor subcommittee, supported a bill by Senator Lander (Republican), of North Dakota), which would deny farm benefits, subsidies and loans to farmers who employed child labor or failed to pay minimum wage scales fixed by the Secretary of Agriculture after public hearings.

J. R. Butler, president of the Tenant Union, testified that machine farming had expanded greatly in recent years with the result that thousands of tenants and sharecroppers had been forced off cotton farms and reduced to the status of day laborers with work available only a few months each season.

J. E. Clayton, 63-year-old principal of a Negro school at Littig, Tex., said reduced acreage and farm tractors were making it impossible for thousands of small farmers to make a living.

"These people drift into towns and cities," he said, "and soon mix with crooks and gangsters. The Southern Negro is happy on the farm and he'll stay there if he can make a living. We can make a better living down South by accident that we can up North by hard work."

29th Praised For Holding Superior Force

By Marshall Andrews

Post Staff Correspondent

Wadesboro, N. C., Oct. 15.—Still full of fight after 36 hours of holding off a greatly superior enemy, the Twenty-ninth Infantry Division was in such excellent shape when battle opened this morning that the battle was ended by Second Army Corps at 8 a. m.

The Twenty-ninth, commanded by Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, immediately began moving into new positions for the next problem which will begin tonight at dusk. Its troops and trains were on the road today, moving northwestward toward Travis, N. C., where they will switch again from Red to Blue forces and continue fighting Maj. Gen. Edward Martin's Twenty-eighth Division which, in turn, has become part of the Red force.

Despite the fact that it was faced by the Twenty-eighth Division on its front and the Forty-fourth swinging around to envelop its left flank, the Twenty-ninth this morning still clung to the defensive position it established at the beginning of the exercises Monday night. Two other strong positions were prepared to which it might fall back as pressure from the north became overwhelming.

"I was convinced," said Maj. Gen. Lloyd R. Fredendall, Second Corps commander, "that the Twenty-ninth would have accomplished its mission, so I called off the problem."

Aggressiveness Cited

The division's mission was to detain the advancing Blue Army north of the Pee Dee bridge east of Cheraw, S. C., the town of Cheraw itself and roads to the westward until nightfall today. Umpires attributed its success partly to its own aggressiveness in carrying the battle to the heavier Blues and partly to the slowness of the Blue Twenty-eighth Division in getting into position and finding and fighting the Twenty-ninth.

"Gen. Reckord was in there fighting every minute," Gen. Fredendall said. "He used everything he had."

To the troops in the Twenty-ninth's long and attenuated line the battle became almost too real at times. Once a company of the 175th Infantry found itself so hard pressed and so short of men to plug the gaps in its front that cooks, K. P.'s and truck drivers were thown into the line. The District's 121st Engineers were fighting as infantry almost constantly until corps last night turned over the 112th Infantry to the Twenty-ninth.

At one time, troopers of the 104th Cavalry delivered a mounted charge in the old style against a company of Maryland infantry, handling the foot soldiers none too gently. That ended when the infantry, put out of temper by this treatment, began hauling the troopers from their saddles and settling the matter with fists. Umpires halted the melee by declaring the cavalrymen captured.

Blackout March

Tonight as part of the Blue second corps, the Twenty-ninth will march under blackout from Travis southwestward toward Pageland, S. C., where a Red force is reported. The Red force, consisting of the Twenty-eighth Division with the first battalion, fifth engineers from Fort Belvoir, Va., the 244th Coast Artillery, a battery of the 104th and aircraft battalion and the 104th observation squadron of Frederick, Md., will start moving on Pageland from the Southwest.

Sometime tonight or early tomorrow the two forces will collide in Pageland or near it and a battle for possession of the town will follow. In addition to the Twenty-ninth in the line, second corps will have the Forty-forth Division in reserve and the 104th cavalry out in front feeling for the enemy and raising consternation, as usual, behind his front.

The Forty-fourth will move to the front during the night or tomorrow morning. In this battle, conditions will be exactly reversed from those under which that was fought which ended this morning. The Twenty-ninth will be on the side of the biggest battalions, with the Twenty-eighth fighting against odds which eventually will prove overwhelming. Its mission, like that which the Twenty-ninth has just accomplished, will be to cover river crossings over which the Red army must move into action.

3719 More Join Red Cross; Total in Drive Here 108,085

The District Red Cross roll call netted 3719 more members yesterday, bringing the campaigns grand total to 108,085 memberships.

The drive now is approximately 11,000 memberships ahead of last year's roll call at a corresponding date, Chairman Edgar Morris said. He expressed confidence that the goal of two hundred thousand would be reached by Monday night, when the campaign officially closes.

Morris will address a Kiwanis Club luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel today on behalf of the Red Cross and Miss Mabel T. Boardman, chairman of the roll call's special gifts committee and secretary of the American Red Cross, will speak before a meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club at the Carlton Hotel.

Added to the list of organizations whose entire personnel has joined the Red Cross are National Engraving Co., A. Kahn, Inc., Chamber of Commerce of the United States, National Bank of Washington, William McCarthy, realtor, and Dallas M. Grady, realtor.

The American Red Cross, meanwhile, announced plans for its most extensive first aid program in history—training a Nation-wide corps of civilian defense workers as instructors in wartime first aid. Officials estimated the project would bring the number of Red Cross first aid trainees to more than one million.

The national organization also announced the safe arrival in the Eritrean port of Massawa of 25,000 tons of food and blankets for the relief of civilians through East African colonies.

Ralph Bain, American Red Cross representative in the Middle East, reported from Cairo that Ethiopia's Emperor Haile Selassie had expressed to him "sincere gratitude for American generosity and good will."

Dawes Plan Loan Now in Default

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Oct. 15.—The $50,633,400 of German government external 7s, sold in 1924 and known since issuance as the Dawes plan loan, passed into default status today when funds were not provided for payment of the October 15 coupon. For seven years, Germany had been making partial payment of interest on the Dawes bonds, as well as on the Young plan issue, which are outstanding in the amount of $91,305,600.

The default, according to the understanding in Wall Street, resulted from the regulations of the United States Treasury freezing German assets here.

Child, Woman Die in Traffic

A 21-month-old child and a Baltimore woman lost their lives yesterday in automobile accidents in nearby Virginia.

The child, Harold Todd, was crushed beneath the wheels of a bakery truck while playing in the driveway of his home at Ingleside, Va. He died shortly after being taken to the Alexandria Hospital.

The woman, Mrs. Genevieve Virginia Doster, 22, of Baltimore, was killed instantly when the cab in which she was riding struck a curbing at the approach to the R. F. & P. railroad overpass near Woodbridge, Va., and overturned several times.

William Meeker, 36, also of Baltimore, another passenger, also was taken to the Alexandria Hospital in critical condition, suffering from a skull fracture and internal injuries. Also admitted to the hospital was Miss Ellen Collins, 24, of Baltimore, who was said to be suffering from severe lacerations and internal injuries. Three other passengers escaped with minor injuries.

At the inquest before Coroner John A. Sims, of Alexandria, Ernest W. Lyles, 28, of Springfield, Va., bakery truck driver, was exonerated in the death of the Todd baby. Lyles testified that he though the child and several playmates were out of the way of his truck. He said he struck the child as he backed toward the street.

Republicans Slate Election Tonight

Election of officers of the Seventh District Republican Club of Montgomery County, Md., will be held tonight at a meeting in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School on East-West Highway.

Miss Rose Dawson, a member of the county board of permanent registry, will attend the meeting to take declarations from new residents desiring to qualify as voters in 1942. The proposed creation of new election precincts will be discussed.

You can do it if you try!

Poised here as if for take-off is the gorgeous new creation which is the Buick Super for 1942.

It is, as you see, entirely new and fresh in line and aspect—low and sweeping, clean of contour, solid as a combat car but graceful as a plane.

It is more than that, for here in durable metal is living proof that an old American tenet still holds true—you can do it if you try!

We had access to no materials in the building of this car that are not available to every other car builder.

We had no freer hand with vital machinery, no greater control over the supply of skilled hands.

But put foot to treadle and let this big Buick valve-in-head straight-eight wing you up to a realization of what skill and ingenuity can contrive.

Drive it long and hard through a busy day—see not only how its tireless all-coil springs keep you rested, but how its frugal Compound Carburetion holds your gas mileage up where it belongs.

Pilot it through fall chill or winter blizzard, its brand-new heating system surrounds you with the same even predetermined level of balmy comfort, no matter what the outside temperature.

Push it, force it through the toughest going. It will take all you can give it and be ready for more, quicker than you can believe.

There are new materials in this car, yes—and something more—new ideas, new processes and new ways of doing things.

But in its manner and in its ability to serve faithfully and to your utter pleasure, there is no "ersatz" anywhere in it.

Why not, in these days when the talk is all of substitutes?

Simply because the things that made some people say there could be no new 1942 models made Buick engineers resolve that if there were to be any new cars, they would be better ones.

So they bring you now the Buick Super, style leader of a line of no less than 23 sparkling new models.

These distinguished and serviceable cars are all ready for you to see at your Buick dealer's.

Drop in, look them over, and discover how wrong the fellow was who told you there wouldn't be anything new in the 1942 automobiles!

No other car has ALL THIS FOR YOU IN 'FORTY-TWO

You get FIREBALL STRAIGHT-EIGHT VALVE-IN-HEAD ENGINE, for more power and range.

You get COMPOUND CARBURETION (standard on most models), for top economy.

You get OIL-CUSHIONED CRANKSHAFT PINS AND JOURNALS, for much longer bearing life.

You get STURDI-LITE CONNECTING RODS, for greater strength.

You get STEPON PARKING BRAKE, for ease and convenience.

You get BROADRIM WHEELS, for improved ride and handling.

You get FULLY ADJUSTABLE STEERING POST, for extra comfort.

You get BODY BY FISHER featuring back seats up to 52 inches wide.

You get WEATHERWARDEN venti-heater (accessory), for conditioned fresh air all year.

British Fleet Beats Off Bomb Attacks

Italian Aircraft Are Driven Away In Brisk Mediterranean Battles

By Larry Allen
Associated Press Staff Writer

Aboard Flagship With the British Mediterranean Fleet, Oct. 15.—The British war fleet has beaten off two fiercely pressed attacks of torpedo bombers after an unsuccessful attempt to bring elusive Italian warships to battle.

Throwing out a terrific barrage from their 4.5-inch and 6-inch pompoms, a battleship, cruisers and destroyers sent a hail of hot lead into oncoming squadrons of Italian bombers which attacked within sight of the Alexandria coastline.

Italian bombers of one squadron sent three torpedoes swishing harmlessly past this flagship.

(An Italian communique yesterday said a battleship and a 10,000-ton cruiser were hit in a torpedo attack Monday afternoon. Stefani, Italian news agency, said today that an admiral's ensign indicated the battleship was a flagship of the British union and that the attack occurred northwest of Alexandria. The Italians said all their aircraft returned from the attack.)

Bombers Driven Away

The other squadron of bombers, unable to face the terrific fleet fire, veered off westward, pursued by British pilots flying American-made planes.

The Italians attacked while the fleet was heading eastward to Alexandria after the British had swept a wide arc for three days in the Mediterranean hunting a squadron of Italian cruisers and destroyers reported at sea.

Although the fleet was within sight of the Alexandria coast line and British fighters were in the skies, the Italians zoomed over the destroyer screen for the attack.

Peering through slits in the director tower, I saw great flashes of yellow flame leap from the muzzles of the guns of the battleship. Exploding shells dotted the horizon with big black mushroom puffs.

A Wall of Flame

It was the second attack made by the Italians within six hours. The first was at dawn, when Italian planes which had been shadowing the fleet for hours suddenly moved within range. In the face of a wall of flame that streaked the haze of dawn, however, they moved off westward.

The fleet's close shave came later when three torpedo bombers suddenly dived on the destroyer screen at 2 p. m. on Monday.

They swooped to within about 100 feet of the destroyers off starboard.

The battleship made a quick turn as the first torpedo exploded harmlessly in the sea. The second streaked through the water in front, and the third race past our screen.

Then the planes zoomed upward into the blinding sun and disappeared. The gunners thought they got one of them.

ANG Leaders Defeated in Vote; Murray New Head

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Incumbent leaders of the American Newspaper Guild (C. I. O.) today conceded defeat of their entire ticket in the guild's national referendum and immediately pledged support to the new administration.

Balloting by the 12,257 guild members eligible to vote will not be completely tabulated or announced until midnight tomorrow. The administration leaders acknowledged defeat on the basis of nearly complete, unofficial returns.

Guild President Donal M. Sullivan, of Boston; Executive Vice President Milton Kaufman, of New York, and Secretary-Treasurer Victor Pasche, of Newark, N. J., issued a statement saying the anti-administration "pro-guild" ticket had won congratulated their opponents.

The new administration will be headed by Milton M. Murray, of Detroit, as president; Sam Eubanks, Oakland, Calif., executive vice president, and William Rodgers, Washington, D. C., secretary-treasurer.

Let's see what's in this week's PARADE

PICTURES. People. Facts. Variety. Those are the four points of Parade's entertainment program—a program that's causing more and more Washingtonians to switch to the Sunday Post to get Parade. Here's how the coming issue fills the bill:

Pictures? Of course! Parade is the picture magazine idea brought to Washington as a Sunday newspaper section. Parade for October 19 has 96 different photographs—not counting a lot of cartoons and other drawings! And such pictures! From beautiful girls modeling black lingerie to character studies of up-state New York farmers, they combine dramatic interest with technical excellence of photography. And the improved paper and ink being used by Parade make the pictures sharper, clearer, better than ever.

People? Greta Garbo with nine former leading men. Lou Nova showing Lois, the average girl, around his training camp. Rumba dancers. Duck hunters. Aviators. Football referees. The 60-pound Samson, Pattie O'Keefe. And lots of pretty girls.

Facts? Lessons in dancing the rumba, in interpreting a football official's signals, in lingerie fashions, in saving money on fuel. Facts about life on a convoy, about radio's Charles Martin, about curing children's reading problems, about Army observation pilots.

Variety? All the topics mentioned so far—and still others! Eighteen different subjects in this coming issue of Parade. Don't miss reading Parade this week—phone NOW to order the Sunday Washington Post!

Court Studies Wife-Killing Case Again

By the Associated Press

The Supreme Court yesterday took under advisement for the second time the appeal of Robert S. James, Los Angeles barber, from his conviction on a charge of killing his wife by drowning her in a tub, after Chief Justice Stone remarked from the bench that "the real issue is whether his confession was voluntary."

"Other evidence of guilt is immaterial," he added, "if the confession was involuntary."

James, at whose trial two rattlesnakes were exhibited, appealed last term from a death sentence. The court split 4-to-4 then and a subsequent rehearing petition was granted so that the case might be heard before a full bench. The snakes caused a furore in the trial court room in 1936, the defense contending they were brought into the case to "inflame the passions" of the jury. The State contended James slew his wife in a bathtub in 1935 after failing to kill her by thrusting her foot into a box of snakes.

Morris Lavine, James' counsel, told the court the confession was involuntary and was made after long hours of questioning.

"He was not permitted to sleep. He was beaten black and blue from the waist up," Lavine added.

California told the Supreme Court yesterday that between 1933 and 1940 more than 300,000 persons received public aid after entering the State and that it is "faced with a problem of great importance to its citizens."

The State filed a brief in advance of forthcoming arguments on the conviction of Fred F. Edwards, of Marysville, Calif., on a charge of violating a State law prohibiting anyone from assisting a nonresident indigent person in entering the State. Constitutionality of the law has been challenged.

Attorney General Earl Warren, of California, estimated various State relief agencies spent 13 million dollars on nonresident relief during the periods.

Drawing a distinction between barring indigent persons and preventing others from aiding them in entering the State, the brief said that "Edwards is not a citizen of any other State but a citizen of California.

"He has not been deprived of ingress for indigency or any other reason. He is not, therefore, of the class of persons that might be injured by this statute, at least as far as the privileges and immunity clause, or of the fourteenth amendment, are concerned."

Rep. Faddis Protests Release of Bergdoll

Representative Faddis (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, expressed the hope in the House yesterday that Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, World War draft dodger, would not be released from prison but would be required to serve the rest of his sentence.

"Since he would not serve this Nation in time of war," said Faddis, a World War veteran, "I want to protest against this proposal to let him go and hope that he will be required to serve the rest of his sentence."

Faddis estimated that Bergdoll had about 3½ years yet to serve.

Bride, 73, Says Husband Lied About Age—He's 86

Chicago, Oct. 15 (INS).—Mrs. Sophie Barthlott, 73, bride of a year, asked a divorce today because her husband, Henry, had misrepresented his age.

"He deceived me when we were married," she told Judge Joseph Sabath. "He said he was only 80 years old—and he was 86! Besides, he was cruel."

Judge Sabath, himself a youth of only 71, sighed and granted the divorce.

Only 2.4 Per Cent Injured In U. S. Army 'Chute Jumps

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 15.—The first detailed report on casualties among United States parachute troops disclosed today that only 2.4 per cent of all jumps resulted in injuries.

Army doctors said, however, that the percentage of injuries has decreased during recent months, due mainly to improved methods of preliminary training.

The report, published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, was based on official records kept on all injuries since organization of the Army's 501st and 502d Parachute Battalions and the group parachute school.

From August 1, 1940, to August 1, 1941, there were 4,480 parachute jumps, with 121 injuries, or 2.4 per cent. Only 32 of these, or 0.7 per cent, were severe enough for hospital admission.

About 800 men took part, each jumping five or six times. The 89 hurt less seriously included cases with only contusions, bruises and minor sprains. Of the 32 hospitalized, 25 suffered fractures, usually at or near the ankle.

The report said that one man, jumping at 750 feet, was killed when his main and emergency parachute failed to open completely, and that jumping at this height has been discontinued.

All the injuries except two occurred as the jumpers made contact with the ground and were attributed to cross winds, which cause a swinging backward and forward, and rough ground. Some of these oscillations result from inexperience in handling the risers which control the parachute, the doctors said.

The report was made by William J. Tobin, Washington, D. C.; Lawrence J. Cohen, New York and John T. Vandover, St. Louis, all first lieutenants in the Army Medical Corps.

Bolivian Army Takes Over Rails In Strike Threat

Lapaz, Bolivia, Oct. 15 (AP).—The army occupied all railway property in Bolivia today to prevent a threatened strike, and the government announced it would not lift a state of siege until the nation returned to normalcy.

The state of siege was imposed three months ago after the government had uncovered an alleged revolutionary plot and had ousted the German minister, Ernst Wendler, on accusation of complicity.

Gen. Miguel Candia, minister for national defense, announced troops had taken possession of stations and rights of way to prevent discontinuance of work and that they would replace strikers in the case of a transportation crisis in tin mining, so that war orders would be met.

New Providence Hospital Dispensary Dedicated, Will Serve Southeast

Private hospitals which do considerable charity work deserve more Government support than they receive, Representative Ross A. Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, asserted yesterday.

Speaking at ceremonies dedicating the new Providence Hospital dispensary building, Collins expressed high praise of that institution's aid to the needy sick.

The dispensary, originally constructed years ago by the District for use as an isolation building, was withdrawn from idleness and remodeled and equipped under a $50,000 Congressional appropriation. Its completion has made possible the removal of the hospital's out-patient department from cramped quarters in the basement of the main building.

Collins, who was chairman of the District appropriations subcommittee when the $50,000 expenditure was authorized, credited Congressional colleagues, Joseph Tumulty, Joseph Tumulty, jr., and the Providence staff for obtaining the appropriation.

The dispensary, which will serve virtually the whole southeast section of the city, is a two-story brick building. Its laboratories will be housed in the basement. There are completely equipped clinics for bronchoscopy, X-ray, physical therapy, surgery, proctology, ear, nose and throat, gynecology and the other specialties.

Sister Rosa, superintendent of Providence Hospital, said the building probably will be in full use on Monday.

Dr. James Cahill, head of the surgery department introduced Representative Collins to the assembly of District health officials, staff physicians and nurses and others who attended the dedicatory exercises.

Temporary Buildings Fireproof

Washington's World War era temporary Federal buildings, of which only a few remain, were branded as firetraps and sweat boxes. Smoking in them was taboo, which did not add to their attractiveness to Government workers. One of them, long since razed, was the scene of a serious fire.

Today a half dozen temporary-type, squat structures are under construction or completed. But the Public Buildings Administration avers that they will be nearly immune to fire. And smoking will be permitted.

A PBA announcement explains that the six buildings, all to be occupied by the end of this year, will provide 700,000 square feet of working space for 6,000 employes. While all six are of frame construction, exterior walls will be faced with fire-resistant asbestos board, sprinkler systems are provided, fire drills will be held monthly without advance notice.

Fire hose and extinguishers are to be installed in abundance. No worker will have to walk more than a few steps to find an alarm box. Charwomen will start work right after the offices close, instead of at midnight, as formerly, furnishing added protection against smoldering wastebasket fires.

Already finished and under partial occupancy are "D" and "N" buildings, situated at Fourth Street and Independence Avenue Southwest and in the rear of the Navy Building, respectively.

Buildings "F," "G" and "H," behind the new War Department Building, and "M," at Twenty-sixth and Water Streets Northwest, are due to be completed before snow flies.

2. SPRINKLER CONTROL VALVE in the captain of the guard's office is tested by Guard Friedlander. Control panel behind Friedlander automatically indicates any tampering with master valves throughout the building

Animals Have No Privacy at Laurel Refuge

By Joseph Mathias,
Post Staff Writer

Uncle Sam is doing his bit for the furred and feathered folk out near Laurel, Md. For at the Patuxent Research Refuge wild birds and mammals are offered a haven from hunters' guns, and the only price required is that they submit to scientific prying into their private lives.

That the birds and animals don't mind such spying is shown by the numbers that have moved in on the 3000-acre tract since the refuge was established on submarginal, wooded land in 1939.

"When we came here," said Dr. L. C. Morley, superintendent, "we didn't even see a squirrel. Hunters probably had scared most of the game away. Now there are grouse, quail, spossums, squirrels, foxes, skunks, raccoons and muskrats."

Only a few of the animals are trapped for scientific research in laboratories. For the most part, they are studied by observing them in their natural haunts.

The wildlife experts study their habits, the kind of food they prefer, and what sort of cover suits them best. With this information, the Government can recommend ways to control animal pests and to propagate birds and beasts that have economic value, according to A. C. Martin, in charge of the food habits laboratory.

In the disease laboratories, technicians use mostly domestically bred animals because they are easier to handle. Dr. Don R. Coburn, laboratory head, said the major research project at present is to find a treatment for distemper on commercial fox and mink farms.

Other research is into diseases of game birds, such as ulcerative enteritis, an intestinal ailment that afflicts quail, chuckers, partridges and grouse; and botulism, a type of poisoning that has taken a heavy toll among wild ducks feeding in polluted waters.

Efforts are being made also to overcome a habit among young quail of pecking one another to death. The mortality rate from this is 23 per cent.

Passenger Auto Output Cut by 51%

OPM Warns Materials May Not Be Available for Even That Maximum

The OPM yesterday set ceilings for passenger car production next January "at least" 51 per cent below corresponding production in January, 1941, but warned that there may not be sufficient materials available even to fulfill the limited maximum.

The reduction was announced by Leon Henderson, OPM director of civilian supply, at a meeting of the Automotive Defense Industry Advisory Committee. He limited output to 204,848 passenger cars, the same absolute number that was previously set for December production. In proportion to last year's output, however, the cut is larger, inasmuch as the industry turned out 394,233 last December, and 418,350 last January.

The January curtailment, figured in with smaller cuts for the period beginning last August and extending through December, works out to an over-all reduction of at least 38.3 per cent below last years' levels for the first six months of the 1942 model year, which began last August 1.

Under the program announced yesterday, the industry's "Big Three"—General Motors, Chrysler and Ford—will have their production reduced by an average of 55.1 per cent, while the smaller companies will be permitted an 8 per cent over-all increase above production in January, 1941.

Warning that "there is no guarantee that sufficient materials will be available to fulfill this maximum," Henderson said his division had been advised of difficulties in obtaining certain types of steel, especially strip steel, which "make it appear likely that next January's output will fall considerably below the maximum."

"I want to emphasize," the civilian supply chief said, "that we are not fixing production quotas for January. We are merely establishing a maximum limit to which the manufacturers can produce—if they are successful in obtaining sufficient materials."

Ford And The C. I. O.

Last June a veritable nine days' wonder occurred when Henry Ford not only gave up his struggle to prevent unionization of his employes but also agreed to both the union shop and the check-off. The wholeheartedness of the surrender of this one-time arch-enemy of unionism gave rise to a suspicion that the company management might possibly welcome a "showdown" that would test the ability of labor leaders to hold workers in line and maintain discipline. At any rate, subsequent events have shown that there was good ground for skepticism. For, due to the rift between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. the Ford closed-shop plan has encountered bitter opposition from employes belonging to A. F. of L. unions. It appears that elections have been held in only the River Rouge and Lincoln plants. Employes in other plants claim that the C. I. O. does not represent them, demand return of sums withheld from them for check-off purposes, and ask for plant elections to determine the question of local representation. Accordingly the NLRB has ruled that the Ford Co. had no right to enter into a closed-shop agreement with the C. I. O. for all its employes, and has ordered elections to be held in 14 Michigan plants where the A. F. of L. claims a majority of the workers.

Thus organized labor has lost an opportunity to try out the effect of the closed-shop agreement under conditions that any strong unified labor movement would unreservedly welcome. The fratricidal strife between the two warring labor groups jeopardizes the liberal concessions won from Mr. Ford. Moreover, the Ford management is handicapped because it cannot enter into a general contract covering all its employes and permitting it to deal with one responsible labor organization that could be held to account for failure to prevent strikes or to maintain discipline and efficiency in its ranks. The situation would be serious even in normal times. It is intolerable in a period of national emergency when labor strife constitutes a threat to the defense program.

Army Shake-Up

Ever since he was appointed Chief of Staff two years ago, Gen. Marshall has labored with commendable patience to improve Army leadership. For obvious reasons it has been a slow, hard task. Because promotion too often comes by seniority rather than by merit, men have come into positions of command who have been lacking in leadership and initiative. This was proved repeatedly in maneuvers early this year. It was reaffirmed during the recent Louisiana war games. It is good news, therefore, that the War Department is continuing to back up the Chief of Staff's efforts to revitalize officer personnel.

Of the continuing shake-up involving all the grades from second lieutenant to major general, the department has little to say. And its reluctance to publicize details is understandable, in view of World War experience. At that time, when there was a similar shake-up, an extraordinary amount of bitterness and recrimination was caused by officer removals. Even in recent years the department has been under political pressure where National Guard units have been concerned. Presumably such pressure still exists in some degree. That it should be completely disregarded in the national interest is, of course, absolutely essential. For inefficient combat officers, whether from the National Guard, from the Reserve, or from the Regular Army, are a liability which the country, faced with war potentialities, simply cannot afford.

Gen. Marshall himself has said that the relieving of combat officers of their posts is one of the hardest things he and his staff are called upon to do. Naturally, for those involved, there is an inevitable loss of prestige, to say nothing of the reduced chance of promotion. What consolation there is for those who are too old for combat service or who are unsuited for command in blitz warfare would seem to lie in less inspiring but necessary desk work. The War Department is apparently endeavoring to effect the switch from the field to the office with proper regard for the capacities of the officers concerned. It is, nevertheless, a drear process, as Gen. Marshall intimates. He will doubtless come in for plenty of harsh criticism as the weeding out continues. But the Chief of Staff's ruthless devotion to the ideal of improved leadership is the only way we will ever acquire not just a good officer corps but one calculated to cope successfully with the exhaustive demands of total war.

1812 And 1941

Yesterday, while the Red armies were battling to save their capital from the Nazis, the approach of another significant anniversary was noted by the world at large. Next Saturday will be the 129th anniversary of Napoleon's disastrous retreat from Moscow. It began almost four months to the day after he had launched his great invasion and one month after his entry into the city itself. By October 18 the great fire—kindled, as most historians believe, by Count Rostopchin's incendiaries—had burned itself out. It had transformed Moscow to ruins. It had made it untenable as the winter quarters of an army which then numbered about 100,000 effectives. Meanwhile, Napoleon's illusion that the Czar Alexander would acknowledge defeat and sue for peace had been slowly dispelled. Not only that; Napoleon's own peace offers had been ignored. Indeed, the informal armistice between Murat and the Russians had been broken without warning near Kaluga. The marshal and his corps d'armee suddenly found themselves surrounded, and they fought their way out of the trap with a loss of some 4000 men. It was on receiving this news that Napoleon made his decision. "We shall march," he said, "upon Kaluga and woe to whomever we may meet on the way."

But, despite this bravado, what Napoleon really had in mind was to circumpass the great main Russian armies of Kutuzov and then regain the main road to Smolensk which the advance on Moscow had followed. There were two roads from Moscow to Kaluga. As part of his stratagem Napoleon began his march on the older or leftward road, and at about half the distance toward his objective suddenly cut across the countryside to the newer or rightward road. But at Malo-Yaroslavetz his forces came abruptly into contact with Kutuzov's. The battle which followed seemed at the time indecisive, like those of Smolensk and Borodino. But it proved the most fateful action of all the Napoleonic Wars—more fateful, perhaps, than Albuera or even than Waterloo itself. It was the memory of this action which many years later prompted the famous apostrophe by one of Napoleon's officers, Comte Philippe de Segur: "Do you recollect, O my comrades, that fatal field which put a stop to the conquest of the world, where 20 years of victory were wiped away and where the mighty edifice of our fortunes began to totter to its base?" Thus the campaign of 1813 and the Hundred Days were merely, as Hilaire Belloc has observed, an epilogue.

And now, even as the desperate battle for Moscow rages, men are daring to ask themselves whether it is on this same Russian soil that Adolf Hitler has received or will receive the shock that will shake and perhaps destroy the edifice of his fortune. The curious similarities and parallels of the present war and the Napoleonic cycle have often been remarked. Yet, though history may move in recurring patterns, the repetition of an historical pattern is rarely or never exact in every detail. One remembers how, for example, at the beginning of the Norwegian invasion Winston Churchill rashly compared it with the blunder of the Peninsular War. Time seems to indicate that a much better analogy to what Napoleon encountered in Spain and Portugal is being provided in the audacious and evidently growing guerrilla warfare in the Serbian and Montenegrin mountains. Still another point is the fact that Napoleon's attack upon Russia was dictated as much by the internal situation of France in the spring of 1812 as by any threat the Russians may have offered to the completion of the continental system. You can do anything with bayonets except sit on them. This possible analogy may be studied for whatever it seems worth. Anyway signs are not wanting that the internal situation in Germany is in fact deteriorating.

Lindbergh's Judgment

Seldom will a public man say what Mr. Charles A. Lindbergh said in his last speech: "I do not know of a single statement I have made that has been proved false." Otherwise the newspaper files will rise up and call him to an accounting. This we will do at Mr. Lindbergh's expense. In his testimony on the lend-lease bill before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Mr. Lindbergh said: "I spent several weeks in Greenland in the summer of 1933, surveying the coasts for air bases, and studying the condition that would be encountered in operating a northern air route. I came to the conclusion that of all the possible air routes between America and Europe, the one over Greenland would be the most difficult to establish and operate." And further: "Secondary bases might be placed in parts of Greenland, but, in my opinion, Greenland is not of primary importance from the standpoint of aviation bases." This judgment has, of course, proved woefully wrong. The United States is now maintaining important air bases in Greenland and is making constant use of the "northern air route" between Iceland and the United States. Flying conditions in the Greenland area have been found by service pilots to be superior to those in many parts of Alaska. If Mr. Lindbergh is wrong on a judgment in a field in which he is a recognized authority, what value can be attached to his dogmatic judgments in the fields in which he has had no experience?

Item On Defense

Russian losses of material point up the need for greater defense production much more than all the stimulating words of our defense officials. The list is staggering. In 15 weeks of war with Germany, Russia admits losing 7000 tanks, 8900 cannon, and 5316 aircraft. This is probably a conservative estimate. For the Russians are seeing to it that their admitted losses are far less than those claimed by the Nazis. Here is stark testimony not only of the physical requirements of total war but also of Russia's preparedness.

Were similar losses inflicted on the British in the field, their position would be critical. Even today the British are believed to be producing considerably fewer than 100 tanks a week—perhaps equivalent to the number of tanks which Russia is using up every day. Estimates of British or American cannon production are unavailable. But Russian aircraft losses in the light of American production are of special interest. Last month we produced 1914 military planes, about half of which were combat planes. In preceding months production was lower. But it is no military secret that the number of combat planes lost by Russia is roughly equivalent to the total number produced in this country in the last six months.

That Russia has suffered such immense losses and still has been able to take the offensive is proof of her enormous material reserves. But by her own confession these are being seriously depleted. Not the least of the problems of bolstering the Russian stand is, of course, the delivery of sufficient tanks, planes, and guns, from Britain and from this country. But our first concern is their production in sufficient quantity. The Russian figures now give defense officials a striking and factual base upon which to make their appeal for speed and more speed of production.

Who Pays More?

International comparisons always are subject to enough margin of error to provide even the experts with a field day. This is what the Chamber of Commerce of the United States invited when it sought to prove that our tax burden is greater than the British. One of the yardsticks used by the chamber was relative national income. The chamber alleged that British taxation was 22 per cent of British national income; America's 25 per cent. Thus we were the more heavily mulcted. In a speech given before the National Tax Association at St. Paul, Minn., however, an English economist, Dr. Brinley Thomas, challenged the estimates supporting this conclusion. He took his income figures from another source and found that British taxes amounted to 29 per cent of income. Also he found fault with the comparable figure of American national income. Using his figure, our tax bill would be 23 per cent of the whole, or less than the British. However, when all is said and done, neither estimate will relieve the back of the taxpayer in either country one iota.

University For Adults

From the time of Socrates, sticks and stones have been the least important equipment of a university. It is possible, indeed, to transfer a "plant" without moving either a stick or a stone. This is what St. John's College at Annapolis has discovered. It has planned to give the capital city the benefit of the traditional program of classics and liberal arts which has made St. John's College unique among American seats of learning. The course will be given in the evenings, and is open to men and women of any age or schooling. In addition to three seminars (which, in the St. John's manner, will be based on the great books of the Western world), a lecture course and tutorial classes are available. If we cannot have, as Mr. Paul V. McNutt suggested the other day, America's greatest university within Washington, at least we can have St. John's, and for adults, too. That is something, and something that will add considerably to our cultural advantages.

PARTING

A kiss should be lightly and easily given
As the breath of a child blows the thistle aside,
But hardly I give you this kiss and gravely
With lips grown cold and with eyes held wide.

The blood is too hot for casual caressing
And neither must speak what the heart must know,
That this is a kiss that the dead may be wearing
Deep in the dust as the slow years go.

To Defeat Hitler

The letters recently published in The Post concerning religious freedom in the Soviet Union cannot strengthen the growing unity which the fight against Hitlerism demands. They are the crafty weapon of the most dangerous enemies of democracy—the "America Firsters," who seek to divide the American people with false cries of religious persecution in the Soviet Union, while blessing with great glee the "New Order" which Hitler has brought to a bleeding Europe.

It was with great eagerness that the America First rattlesnakes grasped at the issue of religion in order to weaken the all-out battle against their idol, Herr Hitler. Cynically ignoring the monstrous persecution of all religions by der Fuehrer, they now dig up the old moth-eaten tales of "baiting, mobbing, and bombing religious worshipers," just as they divided the people in the past with their "holy" war against "communism and godlessness."

While no honest and informed person can deny the fact that the Soviet Constitution guarantees religious freedom to each of its 200,000,000 citizens, America can ill afford to make this the central issue today. Our national independence depends upon a complete military defeat of Hitlerism and all it represents; any attempt to divert us from that one goal smacks of treason and must be smashed.

The CCC

In times like these it is urgent that every organization perform its duties in terms that aid the program of national defense. With an eye toward that objective, the CCC is successfully doing its part.

Intensive training in courses that are vital to national defense is given to CCC enrollees over a short period of time, in order that they may be prepared to take their places in industry should they be needed. Some of these courses are: Automobiles, blacksmithing, sheet metal welding, electricity, and cooking, not to mention the American Red Cross first-aid training that is required of each enrollee. Within the corps is also built a high spirit of morale, one that helps each member when he is inducted into the Regular Army. This defense training has a two-fold purpose: to enable the CCC youth to be of value to his country, and to fit the CCC youth for employment after he has left the Civilian Conservation Corps.

As to the defense aid of former members of the CCC, it has been carefully noticed by the Government officials that former members of the corps make more rapid progress than civilians due to the fact of the similarity of the youth organization and of the Regular Army. The regular daily routine of each camp, the building up of morale, the constant practice of strict discipline and the regular health habits construct within each CCC enrollee a strong body, physically and mentally, and enable him to get along with his fellowmen in a brotherly manner. In the fields of industry, the CCC enrollee also stands above his fellow workers through his previous training in the preparatory school of the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Thus, by meeting the demands of the national emergency through its intensive training program, the Civilian Conservation Corps is doing its part in cooperating with the national defense program.

Movie Probe

One wonders if those isolationist United States Senators who are making themselves just about as ridiculous as human beings can make themselves by howling their heads off about the anti-Nazi propaganda of the moving pictures would howl at all if these pictures favored Nazism instead of showing it up—to the deep satisfaction of audiences all over the country—to be the most hideous form of government that has ever insulted the intelligence of mankind. If a more fiendishly loathesome one has ever cursed this good earth its history has passed into oblivion without leaving a trace.

I have seen and enthusiastically welcomed several of these pictures at our theater here in Blacksburg, and as far as I know anything about the present Germany and the German government and its unmoral political philosophy, the pictures do Hitler's Germany and its monstrous government no injustice whatever. If anything, they seem to me to err on the side of restraint and understatement.

Of course, it is not necessary for these pictures to lie about conditions in Nazi Germany in order to make right minded Americans despise it; it is only necessary for them to tell the truth about it, and I, for one, believe that is just what they do, isolationists to the contrary notwithstanding.

As I witnessed these pictures I took the keenest satisfaction in thinking, moreover, that they were powerfully propagandistic, that they were intended to show and would show the American public what a repulsive madhouse Hitler's Germany is. Thus it seemed perfectly clear and convincing to me that the pictures were rendering a highly useful public service. It pleased me to think, too, that our Government was probably encouraging their production and exhibition. I hope my surmise is right, for I should like to think that the Government is that enterprising and wide awake.

If the isolationists don't like these pictures, why don't they offset their effect by showing some of their own, in which the habitat of the blond-haired super race is made out to be a blissful elysium where the law of justice and right, of mercy and humanity reigns supreme and every citizen of that happy land looks up to Hitler as the miraculous source of all power and all wisdom?

Of course there is, fortunately, not the slightest chance that Congress will interfere with the showing of these pictures. Because for it to do so would not only be a flagrant and an intolerable invasion of the rights of the people—since these pictures don't violate the law—but also because most members of Congress, being good American citizens, fully approve of them, just as most of the rest of us do.

Public Interest In Strikes

About the first question asked when you discuss the war situation with your neighbor today is, Why doesn't somebody do something about these damned strikes—strikes that not only retard the help we are trying to give the Allies but so greatly imperil our own defense?

Yes, why don't they? Many causes are assigned: pussy-footing of national leaders of labor organizations, the patting on the shoulder of the Administration, but none of these are the real cause of non-action, which is political timidity of Congress to pass any of the several prohibiting bills that are gathering dust in committee pigeonholes.

A Congressman is, of course, human. He would like to be re-elected next fall and is afraid of the labor vote in his district. That is an understandable, though not particularly laudable, attitude. But (as is becoming more and more questionable in the light of aggravated and growing public opinion) is it really good politics any more?

In 1919, after a strike of the Boston police had been broken, and the strikers were seeking reinstatement, a little unobtrusive man said "No!" Just that—"No." In reply to an inquiry from Samuel Gompers, the then great labor chief, the same unobtrusive little man went further on record as follows: "There is no right to strike against the public safety by anybody, anywhere, any time."

That little "No" in a then critical period of postwar readjustment, elected Calvin Coolidge President of the United States. A tired Republican National Convention was looking for a suitable Vice Presidential nominee, and a loud-mouthed Western judge bellowed from the rear—"Calvin Coolidge."

Perhaps, Mr. Congressman, when you return to look after your political fences next fall, you may find that your action—or nonaction in this great matter of public interest—is not so popular; you may even receive a kick in the pants instead of a wreath for pusillanimous conduct in the face of a great national issue. Perhaps it might be well to refigure this matter. Gallup Polls are showing the direction of the wind on the question.

Friendship With Japan

Are any Americans deluded by Japanese professions of sincere love of peace, and for friendship with the United States? Can any American accept any one of the Axis group as a friend? Since when did Japan love peace? Was it when she invaded Manchuria in violation of the Nine-Power Pact, or when she made war on China, or when she took Indo-China into protective custody? Surely no American can believe she loves peace?

The fact is that Japan hates the United States, and the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo alliance is Japan's hope of becoming the dominant power on the Pacific. Japan has for years carried on a subsidized propaganda in China against the United States. Your mission schools and hospitals have been pictured as anti-Chinese and as teachers of false foreign doctrines to weaken Chinese morale so that Americans might acquire special concessions with resulting enormous profits.

Japan pretended to desire an upbuilding of China, yet developed a great trade in narcotics backed by military power. She is nationally a criminal. Murder, robbery and lust are to her virtues, if used to make Japan dominant.

Can the American people be friendly with such a nation? Should they trade with such a nation and so increase her powers for evil?

Mistah Crump Cleans House

Remember the old song—

"This train don't carry no gamblers,
No snuff-dippers, no midnight ramblers."

Well, that's the way Memphis, Tenn., is now. Mistah Crump has cleaned it up. Mistah Crump is against sin and vice. Mistah Crump went to work and drove all the gamblers and bad women and wicked people out of town, and then he put up big signs saying "Memphis—Cleanest City in the Country." But folks laughed at the signs so hard Mistah Crump had to change them to read, "Fastest Growing City in the Country."

Mistah Crump sure is down on sin. They say he carries a red-letter Testament and goes down to all the dives and preaches the Gospel to them. The ones Mistah Crump doesn't convert the law catches, and they meet the gamblers at the train and put them right back on again. The only way you can lose any money in Memphis now is on the stock market.

And money is pouring in down there. They've got a big cotton crop, and cotton means money. Over in Crittenden County, across the river, they're got the biggest cotton crop and the smallest acreage in history. Cotton is close to parity, and they're paying $1.50 a hundred for picking it. The trucks pick up the Negroes at the foot of the bridge before dawn to haul them out to the cotton fields and bring them back after dark.

They were afraid the boll weevil was going to get them this year, but the army worm came just at the right time and killed the foliage. That stopped the development of the young bolls on which the weevil feeds, and it also made all the cotton ripen at the same time. The fields are whiter than they've ever been before, and they will be able to pick them practically clean at the first go-round. Now they're talking about developing a special strain of army worms that will come in just at the right time every year.

One dollar and fifty cents a hundred is a lot of money for picking cotton, when the average hand can pick 200 or 300 pounds a day. House servants that used to look down on the "field niggers" are now right out there picking with the rest of them. A lot of white folks that don't know how to boil an egg are having to do their own cooking now.

Since Mistah Crump closed up all the sinful places and ran all the bad people out of town, the good people that are left are flocking to the movies as they never have before. The most popular films are the ones that lead the audience in singing. You remember the ones that throw the words on the screen, with a little ball bouncing up and down over the words to indicate the beat? They're all in Memphis now, and the people love them. Instead of sitting silent with foolish grin on their faces, watching their neighbors, everybody sings as loud as he can, and Memphis in the evening sounds like a singing convention.

Mistah Crump has cleaned up Beale Avenue, too. There used to be quite a bit of fighting in the neighborhood, and Memphis had one of the highest homicide rates in the country. Now Mistah Crump has made it against the law for a Negro to carry a razor, an ice pick, or a pocketknife with a blade beyond a specified length. Every Saturday night the police pick up all the Negroes they find carrying razors, knives or icepicks and put them in jail, and they dump all the hardware in a pile in the center of the floor.

Mistah Crump can't stop them from singing and dancing down on Beale Avenue. That's where the blues were born, and as long as there is a Beale Avenue someone will be singing down there.

Perched up on the Chickasaw Bluffs, Memphis has seen a lot of things. It was there that De Soto first saw the Mississippi, in 1541. The city was laid out in 1819 by an agreement among Andrew Jackson, John Overton and James Winchester, who owned the land. In 1834 the first steamboat line to New Orleans was established, and Memphis became the largest inland cotton market. The river also brought the wild and lawless rowdies who congregated in Pinch-Gut at the foot of the bluff. The great Murrel, the Mississippi Valley's most eminent highwayman, united the toughs of the Pinch-Gut at Memphis, of Natchez-Under-the-Hill, and of the river front under the Vicksburg Bluff in an attempt to burn down the three towns, but Murrel was in prison by the time the attack occurred, and without his leadership it got nowhere.

The city was occupied by Federal troops from the summer of 1862 till the end of war. Three times during the 1870's it was ravaged by yellow fever epidemics in which more than 8000 people died.

After the flatboatmen, the Federals and the yellow fever, Mistah Crump is only a minor disturbance, and the Negroes can go on singing.

JOHN T. APPLEBY.

The Swiss Army

The October Reader's Digest gives: "A Lesson from the Swiss Army," which would be of interest for all who are concerned about the preparations for defense which we are now working at. Whether their methods would be practical in such a heterogeneous populace as we have, I am not qualified to say. I quote, in part, as follows: "Shortly before the war of 1914 Emperor William II paid a visit to the Swiss government. At the military maneuvers he said to a soldier: "You are 500,000, and you shoot well; but if we attack you with a million men, what will you do?" "We will each fire twice," answered the soldier calmly. The Kaiser preferred to pass through Belgium. Switzerland is the one country which has so far solved the urgent problem of defending democracy without falling into totalitarian militarization. With a population of 4,300,000 Switzerland has an army of 600,000. One of every seven inhabitants is a soldier. The same proportion would give the United States an army of 20,000,000.

Franking Privilege

A Congressman's Viewpoint

THE FOLLOWING discussion of the Congressional franking privilege is by Representative Compton I. White (Democrat), of Idaho, who writes, in a letter to The Washington Post:

In answer to your article appearing on the front page of your Sunday issue, October 12, attacking the rights of the members of Congress to distribute matter printed in the Congressional Record under the heading "Gigantic Conspiracy," permit me to call your attention to the fact that the most vital process in the government of our democracy is the dissemination of information concerning national affairs and the deliberations of the representatives of the people comprising the membership of Congress—a principle of government that is inherent with liberty, justice and human progress, a principle that was fundamental in the great governments that have flourished in the civilizations of the past.

Today this greatest safeguard to our democratic form of government is being ruthlessly assaulted by the same element that has taken over control of the channels of publicity in this country and is closely allied with the international financiers that appear to be using every subterfuge to force the American people into the European war.

We believe that the newspapers of this country owe it as a duty to their readers and to the American people to print the truth and to present facts for fair consideration in order that the public may form an intelligent opinion.

This brings us to the policy being followed by The Post, a leading newspaper printed here at the seat of government. A front page article in the Sunday issue, October 12, states:

"Adolf Hitler is using the United States mail—postage free—to send his propaganda to millions of American citizens. Officials investigating declare it is the most gigantic mail conspiracy in history . . . The German agents did not have to set up the machinery that does their work. The Congress—determined to do what it pleased with the franking privilege without publicity or accounting—did that."

The Post goes on to say:

"The Postoffice Department handled about 45 million pieces of franked mail in the last fiscal year reported. But only 20 million of them was sent from Washington where the members have their offices. So many a 'bulk package of franked articles' must have gone to other cities.

"What a setup for Dr. Goebbels! How Berlin must have chortled over its possibilities. And how funny it must seem today, to the Wilhelmstrasse, that the American grand juries and prosecutors are only now beginning to act!"

THE POST—THE CHAMPION of the freedom of the press, enjoying all the liberties, privileges, and protection vouchsafed by this great representative form of government—has the effrontery in a campaign to influence the members of Congress and the people they represent, to say in this same article.

"The speech a member made, or slipped into the Record, for the Nazi machine, did not have to label itself, 'German propaganda!' . . . The records of both the printing office and the folding rooms are confidential. The policy of these offices protects the 'privacy' of the members' orders . . . So no embarrassing questions can be asked about the loads the heavy trucks haul every hour of the day from the House and Senate Office Buildings . . . ! Jealous of the franking privilege, the Congress, which requires sworn statements from executive departments about their free mail, provided no publicity about Congressional mailings."

To anyone familiar with the facts concerning the franking of departmental and Congressional mail and the principle of government under attack, it would appear that The Post article must have been written for the unthinking.

In the first place, the present position that has been attained by this Nation among the powers of the earth must be credited chiefly to the enlightenment of its people and the intelligence of the electorate through knowledge obtained by the dissemination of information to all classes of our citizens which has created an informed public opinion to direct the course of our Government in the upbuilding of the great American commonwealth, a plan that has safeguarded American ideals and the American way of living through the exercise of the control of government by its people as provided in our Constitution.

In this democracy every citizen has a voice in our Government, speaking through their duly elected representatives in the House and in the Senate of the Congress. The knowledge of the proceedings of the Congress obtained through the record of the deliberations of its members is the greatest safeguard to our form of government. A record of these proceedings is published and is available to all through the columns of the Congressional Record—which has been expanded to chronicle not only the proceedings of the two branches of Congress, but to record the various expressions of public sentiment of all classes of people from all sections of the country, embracing all shades of public opinion through the medium of permitting members of Congress to insert statements obtained from various sources with the extension of their remarks in the Record.

So we find the Congressional Record in its present form one of the most complete presentations of public opinion in the Nation. Opinion which is a large, if not controlling, factor in shaping the policies and legislative programs of our Government.

THIS RECORD BEING MADE from day to day when Congress is in session on the whole will throughout the ages be an invaluable exposition of public opinion and the influences that have shaped the course of our Government for good or ill in dealing with human affairs.

To provide for the dissemination of information and the enlightenment of the electorate the Congress has wisely provided that the matter printed in the Congressional Record can be distributed through the channels of the mail provided the material distributed is not printed at Government expense. In carrying out the ideals of our Government and the purposes of our Constitution, it is unthinkable that anyone or any organization with the welfare of our country at heart would attack and seek to discredit this most vital process of our democracy. Yet your Washington Post, the great morning daily newspaper, that seeks the exalted position of being the leading publication at our National Capital, in an attempt to mold public opinion and to shape the course of our Government, has the effrontery to attack the members of Congress in the exercise of their constitutional function to speak for their constituents and distribute the record of their deliberations to the people of this country.

In observing the past records of this newspaper, domiciled at the seat of our Government, enjoying the advantage in many cases of the first access to membership of the several departments of government, including the legislative branches, it has been disconcerting to witness its presentation of the news and biased editorial policies in an effort to shape the policy of our Government and to divert the course of our democracy.

The Post is bold indeed in the conduct of its campaign to influence the Congress, that would close the main channel for the dissemination of information concerning the conduct of our Government and the formulation of its policies. In considering the duties of a newspaper, it is my conception that the newspapers owe a duty to their subscribers to tell the truth and that they have an obligation to the American people to adhere to the facts in printing news concerning the Government. The Post evidently seeks to undermine the very principles on which its security rests—the freedom of the press.

The A. F. L. 'Racket'

YOU PROBABLY do not remember yesterday's living human document of this fine American series but, anyway, I started out to prove something and wound up proving how easy it is to wander off your subject. So today I am going to prove what I started to prove yesterday, to-wit, that the A. F. of L. is, indeed, as I alleged a long time ago, "A great, arrogant, corrupt, hypocritical, parasitic racket which preys on union men and the public and persecutes nonmembers." I also alleged "that it had been getting away with many varieties of crime up to and including murder for years," but I won't attempt to prove up on that in this essay because there isn't enough room in a column. Anyway, the proof has been turned in, day after day, for years.

PEGLER

So now here we go.

The Executive Council of the A. F. of L. is its supreme governing body, made up of Bill Green, president; George Meany, secretary-treasurer; 15 vice presidents and a general counsel whose office corresponds to that of Attorney General in the Government of the United States.

Green, as I have shown, indorses and upholds crooks in ruling positions in the subsidiary unions, and has been known to take positive action in favor of crooks and against rank and file workers who were suffering persecution by crooks. I wish he would deny this so that I could have the opportunity to rub his nose in the truth in some very public place, but he won't.

THE GENERAL COUNSEL, or attorney general, is Joe Padway, commonly known as Judge because somewhere along the line of his career those two political faint-carbons of their old man, the brothers La Follette of Wisconsin, put him on the bench in Milwaukee. This Padway is the mouthpiece for the worst band of criminals that ever infested the union movement, meaning the movie employes' racket.

He is general counsel for that mob which is a department or subsidiary of the slimy Mafia that operated in the Chicago underworld of Capone and Frank Nitto and turned to the labor rackets as a substitute for prohibition. You ought to read some of the quotes out of his own mouth in praise of Gangster George Browne, the president of that racket, who retained him as general counsel. I have such quotes in the printed record of their conventions, but I haven't room for them here. Padway won't deny this, either, nor will he or Green deny that they indorsed the character of the nasty little crook who was sucking the blood of the poor frowsy rooming house porters, chambermaids and the like, and extorting money from the poor dumb squareheads, many of them ex-sailors, who flop around in space on leather belts washing the windows of the high buildings.

Padway got $1000 from this crook, George Scalise, for "revising his constitution," but it happened that he also signed Scalise's application for a Presidential pardon when he can have no excuse for ignorance of the fact that Scalise was merely another agent of the Chicago mob. He says he was paid at the rate of $50 a day for revising this marvelous little writ. This would mean that he spent 20 days on the job and if your little boy can't do as much in one day you had better take your little boy down and have the head-feeler give him a general going over.

PADWAY is general counsel for hotel and restaurant workers, too, and that is another honey. In Miami, where the criminal scum of the union rackets take the sun in winter, one of the biggest locals turned up under the ownership of Danny Coughlan, a brother-in-law of Al Capone, and a mugg named Al Berlin. They were shaking down bartenders and those drifters called ginger-ale waiters, whose knowledge of the job is limited to the art of snatching the tip cap off a bottle of charged water. The waiters are required to shove on the customers the charged water and other beverage goods manufactured or sold by Al Capone's old partner, Frank Nitto, a noted criminal and important member of the scum, and while this was going on this Berlin, who has plenty of gall, got on WPA as an instructor in adult education, teaching citizenship. He also holds a position in the Florida State Federation of Labor of the A. F. of L.

Chicago is another city where the bartenders, belonging to the union which is Padway's client, were used as a racket by the old mob and, just to round things out, it should be noted that both Ed Flore, the president of the hotel and restaurant workers, and Gangster Browne of the movie workers are vice presidents of the American Federation of Labor and members of Bill Green's cabinet, called the executive council.

Well, it seems to me, anyway, that I have made a pretty good case here, but I can elaborate with detailed persecutions and crimes until we run out of time. I have got it on these highbinders a thousand ways and well they know it.

I Knew Niemoeller

By Peter S. Carbone

Cleric Wasting In Nazi Camp

(As told to Kurt D. Singer, author of "Niemoeller—Soldier of God.")

MARTIN NIEMOELLER has become an old man. The once so straight figure, with its square shoulders and military bearing, is bent and weary; the once so brisk step has become a slow, tired shuffle. No longer does Niemoeller look like the man he once was—a soldier, first in the service of his country, later in that of God.

I spent several years in the concentration camp at Sachsenhausen, not far from Oranienburg, near Berlin, the same camp in which Pastor Niemoeller was interned. Everyone in the camp knew that Niemoeller, the one-time admirer of Hitler and current leader of the church opposition to the Nazi regime, was a fellow prisoner. But few of the other inmates were ever permitted to see the pastor, for Niemoeller is being kept in strict isolation from the rest of the camp.

Anyone who tries to establish contact with the aging former U-boat commander is beaten—25 blows with a club, applied while the victim is tied to the whipping post in the center of the camp's central yard. This severe punishment is intended to keep prisoners from trying to talk to the lone man in his isolated, solitary confinement shack.

Nevertheless, a number of Protestant clerics and members of the Jehovah's Witnesses sect have made the attempt, and have without grumbling accepted the punishment meted out to them when they were caught. And there are ways in which Niemoeller can be met and talked to.

I, FOR EXAMPLE, met him several times on a prisoners' transport en route to Berlin, where both he and I were sent for one of the usual periodic questionings by the Gestapo. Niemoeller also was on the same truck with me when we were both sent on to the prison hospital at Berlin-Moabit, the largest convict hospital in Germany. Here I had an opportunity to speak with Niemoeller directly.

Niemoeller avoids talking about politics and refuses to criticize his Nazi guards. He no longer trusts anyone, even a fellow prisoner, although he is always friendly and ever ready to help anyone in the limited ways open to him.

"My eyes have become weak," he told me in the prison wagon which took us to Berlin. "Without glasses, I can't see at all any more, and I can feel how the strength of my eyesight is ebbing. I don't know what the cause of it is, but then the prison diet is really not very good, and I have constant stomach pains and other digestive troubles. Perhaps that has something to do with it. Anyway, some friends of mine asked for permission to have me transferred to a sanatorium, but their application was refused.

One day—this was in the summer of 1940—Niemoeller was brought into our midst from his solitary hut. We did not immediately understand why, but we soon found out. The Nazi guards were amusement hungry and decided to "have a little fun" at the silent pastor's expense.

A FEW of the prisoners were sent to fetch a barrel from a corner of the main yard, and one of them was ordered to put on the clothing of a priest which one of the guards had brought along. Then, drawing a loaded revolver, a storm trooper forced the masqueraded prisoner to climb on the barrel and to make a blasphemous speech. The prisoner, never sure when the gun pressed against his back would go off, spoke frantically, and Pastor Niemoeller stood quietly in front of him, gray and grim faced. The drab color of his prisoner's garb emphasized the paleness of his features, and for a moment I was sure Niemoeller would collapse—but he set his jaw and stood firm.

"Well, Mr. Pastor?" jeered Storm Troop Leader Clausner, "where is this God of yours now? Why doesn't he get you out of this camp?"

Niemoeller said nothing. He did not even look up.

"You —— swine of a pastor. We shall teach you something of discipline here. Atten—tion!"

Niemoeller stiffened and raised his face, looking straight ahead.

"Now—raise your arm and say, 'Heil, Hitler! And make it loud!'"

Niemoeller kept his arm pressed to his side, but said, "Gruess Gott!" (God bless you!)

"Swine," screamed Clausner, "I suppose you think this is a sanatorium, a rest home for you, what?"

We all expected to see Niemoeller beaten, but nothing happened and the weary-eyed pastor was led back to his solitary confinement shack.

WHEN I had occasion to talk to Niemoeller on one of the prison trucks once, he said to me:

"My three sons write me that they would also like to become pastors, and that they are proud of their father. It's strange how happy one can be, even behind bars."

That winter more than a dozen men died in our concentration camp each day. The poor clothing, the cold and the inadequate diet were having their effect. Niemoeller asked for permission to bury the victims.

"But they turned me down," he told me. "It probably was a mistake to ask a favor, anyway. I was even refused a copy of the Old Testament, and they handed me a copy of Rosenberg's 'Myths of the Twentieth Century' instead.

NIEMOELLER had several chances to be released from the concentration camp, but he invariably refused to sign the required declaration of loyalty to Hitler.

"If I had been willing to take over command of a U-boat, as I did in the last war, they would have let me go," he said. "But I am no longer an officer and I feel that I can never again be a soldier in any cause other than God's."

Unlike the other prisoners, Niemoeller has not been forced to labor in the stone quarries except during his first few days in the camp. The Nazis quickly learned that it was dangerous for them to let Niemoeller mingle with the other prisoners, even at work. During his first few days on the job he quickly established himself as the uncrowned leader of the camp. He consoled everyone with his mere presence, he always had a kind word for those who were beginning to crack under the strain, and by his own example gave everyone else the moral strength to withstand the brutality of the Nazis. So after a short time the supreme commander of all the concentration camps in Germany, Eicke, decided to isolate Niemoeller altogether.

ONCE again Niemoeller had to step forward during the morning review.

"You are being written about abroad," said one of the storm troopers. "We'll have to treat you differently from the others. But don't get the idea that you have any special privileges around here, understand?"

A few days later, Niemoeller was brought back to the common yard to witness the beating of a Catholic priest and a member of the Confessional Church. He had tears in his eyes, but remained silent until the end. Then he said quietly, "Lord, forgive them, for they really don't know what they are doing."

Later, when I had an opportunity to discuss this incident with Niemoeller alone, he said simply:

"I don't know who suffered more that time—the priest who was beaten or I, who was forced to look on without being able to protest. When I was taken back to my cell, I prayed to God. I should never have been able to survive this period of suffering without my prayers.

"I am proud to be permitted to suffer in God's cause as the prophets were once permitted to suffer. God has been closer to me in my cell than ever before.

ON another occasion, Niemoeller told me:

"The Reichsbishop, Mueller, thought that my internment would expedite the Nazification of our faith, but the churches are now more crowded than ever before; and the more the faith is persecuted, the stronger it will become.

"I received 400 post cards and letters on my birthday recently. Of course, I was not permitted to read them, but they told me that I have not been forgotten by the outside world."

Niemoeller is seriously ill. He is today in the same general condition as was the one-time Nobel Peace Prize winner, Carl von Ossietzky, just before he died from the effects of his incarceration. Unless Niemoeller is released soon, he will share Ossietzky's fate and that of the thousands of others who have died in Nazi concentration camps.

Imaginary Dialogues

("Mrs. Roosevelt takes office as assistant to Fiorello LaGuardia, director of the Office of Civilian Defense."—News item.)

Mrs. Roosevelt (making her first appearance)—Good morning, boss.

Mr. LaGuardia—Good morning. What can I do for you?

Mrs. Roosevelt—I'm the new girl here. Roosevelt is the name.

Mr. LaGuardia—Oh, yes. I remember. Let's see . . . just what were you to do?

Mrs. Roosevelt—You just said to report as your assistant.

Mr. LaGuardia—So I did! Well, are you all set?

Mrs. Roosevelt—I'm willing to give you all my spare time.

Mr. LaGuardia—Come, come! You'll have to do better than that!

• • • •

Mrs. Roosevelt—Dear me! If it isn't one thing it's another these days!

Mr. LaGuardia—If it isn't one thing it's a dozen others!

Mrs. Roosevelt—I don't see how you get time to attend to so many matters in so many places.

Mr. LaGuardia—I'm puzzled about you in the same way. Gosh, I guess we are the four busiest people in America.

Mrs. Roosevelt—Four? There are only two of us.

Mr. LaGuardia—Let's not belittle ourselves!

• • • •

Mrs. Roosevelt—I'm very anxious to get going.

Mr. LaGuardia (whipping out a bunch of timetables)—So am I.

Mrs. Roosevelt—I mean to get going here . . . on the new job.

Mr. LaGuardia—Oh, yes. My error. Let's see what the set-up is. I'm head of the OCD and I need help.

Mrs. Roosevelt—Fancy Fiorello LaGuardia needing help!

• • • •

Mr. LaGuardia—It does seem fanciful, I admit. But I need a deputy and I thought that you, as the First Lady of the Land and such a great worker in so many causes, would be of great help.

Mrs. Roosevelt—What can I do that you can't do?

Mr. LaGuardia—Well, a daily column for one thing. And you have a radio sponsor, too. I heard you on the air. I went right out and bought some of that tea.

Mrs. Roosevelt—I spoke for a coffee program.

Mr. LaGuardia—Sorry! It must have been a bad reception on my radio set.

Mrs. Roosevelt—I've often wondered why you didn't do a newspaper column yourself.

Mr. LaGuardia—I guess the papers don't use that kind of language. But I've had a radio offer.

Mrs. Roosevelt—From a sponsor? Who?

Mr. LaGuardia—A cigarette company. It wanted some new noises for the modern design theme.

Mrs. Roosevelt—Are you going to accept?

Mr. LaGuardia—No. My doctor thinks I am doing too much already.

Mrs. Roosevelt—I don't blame him from worrying about the strain on you.

Mr. LaGuardia—That isn't it. He's worrying over the strain on him in worrying about the strain on me. To get back to business, do you think you understand just what our job requires.

Mrs. Roosevelt—Hark!

Mr. LaGuardia—What is it?

Mrs. Roosevelt—I thought I heard enemy bombers overhead.

Mr. LaGuardia—Excellent. You get the whole idea exactly!

Back Home Stuff

Emile Gauvreau, whose book "My Last Million Readers" has led some reviewers to speak of him as a sort of terror of tabloidia, was far from the terror type in his early days on Col. Osborn's Journal-Courier back in New Haven. This correspondent remembers him as a particularly placid and excessively shy lad whose ambition was to be a top cartoonist. He was the last one anyone back home would have thought of as a bold, bad boy of the newspaper business or a star in yellow journalism. And Guy himself would have swooned at the thought of ever having a million readers, first, last or down the middle.

He was a fairly conservative fellow, too, when he went to the Hartford Courant of Charles Hopkins Clark, and to this department his leap from the Courant to the Graphic was the long-distance brodie of newspaper history. His book reveals he is now running a farm in Pennsylvania, but we'll bet that its chief appeal is in the chance to get away off somewhere and draw cartoons.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Through Reason To Conviction

ALTHOUGH we have paid an enormous price for the Neutrality Act, we have gotten something in return.

The price has been enormous.

Thus it is certain that the refusal of Congress to repeal the arms embargo in June 1939 was an important contributing cause in precipitating the war two months later. It was a green light to Hitler that when he made war, the United States would help him by refusing to sell supplies to the Allies who were unprepared, and that the United States would help him by agreeing to let him wage lawless submarine warfare against Britain, France, the European neutrals, and any other nation he chose to attack.

The Neutrality Act was also an immensely important cause of the unpreparedness of the Allies. Because it stipulated that they could not get delivery of arms once they were at war, because it stipulated that they must pay in gold dollars for anything they bought here, the Act prevented the British and the French from placing orders in this country early enough to obtain deliveries on anything like the scale which Hitler's preparations and their own unpreparedness required. This meant that when Hitler launched his offensive in the spring of 1940, American industry was not yet geared to produce weapons in quantity. And this meant that when we adopted our own defense program, we had almost no munitions industry, and had to start very nearly from scratch. The arms embargo which was not repealed until November 1939, and the financial embargo which was not repealed until the lease-lend act of March 1941, have cost us and the British at least one year and probably more nearly two years of time to get ready to arm ourselves.

THE ONLY COMPENSATION we have had for this incalculable injury to our vital interests is that the act has prevented us from making our decisions about the war on the basis of incidents and under the stress of excited emotion. The American people have come to their decision that Hitler must be stopped by reasoning about their fundamental interests. Though the process has been dangerously slow, involving immense risks in a world where the aggressors strike like lightning, the steadfastness of the British and some good luck have thus far favored us with the time to try to understand thoroughly what we were doing before we did it.

It has been necessary for the American people to think out their vital interests because unlike the British after Dunkerque, unlike the Chinese with the enemy deep in their land, unlike the Russians after they were invaded, the American people had not yet seen the whites of their enemy's eyes. Thus the action of the United States has not grown out of the obvious and self-evident necessity of a people already under fire but out of a reasoned conviction: that it is infinitely better to prevent the disaster before it happens than a little later on to endure disaster heroically.

IT IS PLAIN that the conviction is now rapidly forming because no matter what Americans wish to do, they find that their interests, public and personal, their hopes and ambitions, are all dependent upon getting the kind of peace which Hitler can never make. The men in the camps: how long must they remain under arms? The men in the Navy: how long must they keep the watch? The men in the factories: how long must they turn plowshares into swords? When can young men in the schools and colleges again hope to plan their lives and marry and make their homes? When can men again work and trade in peace, without Government priorities and licenses and requisitions and the dislocation of their normal affairs?

The answer they all find is that there is no end to all these things for them if this country has to face alone, and armed to the teeth, a world dominated by an alliance of victorious aggressive states.

The America First Committee may tell them, Mr. Lindbergh may tell them, Mr. Cudahy may tell them, that they will not be invaded: they have listened carefully, patiently, even hopefully, and then they have realized that the future these gentlemen offer is unutterably dismal. For even if every reassuring word were true, we should be facing for an endless future the prospect of being completely conscripted and regimented, devoting at least half our national income and all our thought and energy to preparing against war. That is not a good enough future for the United States of America, and the more thoroughly the American people have looked at what the isolationists have to offer, the more they have understood that they were being advised to abandon all hope of any return to anything that could be called peace.

WHATEVER PROBLEM one examines, this is the inescapable conclusion. Argentina, for example, has just signed a trade agreement with us. It is the kind of agreement which no totalitarian state could make because it provides for an increased trade, not between governments, but between private producers in both countries.

If Hitler wins the war, the agreement will be worth nothing at all. For since all Europe will then be totalitarian and since the bulk of the Argentine exports must go to Europe, the commercial policy of the Argentine will have to conform to that of Hitler's Europe. Whatever may be the sentiments of the Argentine people, they will, if Hitler dominates Europe, become an economic colony of the Hitler empire.

Therefore in signing an agreement which recognizes the principles of normal trade, Argentina has said that she hopes for the victory of the free peoples, and that she has confidence that we shall do successfully what we have set out to do. For if we fail, Argentina will have to come to terms with Hitler's Europe or suffer the consequences.

THIS AGREEMENT is an example of what we think international relations ought to be in a decent world. But until decency is restored, this agreement cannot begin to do its good work. The pact makes it easier for the Argentine to buy American machinery and other metal products. But how much shall we be able to sell while we have to arm for the defense of this hemisphere, and where shall we find the ships for a flourishing inter-American trade while ships are being sunk at sight or diverted to indispensable war purposes?

The trade which this pact envisages can be only a mere trickle as long as this dire emergency persists. It can never be more than a trickle until there is a peace which permits us to demobilize and to reduce to some tolerable level the production of armaments. Yet this can never happen under a phoney peace which leaves the whole world mobilized and feverishly preparing for war.

THUS, this agreement which the President justly calls "a monument to the ways of peace," will remain a monument only if a genuine peace is actually won.

Drive on Rats Here Nets 3500

Washington's rat extermination campaign—started June 1—has to date netted the Health Department some 3500 rodent victims, it was announced last night by Ambrose Bell, public health engineer.

Traps and poison bait, said Bell, were laid in a 50-block area with Union Station as the hub. The hunt was confined principally to back yards and alleys, he said.

Other rat-catching activities are now under way in various sections of the city, Bell reported, and will continue indefinitely.

About 500 pests, he added, have been snared by trappers in the Zoo grounds. He urged citizens with rat complaints to contact the Southwest Health Center by telephoning National 6000.

Oklahomans Win $60,000 Suit After 13 Years

A group of Oklahoma citizens who bought oil land from members of the Choctaw Nation of Indians won a $60,000 dividend in the District Court yesterday. Their claim has been in the courts 13 years.

The oil land originally was part of the tribal domain in Carter County, Okla. The purchasers, through Trustee H. E. Ledbetter, Ardmore, Okla., first filed suit in 1928, asserting that the Government refused to pay their royalties. State and Federal courts upheld their claims, but the Government neglected to pay.

Through Attorneys Nell Burkinshaw, Frank Goodwin and Daniel B. Maher, the Ledbetter group presented the whole situation to the court here. Justice Bolitha J. Laws yesterday granted a summary judgment ordering Secretary of Interior Ickes to settle up.

Chevy Chase Club Urges Montgomery Board Of Health to Start Rat Eradication Drive

Proposal Adopted At Group's First Autumn Meeting

By Lucia Giddens

The board of health of Montgomery County was urged to start a rat eradication campaign in stores and other public places yesterday in a resolution adopted by the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase at its first fall meeting.

Mrs. Lawrence Lawlor, resolutions and legislative chairman, who introduced the motion, urged that members write individual letters to the board of health, in addition to the formal resolution.

The club voted yesterday to continue the program of defense activities set up on a temporary basis during the summer. Mrs. Edgar Fowler, who has served as chairman, was appointed to head the permanent program by Mrs. Henry DeCoursey Adams, club president.

Urho Toivola, counselor of the Finnish Legation, who addressed the club on "Finnish People," declared:

"The Finnish people cannot be converted to the belief that it is in their interest or the interest of Western civilization to render help to the Eastern power now governed according to the Bolshevik doctrines of Godlessness and Communism."

He traced the history of the Finnish people through vicissitudes of war and rigors of pioneer life. He said the nation will continue to struggle to defend its heritage.

Several hundred members attended the luncheon at the clubhouse, at which special guests were Mrs. Vestus Willcox, president of the Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Toivola, wife of the Finnish counselor.

Mrs. Fowler, making a report on the summer defense activities, said: "We found out it was easier to work than to worry."

Mrs. Joseph T. Maguire, head of the Red Cross unit of the club, urged members to register yesterday for home nursing, nutrition, surgical dressings and sewing groups.

Mrs. Frank Hoadley, who was a delegate to the convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in Atlantic City last spring, made a report on the convention. She presented the president's pin to Mrs. Adams, and also a bouquet of red roses—each one symbolizing some service which Mrs. Adams had rendered the club since 1923.

The club voted to give $100 to the Chevy Chase branch of the County Chapter of the Red Cross, to be added to a fund for sewing machines and supplies for local use.

Jeanette Bittner, soprano with the Columbia Light Opera Co., sang three songs, accompanied by Mrs. Hester Smithy.

Dr. Henry Teller Cocke, rector of All Saints' Episcopal Church, gave the invocation at the luncheon which preceded the business session.

Birth Control Clinics Pass 25th Year

The Mothers Health Association will participate in a Nation-wide observance today of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the first birth-control clinic in the United States by Mrs. Margaret Sanger.

In Washington the anniversary will be marked by a luncheon at the headquarters of the association, 715 E Street Southwest. Mrs. Prentiss Willson, president of the local group, will tell the history of the birth-control movement and of the association's plans for the coming season.

Mrs. Fontaine Bradley is in charge of arrangements for the luncheon. Reservations may be made by telephoning the Mothers Health Association.

Mrs. Sanger will be one of the speakers at a dinner in New York City on the anniversary night.

Mrs. Sanger explained that the Nation-wide meetings will be keynoted "not by recounting of our successes of the past but by stressing the need for intensifying our fight in the future."

The first clinic, opened in Brooklyn in 1916, was a forerunner of the 625 clinics now in operation, of which 192 are located in public health quarters. The Washington clinic, supported by private contributions, has been held at 715 E Street Southwest since July 20, 1937.

District Alumnae Of Sigma Kappa Name Offifficeffirs

Mrs. Clarence Q. Graham, president of the Washington Alumnae Chapter of Sigma Kappa Sorority, yesterday announced the names of officers elected to serve with her during the coming year: Vice President, Mrs. Arthur Lanigan; secretary, Miss Dorothy Sornborger; treasurer, Mrs. Robert Van Sickler.

Sorority members are looking forward to greeting their national traveling secretary, Miss Elizabeth Spencer. On October 27 she will be the honor guest at a buffet supper followed by the monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Harlow C. McCord, past president of the alumnae group and now president of Sigma Kappa's Province III.

The new president is an alumna of Zeta Chapter, George Washington University. She had the distinction of being initiated at Alpha Chapter, Colby College, Waterville, Me., where the sorority was founded 67 years ago, in November, 1874.

Mrs. Doris Simms, L. J. Canova Wed

The rectory of the Trinity Episcopal Church was the scene of the wedding yesterday of Mrs. Doris Fraser Simms, daughter of Mrs. Eva H. Fraser, of Takoma Park, Md., and Leon Joseph Canova, son of Mr. and Mrs. Enrique C. Canova, of this city. The Rev. Reno S. Harp, jr., officiated at the 11 o'clock ceremony.

The bride wore a beige wool dress with her brown hat and matching accessories and her corsage was of cream-colored Johanna Hill roses.

Miss Elinor Fraser, the maid of honor and only attendant, chose a rose wool frock with which she wore a black hat, black accessories and a gardenia corsage. Dr. James Malcolm Fraser served as best man.

Following the ceremony a luncheon for the immediate family was held at the home of Mrs. Leblond Burdett. The mother of the bride wore a corsage of yellow roses with her brown silk frock and the bridegroom's mother wore a similiar corsage on her green wool dress.

Pen Women's Group Meets Tomorrow Night

The non-fiction group, Ruby Nevins, chairman, of the District branch, National League of American Pen Women, will hold its organization meeting tomorrow night at 7 o'clock, in the studio.

The meeting is called an hour earlier in order to allow the members to attend the reception and recital in the Palm Room of Hotel 2400, which will be held the same evening.

Stick to the Style That Becomes You; Buy on Long Term Plan, Says Designer

Kiviette Advises Simple Unbroken Lines That Will Flatter Any Figure

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

DON'T be afraid of wearing last year's dress if it's a good one. And be sure to buy so that last year's dress will be good.

Kiviette

Also, if you find a style that is good for you, don't be afraid to repeat it, year in and year out!

This advice is given by Kiviette, noted designer, to women, who in the present emergency, want to buy on a long-term basis and yet look chic.

Kiviette, one of America's foremost style creators, has been visiting a local store this past week with her utilitarian collection of fall and winter clothes. Although her flair for fashions may come from her Russian parentage, Kiviette is thoroughly American in her designs, as her collection revealed. And her clothes are designed primarily for the American woman who is taking an active part in her community.

Need Holdovers

"The busy young matron," pointed out the designer, "does not have the time (nor in many cases the money) to spend on a completely new wardrobe each year. When she pays a price for a dress, she wants to feel she can wear it the following year without appearing outdated."

To acquire this type of long-term wardrobe, Kiviette suggested that a woman depend upon accessories and touches of color to add the dramatic note, rather than "tricky" and unusual costumes.

Slim lines and flowing draperies are the basic ideas of Kiviette's designs. She clings doggedly to the idea that the wearer is more important than the clothes. If her costumes play up the person, she knows they will be a success. For that reason, all her designs show long, unbroken lines, because they are the most flattering to every figure. "Even when a woman wears a tunic, it need not break the long line," said Kiviette, "if it follows the slim silhouette."

Drapery Important

Kiviette places more emphasis on drapery than any other effect she achieves. In speaking of the manner in which she applies it, she said, "I never put fullness over the stomach or give effect of an overabundance of fabric." All her fullness is handled subtly and follows that same slim sheath-line by being concentrated toward the center of the costume. Her slit-skirted apron drapery is especially effective in afternoon and evening outfits.

In praise of color vs. black, Kiviette is strongly against all-black as a conservative gesture. She thinks that in these times, especially, women should wear color to lift the spirits. If black is worn, she advises it be spiced with bright-colored accessories or relieved with color in the costume.

The Kiviette-designed dress (above), of zircon color satin-back crepe, is illustrative of two trends for fall—one in fabrics and the other in silhouette. As late afternoon dresses take to more luxurious use of self fabrics, watch for satin-back crepes to add a bit of "gleam." Also note the newest trend in silhouette emphasis—slit-skirted apron front drapery. Dresses with center-front drapery plus plain bodices, will be seen more and more as successors to peplums and tunics. The tiny chapeau is of aigrettes and the cape is Persian lamb

Insomnia May Be Due to What You Don't Eat; Vitamins Needed

By Ida Jean Kain

IN THE good old days, your stock explanation of sleeplessness would probably have been "something I ate." But nowadays when you are discomforted by long spells of insomnia, among the questions your doctor asks is what you are not eating in the way of vitamins.

Foods good for the sheep counters lead off with the sources of the vitamin B complex—which seems almost to be running our lives. These are the whole grain breads and cereals, enriched bread, meat organs, whole wheat germ and yeast. The B complex may also be obtained in concentrated form.

Milk Helps Nerves

Next come the fruits and vegetables and milk and milk products, which fill out your required list of vitamins and minerals. The estimated vitamin and mineral allowances are for people in normal health. With prolonged sleeplessness, it may be that you need to increase your daily intake. Instead of just one citrus fruit, you may require two or three for extra vitamin C. Milk and its products are your richest source of calcium, which serves as a buffer for your nervous system. Besides your daily pint of milk, you might do well to have some kind of cheese.

After that comes the matter of exercise. If you are run down, you should take it easy. Your doctor may recommend massage for a while, but usually he also suggests some sport which will take you out of doors for at least an hour a day, and preferably longer. The exercise should be mild so as not to overstimulate you or overtax your already depleted vitality.

If you can't possibly manage an outdoor sport, you can get good, exhilarating diversion with such indoor games as tennis or badminton, and you can swim at an indoor pool.

Exercise May Help

And as a last resort, there's exercise which you can do at home. It may seem like work to you, but it will help you to unkink your nerves. Since your main object is to relax your nerves, alternate mild muscular contraction with absolute relaxation. When you have completed a movement, let go—don't say to yourself, "Now, I must relax" or you will talk yourself out of it. And that's an excellent principle to apply when you are trying to go to sleep. Instead of saying over and over that you must sleep, let go.

Another sleep rule is: Go to bed to sleep. Don't try to read yourself to sleep. You probably won't bother with the dull stories that would act as a soporific, and keep hunting around until you find one that leaves you wide awake with your mind in high.

And here is a final tip: A stubborn case of insomnia warrants a visit to your doctor for a complete check-over. Insomnia may be a danger signal, but there's probably nothing serious wrong with you. However, there's nothing like knowing you're o. k.

New Type Stoves

Working hand in glove with the defense program are the new electric ranges, for they use less electricity than old types, yet provide even greater cooking efficiency. Automatic control for every sort of cooking, deep well cookers, extra-fast heating units for quick boiling and an accurate oven that requires no watching are some of the secrets of these new ranges.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Unable to Make Tolerable Adjustment to Life, Sensitive, Self Conscious, High Strung Spinster Has Serious Breakdown; How Regain Health?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am writing to you for psychological, or psychiatric, help. Also in the hope that some of your readers may have overcome a similar problem, and will tell me how they did it. I have recognized some phases of my problem in various letters that have been answered through your column. I am a woman past 30 years of age, unmarried, and an only child. I am very sensitive and self conscious; an idealist; and emotionally "high strung," taking everything seriously.

As a child, I considered myself an ugly duckling, and attributed this inferiority feeling to economic conditions which deprived me of educational advantages and nice clothes. Because of this feeling, I tried to find satisfaction in things I could do alone, such as handiwork, reading, listening to the radio and going to movies.

Recently I had a serious physical breakdown, which has given me more time to think about my situation. But I am no nearer a solution of my problem than before. Perhaps I am not able to think clearly at this time. Dale Carnegie's philosophy may help me some; but can never be more than a partial cure. I attend church regularly and contribute to its philanthropic and charitable work.

Many persons I envied and wished to imitate during my adolescent years now seem pretty cheap to me, because they are so selfish and easy going—never worrying or taking life seriously. My likes and dislikes are very strong and I hate anything cheap. I love beauty and appreciate it in many forms. In order to reach a degree of mental peace, should I learn to compromise? And if so, where and when? I hope this is coherent; but if it sounds very juvenile, how can I achieve maturity, and with it, mental and spiritual health. E. V. R.

State of Consciousness Known as "Maturity"

DEAR E. V. R.: I am not a psychiatrist and neither do I purport to be a psychologist. Therefore, if your condition requires the psychically exploratory type of treatment which accredited mental hygienists are prepared to give, you should apply to a psychiatrist in private practice, or address yourself to the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, at 1464 Columbia Road Northwest.

I may say, however, that you evince an intuitive grasp of the source and nature of your difficulty, in believing that, by achieving "mental and spiritual health," you would be automatically released from your 30-odd years' wretched maladjustment to life. Although you have recently suffered "a serious physical breakdown," the causative factors undoubtedly inhere in a sick spirit.

Why would your spirit be sick? Perhaps for lifelong lack of sufficient love—or, indeed, any understanding, reassuring special affection. Perhaps because of a continuous melancholy sense of loneliness, insecurity and neglect; of being unwanted, unneeded and unnoticed in the world of mankind. Latter-day medical findings indicate that such morbid emotions as fear, worry, resentment or a sense of guilt, when long entertained, tend to engender degenerative diseases of the psychical body—and it is well known, of course, that they quickly find their way to the surface of the personality in so-called "nervous" afflictions and symptoms.

Assuming, then, that all your misery stems from sickness of spirit, one must wrestle with the question of how to beget a condition of spiritual health that will reflect itself in improved outward circumstances. The curative process must vary with the individual. Psychiatry helps some. Dale Carnegie's philosophy may afford helpful techniques for others. But in general, one who is sufficiently sensitive in spirit to be susceptible to sickness in that domain of personality, will find his most immediate source of help in Divine Consciousness—if he will but turn there for the succor he needs.

Such books as Emmet Fox's "The Sermon on The Mount," or T. Troward's, "The Creative Process In the Individual," make clear to us how direct and simple, and how miraculously rewarding, can be this turning of the ailing personality to the Source of Life, for renewal of strength and restoration of personal perspective and emotional equilibrium.

Either of these books would give you to see, too, how stultifying has been your attitude of passing judgment upon others, as being "pretty cheap," "so selfish and easy going," etc. You have barricaded yourself against consoling companionship with men and women by such unnecessary—and instantaneously remediable—attitudes as cringing self disparagement on the one hand, and envious hostility on the other hand. Fear and resentment have held dark sway where faith in yourself—as an individual manifestation of Divine Consciousness—and love of your fellowman should have been operating to make all your experiences felicitous.

In my opinion, you can only arrive at that poised state of consciousness known as "maturity" by having done with hating (yourself, your circumstances and others), and addressing yourself to every person and situation with feelings of spirit-expanding good will and expectation of harmonious possibilities latent in even the grimmest looking prospect. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post's Woman Page.

Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

NOTICE the pretty flowered fabrics used in the movie "You'll Never Get Rich" with Rita Hayworth and Fred Astaire—they were designed by Will Funston who went back to an antique French damask for the motifs. This old damask was originally designed in the eighteenth century by Philippe de la Salle (called the painter of the loom,) a favorite designed for Madame Pompadour. She loved decorative wares from the Orient and encouraged artists who worked for her to copy them—hence many little bouquets in fabric were called procelain flowers because the motifs came from patterns on china. De la Salle also designed fabrics that were used by Marie Antoinette and later by Josephine. His flowers are doubly appealing because he was a botanist as well as an artist.

Traditional Patterns

This pretty flora along with other bolts of beauty piled high on the drapery counters of the stores this fall look doubly lovely to us because we know this may be our last abundant season. The designs offered in chintz, cretonne, sateen and textural weaves include both modern and traditional patterns,—but most of us like the traditional patterns best, the patterns taken from old documents, like the de La Salle design and like some other Funston designs. From an old mansion in Louisiana came the scrap of hand-printed wall paper that he used as a motif for a current drapery fabric shown this fall. Another popular fabric today was inspired by a Hannah Davis bandbox, while still others go back to old embroidered quilts and painted velvet motifs.

Wall Paper Designs

Flowered fabrics in decorating offer the easiest recipe for doing over a down-at-the-heels room. For example, with curtains and slip-covers of a vivid big floral pattern on a pale green ground and walls of pale green, it wouldn't much matter what kind of furniture the room has in it. Or suppose the problem is cream walls a taupe rug, nondescript furniture . . . a combination that can look pretty commonplace if you don't watch out. But try it with draperies and slip-covers of riotous flowers on a cream ground and use bottle green accessories, and those cream walls will have real character.

Belgian Minister Feted At Brazilian Embassy

Paul Spaak, Here for Labor Conference, Will Visit Canada, Then Return to U. S.

By Hope Ridings Miller

Foreign Minister Paul Henri Spaak of Belgium, in Washington for a brief visit, took over most of the spotlight last night when his old friends, the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins entertained at dinner last evening at the Brazilian Embassy.

Carlos Martins and Paul Spaak met some years ago in Brussels when the former was his country's envoy to Belgium and the latter was serving as the youngest Prime Minister ever appointed in Belgium.

Arriving by Atlantic Clipper a few days ago, Mr. Spaak came over to attend the International Labor Conference. He will be off to Canada today; will return to New York for the conference the latter part of the month, and then will be back in Washington to stay for several days before he heads for London once more.

Paul Spaak

In a brief bit of conversation with Mr. Spaak at Andre Visson's cocktail party the other afternoon, I found out that the Foreign Minister's wife and children are still in Belgium; and so is his mother. The latter, incidentally, is one of her country's outstanding women, and once served as a member of the Belgian Senate. The Foreign Minister's late father was one of Belgium's outstanding poets and was manager of the Royal Opera in Brussels; his grandfather was chairman of the Belgian Labor Party, and his uncle was Prime Minister. Charles Spaak, his brother now living in France, is regarded as one of the outstanding film writers in Europe.

So, the honor guest at last night's dinner represented one of the most talented families in Europe, and others in the company included a hand-picked group from official, diplomatic and residential circles here.

Those present were the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, who entertained at a reception at the Belgian Embassy yesterday afternoon in honor of Mr. Spaak; Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Jesse Jones, who went on later to the Military ball at the Mayflower and took their host and hostess, and several guests with them; Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf Berle, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller, Stewart McDonald, Sir Noel and Lady Charles, of London, and William S. Knudsen, who was a special center of attention.

Also sharing the spotlight was Mlle. Aimee Lopez, of New York, the famous beauty, and Luis Franklin Sampaio, the well-known Brazilian industrialist and capitalist. Still others there were Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrett and their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Merrill, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Harrison, Stewart McDonald, Mme. Van Kaathoven, Mrs. Merrill Lynch, Mrs. Nancy Van Vleck, Mrs. Nordell Lloyd, Norris Mumper, Mme. Maria Frias, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, the Brazilian Commercial Counselor and Mme. Sarmanho, and the First Secretary and Mme. de Alencastro-Guimaraes.

Oliver Eton Cromwell Feted at Dinner

In town from New York for a brief visit, Oliver Eton Cromwell was feted at a cocktail party and dinner given last night by his mother, Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, at her home on Foxhall Road. Although his visits to Washington are few and far between, Eton has many friends here, and 24 of them were on hand last night for the gala arranged in his honor.

Mrs. Stotesbury

The company gathered at 6 o'clock for cocktails and had dinner at 8. Stopping in for a drink and then going on to other parties were Mr. Cromwell's sister, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert. Staying on for dinner were Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Outhwaite, Mrs. Curtis Munson, Edward Mueller, of Connecticut; Lieut. Curtis Meyer, Miss Delores Garvin, of Los Angeles; Miss Marian O'Brien, of New York; Lieut. and Mrs. E. G. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Braxton Bryan, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Daly, Jack Saltonstall, of Boston; Maj. Edward Clark, Maj. and Mrs. John Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Corrington Gill, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sharp, Mr. and Mrs. Stacy May and James H. R. Cromwell.

This evening, the spacious dining room of Mrs. Stotesbury's home will be the scene of another party, when Mrs. Atwill entertains at dinner, one in a series she is giving this season.

Wennerbergs to Leave for Venezuela

Slated for a change of post is Swedish Counselor Folke Wennerberg, who will leave in a few weeks for Venezuela, where he will serve his country as Charge d'Affaires. Washington residents for more than five years, the diplomat and his attractive wife feel especially attached to this city, as their two younger children, Ingrid and Dagman, were born here.

Mme. Wennerberg

Mr. Wennerberg

"We tried to be as patriotic as possible while in America," Mr. Wennerberg laughingly told me the other day. "Our baby was born last Washington's birthday."

The Wennerbergs came here directly from Stockholm, where he had served for several years in the foreign office. Before that he has been en post in a number of capitals, including Bern, The Hague, Brussels, London, Tokyo, Leningrad, and Copenhagen. "But never in Central or South America," he added. "So this new assignment should be especially interesting."

When would they be going? "That's still uncertain. Probably within two months," he said. Anyway, they have a wide circle of acquaintances here who will bid them goodby with a tear in the eye. But, as has been said many times, there's nothing in Washington so constant as change; and residents hereabout have long been accustomed to waving farewell with one hand, while extending a welcome with the other.

Official, Residential Society Turns Out for Grand Military Ball At Mayflower for Benefit of Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club

Many Gay Parties Precede Festivities Sponsored by Services

By Patricia Grady

It was star-spangled defense night. Gold epaulets on glittering uniforms matched the gilt of the crowded boxes that ring the ballroom of the Mayflower as Washington officialdom and society turned out en masse last night for the festive Grand Military Ball sponsored by the Army, Navy and Marine Corps for the benefit of the Soldiers, Sailors and Marine Club.

But before the first half of the receiving line formed to greet a Capital society that was eager to show that it would turn out for an American benefit with the same enthusiasm it has been showing these many months for foreign causes, slender tapers were shining on a number of Washington dinner tables as pre-Ball parties went on the boards.

Mrs. John R. Williams Entertains at Dinner

Mrs. John R. Williams, wearing a lace dinner gown of her traditional black, entertained at a dinner at Pierre's at which the Vice President and Mrs. Wallace were the ranking guests. Also in the group were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clagett, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dewey, Dr. and Mrs. Harry Kerr and Myron Hoffer. Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken were also dinner hosts, entertaining Rear Admiral and Mrs. John Towers, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Delos Emmons, Capt. and Mrs. William Heard, Maj. L. Corrin Strong, Mrs. Eugene Carusi, Mrs. Higginson Rogers and George Abell.

Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, whose sheath dress of black crepe was worn with a flower at the bodice that matched her red satin shoes, invited a number of guests to her Le Roy Place home for a buffet dinner before the ball. In her party were the Speaker of the House, Sam Rayburn; Representative Pat Boland, Representative James Barnes, Admiral and Mrs. George Pettengill, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sard, Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Taylor of New York, Gilbert Miller, the noted producer who could not go on to the ball as he had to be at the theater in time for the 8:30 curtain of the Helen Hayes' play; former Governor of North Carolina and Mrs. O. Max Gardner, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Mrs. George Pulver, Miss Meredith Howard, David Cohn, Sol Rosenblatt of New York, Ted Wingo, Gladstone Williams, George Vournas and Mr. and Mrs. Igor Cassini.

Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward Also Is Pre-Ball Hostess

Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward took a group on to the ball after she had entertained them at dinner in her home on Massachusetts Avenue. Among her guests were the Colombian Ambassador, Gabriel Turbay; Mrs. Anjer de Behnoute, of New York; Mrs. McCerrey Wirlick, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Nagel and Clarence Hewes and his sister, Mrs. R. E. Flowerree, of New Orleans. Mrs. Ward, whose house is filled with souvenirs of her trips to the Far East, wore one of them last night. Her gold-embroidered costume gown was made of an Indian Sari, a gift of the Maharajah, of Jodhpur.

Among other pre-ball dinners were those given by Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell in her home on Tracy Place, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Whiteside, Gen. and Mrs. William D. Connors, Lieut. and Mrs. George Strawbridge and Lieut. and Mrs. Thomas Milbank.

Working their way through a cordon of service men that lined that long lobby of the hotel, the guests went down the steps of the ballroom and toward the receiving line which started out with a half dozen feminine official lights and ended up with a round dozen. Heading the group was Mrs. Henry Wallace, who was wearing a silver lame jacket with her rose chiffon dress. She and the Vice President had entertained at an informal dinner at their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel before the ball. Mrs. Cordell Hull, standing next to her in a decollete white satin gown with which she wore a long twisted string of pearls, had come up from a vacation in Staunton, Va., to be present at the party. Also in line were Mrs. George C. Marshall, wife of the Chief of Staff of the Army; Mrs. Raymond Fowler, president of the Women's Army and Navy League; Mrs. John R. Williams, Mrs. Emory S. Land, who said her admiral husband would leave the first of next week for a visit to the West Coast; Mr. Curtis Shears, Mrs. Henry Stimson, wife of the Secretary of War, who looked regal in an eggshell frock of lace; Mrs. Robert Patterson, Mrs. George Pettengill, who was wearing a pastel chiffon dress embroidered in shining paillettes; Mrs. Paul McNutt, her usual lovely self in a low-cut frock of black velvet; Mrs. John Potts and Mrs. John Gordon.

Standing in the foyer of the ballroom to greet all who came were Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, chairman of the affair, who accented her black dress with pearls, Gen. Albert L. Cox, resplendent in uniform and chairman of the floor committee, and Mrs. Irene Caldwell, who wore a brace of orchids with her dusty rose chiffon and lace gown. Mrs. Frank Knox, wearing orchids on her sable cape, made one of her first social appearances of the season with her husband, the Secretary of the Navy. Songbird Ilona Massey, of Hollywood fame, blond and lovely in a silver sequinned trimmed white dress, was dancing with Senator Theodore Greene, of Rhode Island, while her husband, the handsome actor, Alan Marshall, sat next to Mrs. Hull in her box. Mrs. James Hughes came down from her summer abode in Delaware for the party and Donald Richberg brought his aquamarine-satin dressed wife into the ballroom, stopping every few steps to greet friends.

At midnight the indispensable Gen. Cox led the three-figured cotillion. His partner in the first and V figure was Mrs. George Pettengill. In the second figures—the O figure—Mrs. Paul McNutt was on his arm and in the last, or X figure, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert was his lissome partner. The festivities were ended with the lovely Miss Massey singing The Star-Spangled Banner, giving the proper patriotic ending to a thoroughly patriotic evening.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

House Speaker Sam Rayburn will entertain at a reception on Monday evening at the Pan American Union in honor of the President of the Chamber of Deputies of the Argentine Republic and Senora de Cantilo. Sharing honors will be the members of the Argentine delegation and their wives who will come to Washington for a conference.

Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper have returned to Washington from a trip to Florida. While in Miami Mrs. Pepper was a guest of Dr. and Mrs. Jack Martin, son-in-law and daughter of Senator and Mrs. James J. Hughes. Earlier she visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Webster, of St. Petersburg.

In Key West, where Mrs. Pepper spent the "hurricane weekend," she was the guest of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Snyder. Mrs. Pepper went down to Jacksonville late last month to attend the women's national democratic day luncheon at which she was the honor guest and principal speaker. Later in DeLand, Fla., she shared honors with Mrs. Charles O. Andrews at a tea given at Stetson University.

Mme. Bostrom, wife of the Minister of Sweden, entertained at a luncheon yesterday in honor of Senhora de Martins, wife of the Ambassador of Brazil.

Dr. Vladimir Palic, Attache of the Czech Legation, and Mme. Palic will entertain at a buffet supper tonight in honor of Miss Natalia Azskenazy, at the Polish Embassy, who will leave soon for her new post as Polish Attache at Moscow.

Mrs. Huston Thompson will entertain at luncheon tomorrow in her home on Massachusetts Avenue in honor of Mrs. O. W. McNeese. The luncheon will follow the first of the latter's talks this season on current history and book reviews. Mrs. McNeese has arranged the series for the fall and winter for Friday mornings at the Sulgrave Club.

Miss du Fief Is Married To Edward K. Maloney

Trinity Church Scene of Wedding; Reception Held

Holy Trinity Church in Georgetown, where the bride's mother and grandmother were married, was the scene of the wedding of Miss Agnes Louise du Fief and Edward Kerwin Maloney yesterday morning. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. du Fief. Mr. Maloney is a son of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Maloney, of Ansonia, Conn. The Rev. Thomas A. Ward officiated.

The bride, who was escorted to the altar by her brother, John L. du Fief, wore a gown of bridal white taffeta faille fashioned with a tight bodice, full bouffant skirt and long train. Her veil of illusion was held in place with three white Prince of Wales ostrich tips. She carried a shower bouquet of purple tipped white orchids and bouvardia.

Sister Serves As Attendant

Mrs. Charles H. Hillegeist, her sister and only attendant, wore a gown of cyclamen pink crepe made on straight lines and a hat of stem green velvet with matching gloves and carried a bouquet of purple orchids.

Dr. Francis T. Sharpe was best man and the ushers were Michael F. Keigh and John F. Collberto.

During the Mass Mrs. Morris E. Colbert, soprano, accompanied by Glenn Ashley, organist, sang Paris' "Angelicus," Schubert's "Ave Maria" and "O Lord, I Am Not Worthy."

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Michael F. Keogh in Wesley Heights was the scene of the reception, where the bridal table was decorated with white and autumn flowers. Assisting Mrs. Keigh in receiving the guests were Mrs. William F. Maloney, mother of the bridegroom, who was dressed in blue velvet with matching accessories, and Mrs. Margaret M. Renshaw, maternal aunt of the bride, who wore a black velvet dress and hat.

Several Guests From Out of Town

Mr. and Mrs. Maloney left later on their wedding trip, the bride wearing a traveling costume of gold crepe with black accessories and a shoulder corsage of purple orchids.

Mr. Maloney attended the Catholic University of America and is now associated with the Federal Housing Administration in the office of the assistant controller.

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. Louis P. Sill, sister of the bridegroom, and his brother, William George Maloney, both of Ansonia, Conn.;

Holts Return To Weston, W. Va.

Former Senator Rush Dew Holt of West Virginia and Mrs. Holt left Washington on Saturday and have returned to his former home in Weston, W. Va. They will make their headquarters there in the future between Mr. Holt's speaking engagements which take them from coast to coast at frequent intervals.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph K. Chase, (Mrs. Chase is the former Miss Jane Holt, sister of Mr. Holt) have given up their home here and have moved to Wardman Park Hotel. They will leave Washington on Sunday and motor to New York. After a couple of days there they will go on up to Schenectady for a week's visit with Mr. Chase's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. B. Chase.

The Chases and their infant son, David, will sail on October 29 from New York City for Jacksonville, and will motor from there to Mobile, Ala., where they will make their home. Mr. Chase has taken a position as attorney with the Alabama Drydock Shipping Co.

Miss O'Shea, Mr. Chalmers Are Wed Here

White gladioli, chrysanthemums and palms banked the altar in St. Martin's Catholic Church for the wedding at 9 o'clock yesterday of Miss Frances Eleanor O'Shea, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. O'Shea, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Walter Henry Chalmers, of Boston. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Louis F. Miltenberger and was followed by a nuptial mass.

The bride's gown was of white silk jersey, fashioned with a sweetheart neckline, long sleeves, fitted basque with full skirt and medium-length train. Her fingertip veil was held by a Juliet cap. She was escorted to the altar by her father, and she carried a bouquet of white roses with ribbon streamers.

Miss Stella B. O'Shea, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She was gowned in periwinkle blue silk jersey with a fitted basque, long full sleeves and full skirt. She wore a Juliet cap with a short blue net and carried a bonquet of pink roses. The bridegroom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Chalmers, of Boston, had Leroy Root for his best man.

A reception after the ceremony was held in the Continental Hotel for members of the wedding party, the two families and a few close friends. Out-of-town guests were Mrs. David Haden, an aunt of the bridegroom, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Webb, of Boston, and Mrs. William Kelly, aunt of the bride, from Pittsburgh.

When Mr. and Mrs. Chalmers left for a two-week wedding trip through the South, the latter wore a green wool sport dress and brown sport coat with brown accessories and a corsage of white roses. After November 1 the couple will be at home at 17 Central Avenue, Cottage City, Md.

Cathedral School Holds Get-Together Teas

A series of informal get-together teas at which parents of the students and members of the faculty at Beauvoir, the Washington Cathedral Elementary School, will have a chance to meet each other began this week and will continue through next Wednesday.

Hostesses at the tea last night which was given for parents of the grade three students were Mrs. Edward R. Stettinius, Mrs. Willard Holbrook, Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley and Mrs. Philip Young. On Monday Mrs. Leslie Page Holcomb and Mrs. Elinor Lansing Dulles were in the receiving line when parents of the second graders met.

Tomorrow evening, for the parents of the nursery school youngsters, mothers of students in this section who will receive are: Mrs. Edwin Clague, Mrs. William Knight, Mrs. Irving McQuiston, Mrs. Herbert Mueller and Mrs. Richard Riddell.

Writer Tells Of Navy Life

Mrs. Louise Daniels, newly appointed writer about women's interests for the United States Navy, was guest speaker at the luncheon of the Soroptimist Club yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

Mrs. Daniels pointed out that her association with the Navy was a result of the question which many women in the country are asking: "What is my boy in the Navy doing?" She discussed the training of the men at Annapolis and also at Norfolk.

Mrs. Daniels was introduced by Mrs. Elinor Lee, chairman of the program committee.

Claggett Hawkins gave several vocal selections at the luncheon, accompanied by Mrs. Jewell Downs.

Guests present were Mrs. Willard Parry, of Miami, guest of Mrs. Vesta Eales, and Mrs. George Richardson, guest of Mrs. Katherine Morris.

A delegation from the Washington club will attend the South Atlantic regional conference in Baltimore October 18 and 19. Other clubs who will send delegates to this conference are Alexandria, Arlington County, Montgomery County, Prince Georges County, Westminster, Md., and Staunton, Va. Miss Viola Almony, regional director and member of the Baltimore club, will preside.

A.W.V.S. Plans Closing Fete

The outdoor "lunch bar" which the American Women's Voluntary Services has operated this summer in the park near the Munitions Building on Constitution Avenue will close Friday, with a festive flourish.

Volunteers who have worked in the bar will gather for a special luncheon of their own that day. Musicians from the Navy Band will play.

Since the opening of the bar about July 1 an average of 1200 persons a day has been served. It was opened by the A. W. V. S., of which Mrs. Raymond Lee is chairman, as a service for the defense workers in buildings in that neighborhood that they might have opportunity to relax under the shade trees during their lunch period.

An "officers' club" of Army and Navy officials had an attendance of approximately 50 daily at tables under the trees.

The bar had to be closed only one day on account of the weather.

Although the food served "only a little above cost," an A. W. V. S. official said, a sum has been accumulated to go into the organization's defense activities.

Sacred Heart Alumnae Plans Dinner Tonight

The Alumnae of the Academy of the Sacred Heart of Mary will have their annual fall dinner at the Parrot Tea Room tonight at 7 o'clock.

Miss Marcella Lenigan, president of the alumnae, has appointed Miss Evelyn M. Collins, chairman of the dinner.

After dinner a short business meeting will be held at which the plans for the coming year will be made.

Alpha Chi Omega Marks Founder's Day

The Alpha Epsilon Alpha alumnae chapter and the Beta Rho active chapter of Alpha Chi Omega celebrated the fraternity's founder's day with a banquet at the Kennedy-Warren, last night.

Mrs. Joseph H. Ball, wife of the senator from Minnesota, as toastmistress, introduced Mrs. Gaines B. Gough, president of Alpha Epsilon Alpha, and Miss Edith Mitchell, president of Beta Rho. Following their remarks, a skit was presented by the members of Beta Rho chapter from American University.

Mrs. Samuel Towne conducted a quiz program on the customs and traditions of the fraternity.

Mrs. John W. Houser, national defense chairman for Alpha Chi Omega, reported on the recent national convention, at Pasadena, Calif., which she attended as the delegate from Alpha Epsilon Alpha, and outlined the plan of the fraternity to aid a hostel in England for the treatment of bomb-shocked children.

In conclusion Mrs. Ball talked on what women in Washington can do in civilian defense, with particular emphasis on Alpha Chi Omega's place in such a program.

Mrs. Eleanor Nash was in charge of the program, arrangements and decorations for the banquet. Mrs. Leroy C. Brown handled the reservations.

Mrs. Weller to Set Up Booth at Food Show

Mrs. Marcella Weller has been appointed by the Central Volunteer Bureau, of the D. C. Defense Council, to organize and establish a national defense booth at the Independent Food Distributors Show at the Riverside Stadium next week.

Mrs. Weller will have the cooperation of the WPA in constructing the booth, of the Red Cross in supplying uniformed personnel, of the American Legion and the American Legion auxiliary in providing stands of colors and men and women in uniform. Defense bonds will be sold and information of defense will be provided.

U. D. C. Officers To Give Party

Mrs. Livingston Vann, jr., president of the District division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, announced yesterday that a benefit Halloween party will be given by officers of the division, October 29, at the Wardman Park Hotel.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Federal Workers' Union Faces Fight for Funds

Chairman Robert Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee yesterday said on the House floor what a great many Federal officials and employes alike believe—that the United Federal Workers of America, the C. I. O. union, made a mistake when it filed a suit to compel immediate payment of raises to Federal employes under the recently-enacted uniform promotion act. Ramspeck, who wrote the act along with Senator Mead, said the suit had antagonized members of the House Appropriations Committee, the body that must approve funds to meet the promotion costs.

The chairman didn't say so directly on the floor, but he feels the uniform salary promotion act was one of the most constructive pieces of employe legislation that Congress has approved. He's proud of the part he played in getting it through his committee and the House. Now he's afraid the U. F. W. A. action will destroy the entire program.

"The U. F. W. A." said Ramspeck, "isn't serving the interest of Federal employes in undertaking to high-pressure the Congress into this action. I think they ought to wait the orderly procedure of the Appropriations Committee which gave us assurance before the bill was considered that if we followed the budget plan they would go along with it." The suit was filed by the C. I. O. union on behalf of Ben Dimond, an employe at Railroad Retirement Board. It's estimated that 200,000 Federal employes would be raised by the plan the first year it's in effect. The act was supposed to become effective on October 1, but Congress hasn't yet voted the money. Hence the U. F. W. A. legal action and trouble.

Retirement Bill

The Ramspeck retirement bill yesterday was favorably reported to the House by the Civil Service Committee. The author expects action within a few weeks. He'll ask the House for unanimous consent to consider the bill. The measure provides for an increase in the employe contribution from 3½ to 5 per cent, optional retirement at 60 after 30 years' service, and coverage of all Federal employes under the retirement system. More than 400,000 employes are not now protected by a pension system.

Smith Brookhart, jr. is the most recent attorney to leave SEC for OPM. SEC has lost nearly 200 of its employes to defense agencies . . . Bert Oppenheim, one of Wage and Hour's key officials, has resigned to accept a better job with the Office of Price Administration . . . NFFE's War Department local will meet tonight at 1732 Massachusetts Avenue to hear reports of the recent national convention by Gertrude Coyle, William Kinney and Reginald K. Gheen . . . E. J. Skidmore, personnel director of the Indian Service, is carrying out a policy that may eventually work himself out of his job. The policy is giving Indians jobs in the Indian Service. Of the 12,500 jobs, more than half are now held by Indians.

For the most naive question of the year we suggest the query directed to Lend-Lease Administrator Edward Stettinius by Representative Johnson, West Virginia Democrat. Asked the legislator: "How are these dollar-a-year men operating? Are they satisfactory?" Stettinius, who was a dollar-a-year man himself up until a few weeks ago and who brought into defense jobs many dollar-a-year men, gulped several times and answered solemnly: "There are no more patriotic citizens in the country than these dollar-a-year men."

The District Defense Council is dickering for a building at the corner of Ninth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest to establish a service club for visiting Army and Navy men. The District government will be called on to foot the bills for rent and furnishings.

Anticipated "axing" of 300 at U. S. Housing Administration won't interfere with the agency's plan to decentralize and set up five more regional offices, an official said yesterday. The official said it would cost nearly $100,000 to decentralize and that the money would have to be made available to do the job . . . The White House yesterday confirmed the report that Judge Samuel I. Rosenman had been asked by the President to work on a plan to coordinate the various Federal housing agencies.

Overdoing It, General?

Maj. Gen. Lloyd R. Fredendall, commanding the Second Army Corps, had this comment of an over-zealous artillery officer who had moved his guns so far forward that they were right on top of infantry:

"I like to see the artillery well forward, but I don't want to see them so damned far up that they have to put bayonets on the 75's!"

Independence Widening Project Is Opposed

Citizens' Group Calls District Housing As Important as Traffic Problem

The Southwest Citizens Association last night empowered the executive committee to take steps to postpone the widening of Independence Avenue and the consequent razing of the 50 houses along the thoroughfare.

Harry S. Wender, reelected president at the meeting, asserted that the housing problem in Washington took precedence over the traffic problem, and charged that beautification was the primary reason for the street improvement. The houses are of historical importance, he stated, and their owners are among the oldest residents in Washington.

The committee also was authorized to protest to the War Department and the District Commissioners against establishing a prophylactic station for soldiers in the unused Rossell School, and to recommend the station be conducted in the Southwest Health Clinic. To renovate the schoolhouse a fund of $1900 has been proposed, it was stated. This sum, devoted to the health center would provide adequate facilities in this building, members said.

Other officers elected yesterday include Robert C. Marshall, vice president; Mrs. Robert Hull, secretary; Raymond E. Robinson, treasurer, and the Rev. Harry V. Porter, corresponding secretary.

A resolution recommending to the police the registration of pinball machines was adopted. The meeting closed with the showing of moving pictures illustrating activities of the Community Chest.

Rhode Island Avenue

An executive committee of the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association last night called on the Burroughs and National Gateways Citizens Associations and the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars to join in planning civilian defense in Northeast Washington and east of Sixteenth Street.

The committee invited the other organizations to send subcommittees to a joint meeting tomorrow at 8 p. m. at 2035 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast.

Sixteenth Street Highlands

The Sixteenth Street Highlands Citizens Association last night called on the Board of Zoning Appeals to ban the rehearing of zoning appeals within two years after the original hearing.

At its regular meeting in Brightwood School, Thirteenth and Nicholson Streets Northwest, the association also unanimously reelected all officers and resolved that the proposed establishment of a "super market" at Colorado Avenue and Fourteenth and Kennedy Streets would increase the already serious traffic hazard at the intersection as well as decrease residential property values.

In calling for restrictions on rehearings of zoning appeals, Myron S. Anderson, chairman of the association's committee on zoning, said much time was lost in arguing cases for the second and third time in a period of several months or a year. Frequently no new issues have arisen in cases reheard, he declared.

Dahlgren Terrace

A general reorganization to increase interest and attendance was proposed and adopted by members of the Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Association last night at their meeting in the Crosby Noyes School, Tenth and Franklin Streets Northeast.

President John P. Cahill said a committee will be appointed at a later date to work out ways and means of effecting this reorganization.

A recommendation that expenditures for the year in the District be kept within anticipated revenue and that economics be practiced by nonessential units was adopted.

The association urged that more police officers be appointed for the city and indorsed the present police department administration. Among other resolutions adopted were:

That the Public Utilities Commission conduct a study of the Capital Transit Company's earnings last year with a view to revival of the $1 weekly pass; another condemning any increase in the District water rates; that the office of People's Counsel for the District be filled, and that there be no increase in the real estate tax here or any proposal for a sales tax.

North Randle Community

Assignment of motorcycle policemen to precincts instead of to the Traffic Bureau was proposed last night by the North Randle Community Citizens Association.

The association, meeting at the portable school at Minnesota Avenue and Ely Street Southeast, agreed that motorcycle officers would give more time to sectional traffic problems, such as guarding school crossings, if they were placed under jurisdiction of precinct stations.

The association also voted for cooperation in the civilian defense program and resolved to inquire whether the erection of a permanent school building at the site of the portable school would be affected by the SPAB's curtailment of nondefense construction.

R. C. Copeland was nominated for president to succeed A. C. Edwards, who declined to stand for reelection after serving two terms.

Andrew McGarraghys Celebrate Occasion With Worship, Party

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McGarraghy yesterday celebrated their golden wedding aniversary surrounded by their family and many friends.

In the morning, a mass was celebrated at their home, 139 North Carolina Avenue Southeast, by the Rev. Remegius Fleishell, of Holy Name College, Catholic University, assisted by the Right Rev. Msgr. Eugene J. Connelly, pastor of St. Peter's Church, Second and C Streets Southeast, which the couple has attended for many years.

The family and friends had breakfast at the Continental Hotel afterward, and last night participated in a get-together at the McGarraghy home. The couple has six children—Alfred, vice supreme master of the Fourth Degree; Knights of Columbus, the Calvert Province; Joseph C., Mrs. Chapin Bowman, Miss Imogene B. McGarraghy, Francis and Andrew McGarraghy, all of Washington, and 10 grandchildren.

Lifelong Washington residents, the couple has lived near Capitol Hill since their marriage in 1891. A printer, McGarraghy worked on the National Republican newspaper in 1881, and later for the Washington Star and The Washington Post, and in 1930 retired from the Government Printing Office. He is a member of the Columbia Typographical Union, the Knights of Columbus and the Holy Name Society of St. Peter's.

Mr. and Mrs. Breast Are Feted by Son At Chicken Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. James O. Breast, of 2614 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast, well-known Woodridge couple, yesterday celebrated a half century of marriage.

The couple was treated to a fried chicken dinner at Taneytown, Md., last night by their son, James, jr., and their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. W. Earl Dalrymple, of Bethesda, Md. Later the family gathered at the Dalrymple home at 7403 Custer Road.

Breast was for 23 years employed at the old Arlington Hotel, which stood on the site of the present Veterans' Administration Building. He also worked at the Lafayette Hotel. He retired 13 years ago.

Last Sunday the couple was honored by the congregation of McKendree Methodist Church, South Dakota and Rhode Island Avenues Northeast, where they have worshiped since moving to Woodridge. The Rev. Charles F. Phillips presented them with a basket of flowers. They previously attended Metropolitan Presbyterian Church at Fourth and B Streets Southeast.

Their son, James, makes his home with them.

D. C. School Board Names New Officials

The Board of Education yesterday moved to appoint two additional assistant superintendents of schools in the District to handle budget matters and curriculum revision following the recommendation of Superintendent Frank W. Ballou.

The new men are Dr. Carrol R. Reed, superintendent of schools in Minneapolis, Minn., who will be placed in charge of curriculum revision, and A. W. Heinmiller, director of procurement in the District schools office of business affairs, to be budget director.

Dr. Reed's job will be, according to Dr. Ballou, to devote his full time to "continuous educational leadership" in a comprehensive program of curriculum revision in the District schools from the kindergarten through the teacher's colleges.

First Assistant

He will be appointed to the rank of first assistant superintendent, Dr. Ballou asserted, and at the end of three years, when it is expected the project will be completed, the new office will be abandoned. A graduate of Harvard, Dr. Reed received his master of arts degree from that university in 1914.

Referring to his recommendation for the appointment of a budget director, Dr. Ballou declared that in the past the policy was followed of having the various assistant superintendents prepare and justify their budget estimates.

Heinmiller's Duties

"Nowadays the budget procedure has become highly specialized and technical," Dr. Ballou said. "It is under practically continuous consideration during every month of the school year." Heinmiller's duties as outlined by Dr. Ballou will be principally the gathering of information from the school officers and the public regarding school needs; and the preparation of necessary estimates to cover the meeting of those school needs.

Personnel transfers and promotions approved by the board included the transfer of H. B. Jones as administrative principal of Ambush-Smallwood School to the same job in Burrville School; the promotion of L. R. Evans from English teacher to head the Ambush-Smallwood School.

Mrs. G. T. Peterson to be transferred from Browne Junior High School to fill the principalship at Randall Junior High School with W. B. Stinson, mathematics teacher at Browne, filling the place vacated by Mrs. Peterson.

Among other recommendations approved yesterday were: continuance of foreign language classes in the national defense training program at request of the War and Navy Departments; abolishment of the kindergarten at Wormley School to be reestablished at Garfield School; and transfer of the dental clinic at Henry School to Gage School.

Names for two schools in the southeast section were adopted. The new names are, Anne Beers, Thirty-sixth Place and Alabama Avenue Southeast, and Adelaide Davis, Hillside Road and Alabama Avenue Southeast. Both were former principals in that area.

Music Guild Presents Its String Quarte

By Ray C. B. Brown

Chamber Music Guild presents its string quartet (Frank Gittelson, Alexander Levin, Benjamin Sosner and Marcel Ancher) on Wednesday night in Almas Temple. Assisting artists: Sylvia Meyer, harp; Kenton Terry, flute. Program: Suite for flute and string quartet (Bach-Guzman), Quintet for strings and harp (Arnold Bax), "Maid of Taos" for flute and string quartet (Edwina McCarty Davis), Three Pieces for flute, harp and string quartet (Daniel Gregory Mason), Dances for harp and strings (Debussy).

Having tried two locations for its concerts during the past year, the Chamber Music Guild began its second season last evening in the more commodious quarters of Almas Temple, and one was pleased to note the size of the audience showed a commensurate increase. Inasmuch as the organization wishes to stimulate a wider interest in chamber music, it must have been gratifying to the directors to observe the response. Frank Gittelson and his associates in the string quartet had prepared an interesting program which enlisted the services of two guest artists borrowed from the National Symphony Orchestra, Sylvia Meyer and Kenton Terry.

BROWN

Interesting is no casual adjective in the case of a program which included first performances of two works dedicated to the Guild and readings of two other compositions infrequently heard by the most assiduous followers of chamber music. The only old friend on the list was the dual dance which Debussy wrote for students of the harp without the remotest idea that it would become a part of the repertoire of virtuosos.

The first of the premieres was a suite arranged by Luis Guzman for flute and string quartet out of three sonata movements by Sebastian Bach, the andante taken from the B minor flute sonata, the lento from an organ sonata and the allegro from the third flute sonata. Thanks to the judicious selection of material and the excellence of the scoring, the arrangement had coherence and solidity, and the instrumental color was such as Bach would approve.

American in both inspiration and thematic material was the second premiere, Edwina McCarty Davis' "Maid of Taos" for flute and string quartet. The subject is a tragic romance between a Paiute warrior and a maiden of the pueblo of Taos, and the emotional melodies are authentically Amerind. The writing is clear and straightforward, without any intrusion of modernistic effects.

Of special beauty was the quintet for harp and strings by Arnold Bax whose imagination likes to roam in the Keltic twilight. Masterly in the handling of the instruments for their tonal values, this poem has the brooding loveliness of an old legend told with sadness by the fireside.

The remaining novelty was by Daniel Gregory Mason in the forms of a sarabande, elegy and caprice for flute, harp and string quartet. While banded together as Opus 13, these three pieces were written at intervals between 1911 and 1922. They embody the fine taste, the academic skill and the intellectual keenness which characterize Mr. Mason's music. His is a captivating blend of American breeziness and French precision.

War Draws Near U. S. Boudoirs; Copper Curb May Affect Lipsticks

Nelson Warns Of Sacrifices to Come In Address Here

The Supply Priorities and Allocations Board soon will place drastic restrictions on civilian use of copper, perhaps even to prohibiting brass lipstick containers, Donald M. Nelson, SPAB executive director, told the Washington Board of Trade last night.

"And you can imagine my job facing 50 million women in this country with that," he added. "If any of you want to volunteer for my job just come up here and you can certainly have it and I'll beat you running for the door."

Taking the copper shortage as an illustration of the priorities problem faced by the Nation, Nelson gently lectured to the 1,000 Board of Trade members at the Willard Hotel on the need for their cooperation in SPAB's effort to "do this job now and get it over with."

Bronze Caskets Banned

He said the use of copper would be prohibited in lamps, ashtrays, cuspidors, water spouts, doorknobs—for all ornamental or decorative purposes. Even bronze caskets for burials will be banned, he said.

As for the reason, Nelson asserted the present copper shortage was "critical," with only 138,000 tons from mines in this country and South America available in October and 144,000 tons needed this month for "strictly defense purposes" alone. The total demand in October is 259,000 tons, he reported.

For 1942, said Nelson, "all of the copper we can hope to get" is 1,800,000 tons while one million tons is needed for military uses alone and 300,000 to 500,000 tons necessary for "the absolute civilian economy."

That leaves only 300,000 tons for ordinary civilian uses where one million tons could easily be consumed, he said.

U. S. Faces Other Shortages

Similar shortages in steel, aluminum, magnesium—"I could name 25 items"—are facing the country, Nelson said, adding: "That list is broadening and is going to continue to broaden."

The former Sears-Roebuck executive said that the priorities system was the only answer to the problem because "we've reached into the barrel for quantities of matter . . . and we are really getting to the point were there are very definite, acute and serious shortages."

He told the Washington businessmen that it wasn't priorities that was bothering them, but shortages and the question squarely facing every businessman is:

"Would you rather get it over with quickly or let it go along 5, 10, 15, 20 years?—I don't know how long it might last."

Predicts Further Sacrifices

Declaring the sacrifices already made are nothing to what the businessman may be called upon to make, Nelson declared:

"It isn't going to be over until we have fulfilled the mission which I think this Nation has set out to fill. We've got to see that Hitler is licked . . . You can't back up. There is only one way to go, and that is forward. There is only one way to get out of this marsh of a priorities system."

The Board of Trade, at its first membership meeting of the 1941-42 season, also heard Maj. William A. Brewer and Col. Lemuel Bolles urge cooperation in the civilian defense program.

Col. Bolles, director of civilian defense in the District, declared the effort here was lagging.

"Very frankly," he declared, "in developing, staffing and implementation for civilian defense, this area has not kept pace with other communities of a similar size in other parts of the United States."

He did not place the blame and said he was not finding fault.

"But the situation exxists," he declared, and it must be remedied. If the job is not done properly, he added, "there will be a lot of people who will not sleep comfortably for the rest of their lives."

Chevy Chase

The Chevy Chase (D. C.) Citizens Association resolved last night to ask the District Commissioners to take whatever action is necessary to rid Chevy Chase of rats and other rodents.

The action, taken at a meeting at E. V. Brown School, followed a report by Dr. C. W. Culver, chairman of the association's public health and sanitation committee, that the Public Health Department's rodent eradication program was being curtailed for lack of funds.

Noting the "alarming increase" in District traffic fatalities, the association called on the Commissioners to take the lead in organizing "such a broad and sound accident prevention campaign as will enlist the active and intelligent cooperation of every District official and citizen who has occasion to walk and drive on our streets."

In other resolutions, the association proposed lighting and equipping of the rifle range at Woodrow Wilson High School, and pledged its support to the Police Department in enforcing regulations.

Backfire Puts Motorcycle Afire

The backfire of a motorcycle set the vehicle on fire yesterday afternoon in Post Square, but was extinguished by the driver before the firemen could arrive.

George Quigley, of 4329 Schley Avenue, Bradbury Heights, Md., driver of the motorcycle, rushed into the Munsey Building next door to The Post Building and put the fire out with an extinguisher.

Success as Breadwinner Oddly Went to His Feet

At Age of 8, Dancer Tapped Early Fame; 'Bomber' a Short-Reeler Worth Noting; 'One Foot in Heaven' Blocks 'Great Guns'

HAVING BEEN UNABLE to wangle the time from a busy midweek for yesterday's Fort Belvoir preview of "You'll Never Get Rich," we are grateful to somebody or other for reminding us about Fred Astaire and what he isn't like.

FRED ASTAIRE

The average family breadwinner, on the evidence of most composite pictures, is a paunchy fellow with thinning hair, the ability to bowl 175 on good nights and a bewildered outlook on the world outside the little corner of it in which he labors and, by the grace of God, lives. Apart from the hair—if enough of it remains to have a part—Fred Astaire doesn't look anything like that and the resemblance was even less when he was 8 years old. At that age his feet began to bring in the bacon for a family of four. No one needs to be told that he is still dancing.

Fred was born in Omaha, Nebr., under the family name of Austerlitz, but with his sister, Adele, early whittled away the Napoleonic implications and pared the name down to the one that has become synonymous with the best dancing apt to be encountered on this terrestrial globe.

What started the youngsters on their professional way was the decision of their mother to send Adele to dancing school. Fred, two years younger, went along for the ride and to keep his sister company. Being a little bored by the wallflower role, he joined the other little boys and girls on the floor. It was to show off Adele that the mother took the kids to New York. Too advanced for ordinary, run-of-the-mill teachers, they were put under the charge of experts capable of creating routines comprehensive enough to embody all that they already knew.

That really, is about as far as it is necessary to go. Adele married into the British peerage and Fred graduated to the top of his class. If you think he didn't, it will only be necessary to take a gander at "You'll Never Get Rich"—with Rita Hayworth, of the dancing Cansino family, costarred—when it opens on the Earle screen this Friday.

Private telephone advices from the scene of action yesterday afternoon apprised me of what I had missed. Our day's deficiencies included a pleasant drove to Fort Belvoir from 11:30 a. m. to 12:05 p. m., lunch in the officers' mess, a tour of inspection of the camp and a screening of the picture before an ostensible audience of officers and their wives which consisted preponderantly of the wives, with only a sprinkling of uniforms. It seems the officers, both commissioned and noncoms, are at the fort to work at the serious business of national defense and not to sit around looking at even the best of the pictures portraying Army life set to music.

And Some Get Down to Brass Tacks

Along with the fictional screen items concerned with the various aspects of imaginary service life, an increasing number of official short-reelers dealing with the real thing are finding their way to the screen. This is being seen to largely by the Office for Emergency Management Film Unit. The latest and best of its one-reel productions is said to be "Bombers," hitting the Washington silver sheets this weekend. All scenes in the film were photographed at the plane plant of the Glenn L. Martin Co., in Baltimore, manufacturers of the B-26, one of the most efficient multiple-engine bombers that has been developed in the present emergency. The film gets its title from this ship. The commentary for this documentary was written by The Post's Carl Sandburg, Pulitzer Prize-winning biographer of Abraham Lincoln. Thomas Chalmers speaks it. We shall have an eager eye out for this subject at RKO-Keith's today—which ought to be warning enough that there will be more about it here tomorrow.

Our contention that "One Foot in Heaven" would be found less a piece of churchly pulpiteering than a bit of pulsating entertainment, gaited to the taste of any amusement-seeker, is in process of being pretty conclusively borne out. Costarring Fredric March and Martha Scott in roles for which they are ideally suited, it played a whale of a week at the Earle and on the strength of its popularity on Thirteenth Street was immediately whipped around to the Metropolitan to dislodge the screen attraction originally booked. It has done so well there than an extension of the run on F Street has become imperative. So "One Foot in Heaven" will go into its third downtown week on Friday, with Laurel and Hardy in "Great Guns" still aiming at an eventual turn at bat.

If-the-Navy-Doesn't-Mind Note

If Laurel and Hardy have one foot anywhere, by this time it certainly ought to be "on deck."

Columbia

Beginning this morning, the purling cadences of imaginative romance and the lilt of familiar songs will take possession of the screen at Loew's Columbia. "Smilin' Through," all done up in exquisite Technicolor its third time around, will revive its F Street run, with Jeanette MacDonald, Gene Raymond, Brian Aherne and Ian Hunter portraying the leading roles.

The degree to which the new musicalized version of the old reliable love story will be enjoyed will depend upon the spectator's enthusiasm over a tale of devotion that always has been fantastically sentimental. It is as well performed in its newest manifestation as need be, and in many respects this third picturization is the best of the lot, even if Jeanette MacDonald is not a Norma Talmadge nor yet a Norma Shearer.

One suspects that those who deem the present "Smilin' Through" an inferior utilization of the perennial story of Moonyeen and Kathleen merely have grown up since they saw the first.

Palace

The names of Clark Gable and Lana Turner, costarred for the first time, would have been enough. But costarred in a picture that moves with the speed of the wind and embodies all of the romantic, melodramatic and comic elements that long usage has proved infallible, the thing was a certainty. Of course, "Honky Tonk" is being continued a second week on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater.

In this production, despite the fact that it is fundamentally and inescapably a "Western," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has gone all-out in the matter of casting and production. The robust and arrogant Mr. Gable and the blond and ingenuous Miss Turner have been surrounded by a splendid group of players for this sort of thing, headed by Frank Morgan, Albert Dekker, Marjorie Main, Chill Wills and Claire Trevor.

The film is a luscious study in frankness and boudoir boldness that has a little more thoughtfulness wrapped up in its turbulence than is usually the case.

Let There Be Light

Hollywood, Oct. 15.

When I walked on the "Shanghai Gesture" set, Joe von Sternberg was saying, "No, no, no, I want ALL the lights focused on her REAR!" You can tell from this, Joe's up to his old tricks which will make history. So will "Shanghai Gesture." He insists every portion of your anatomy be as well lighted as your face. The setting which you'll rave over was done by Key Luke, worked out from Museum screens on huge mirrors. The most fabulous Chinese characters and colors, their faces all are etched on the mirrors against a gold background. When the picture's finished, screens will be auctioned off for aid of China.

GENE TIERNEY

I saw the dailies run off with Ona Munson, Phyllis Brooks, Gene Tierney, Walter Huston and Madama Ouspenskaya and their performances have Joe talking in his sleep.

Wonder why Warners wouldn't buy the life story of Sarah Bernhardt when Bette Davis was so crazy about it? But Bette's found an asset through reading the story. She's become friends with Sarah's granddaughter, who wrote it. Studio also turned down "Devil in Satin," another one Bette wanted.

New York Roll Call

New York, Oct. 15.

GEN. ROBERT WOOD: Haven't you been conferring with Wendell Endicott and Mrs. Shipley, about the conditions under which you might alter your isolationist stand? . . . GEORGE GALLUP: The fact that this year's registration is 33,000 less than in 1937 shouldn't be any indication of a political trend. At least 50,000 to 75,000 New York City voters are in the Army now . . . LANA TURNER: 24 hours after you notified Tony Martin that the romance was over, he confessed that he was bearing up, and that the torch was not too heavy. "How many gals have you been seeing, to help you forget?" he was asked. "Not many," he shrugged. "Just Carole Landis."

LANA TURNER

BILL BULLITT: You're losing your aide, "Ogie," who's going to England. Tony Biddle is borrowing his services . . . RKO: Michele Morgan, the screen actress, has received word from her former agent in Paris—Madame Tual—that if she persists in appearing in the new movie, "Joan of Paris," her mother and other relatives will suffer . . . COMMISSIONER OF JURORS: Is it true that one of the jurors already selected in the Murder, Inc., trial of Lepke, et al., will be excused—because of his one time acquaintanceship with a late victim of Murder, Inc? . . . HARNETT KANE: Orson Welles may get the chance he wants, to play the role of Huey Long, in the movie adaptation of your best-selling expose, "Louisiana Hayride."

CLIFFORD ODETS: Yesterday, while Tallulah Bankhead was rehearsing in your new play, "Clash by Night," she met Director Lee Strassberg's 3-year-old daughter Susan. "Do you know me?" asked Tallulah. Susan answered: "No. Who are you?" Tallulah said: "I'm Tallulah Bankhead" . . . The 3-year-old replied: "Why?" . . . BUDDY DE SYLVA: Before Oscar Levant's Washington concert on Saturday, an interviewer asked him: "In your next movies, are you still going to play the role of Levant?" Oscar told him: "Due to my limitations—I have to" . . . GILBERT MILLER: Billy Rose saw your production of "Anne of England," and then said he had no confidence in such historic plays. "I don't like any plays," said Rose, "where they write a letter with a feather."

CORDELL HULL: Herbert Hoover soon will resume his campaign to have America feed the occupied countries. Hoover believes that our duty to do so was stressed by the Vatican, in the conversations with Myron Taylor . . . SCREEN ACTORS GUILD: Victor Francen, the famed French actor who is here now, was offered the job of playing the role of Pierre Laval, in which he is to say: "A victorious Germany is the only salvation of our country." Francen, who could have used a job, spurned the offer . . . GENE AUTRY: George Miller, the newsphotographer who was injured while taking pictures of the rodeo, had a plaster-cast placed on his leg. He had but one regret: "Too bad the negative was destroyed, and the picture ruined."

JOHN STEINBECK: Luther Adlers new beard was grown for his screen test in "Tortilla Flats" . . . ATTORNEY GENERAL BIDDLE: Every insurance company—except the one which finally delivered it—refused to put up a bail bond for G. S. Viereck.

SAM RAYBURN: Congress may be surprised this week by the resignation of an Eastern member of the House of Representatives under startling circumstances . . . J. PETRILLO: When you as head of the Musicians Union, ordered the dancebands yanked from remote control broadcasts last week, you spoiled the chance for the song, "Jim," to make the Hit Parade. That song, written by your brother, Caesar Petrillo, needed only one more week's plugging . . . ALFRED G. VANDERBILT: Was your trip to Lexington, Ky., last week, made for the purpose of entering a bid for one of the famous 2-year-old horses in the country?

Pierce Hall

In its effectively refurbished auditorium, the Pierce Hall Players last night offered the first production of its twelfth season, "The Male Animal." The James Thurber-Elliott Nugent comedy captured a friendly audience's immediate fancy and will be repeated this evening in the hall at Fifteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest.

Director Howard Wentworth's cast was, with three exceptions, the same as that which he presented with such success in the play's first local amateur performances last summer at the Cross Roads Theater. LeRoy Gaintner plays the bewildered professor with facile simplicity and W. Julian Hatcher is humorous as the blunt "old grad." Vivian Barrett, Ted C. Gardner and Art Mahew, as the wife, the trustee and the current fullback, respectively, are new faces in the cast. Gordon Gray and Grace Pearson are likable as the young couple. Florence Woodard, Sidney Bassler, Edith Aymer, Joe Rotowitz and Robert E. Colvin complete the company.

The auditorium's new curtain, drapes and paint treatment are admirably adapted to the colonial aspect of the hall, making it one of the pleasantest rooms of its kind in town.

Streamlined Spectacle Is A Civic Hit

By Nelson B. Bell

"The American Way," the George S. Kaufman-Moss Hart cavalcade of modern America from the year 1896 to the present, was converted into a particularly auspicious vehicle for the opening of the Civic Theater's new season at Wardman Park last night.

With fine judgment and conspicuous skill, Director Leon Askin has converted a work which was originally presented on one of the largest stages in the country as an enormous spectacular drama into a compact and swift-moving panorama of vignettes that sacrifices little of the patriotic fervor of the story and preserves enough of its color and excitement to compound an unfailingly interesting and timely entertainment.

In tracing the rise of an immigrant German to a position of wealth and power in a small Ohio city over a span of almost half a century, the authors pointed their narrative with virtually every important political, economic and social development from the McKinley-Bryan campaign to the rise of Nazism. The free silver issue, woman suffrage, the beginning of effective labor organization, the invention of the automobile, the airplane, industrial growth, revolution in music and the dance, the First World War, the Hoover boom and the later depression, the first Roosevelt inauguration, the WPA and all of the other significant events of successive eras were utilized in sketching the development of a true American from alien stock. Upon the limited stage of the Wardman Park Theater, Mr. Askin has compressed all this into the dimensions of his facilities by a deft employment of lights, stage depths and groupings, in lieu of elaborate scenery and revolving sets. It was a formidable undertaking admirably achieved.

Huge Cast Used to Advantage

A cast of 100 or more—there are 70 programmed speaking parts—take part in this stirring drama of American community life and under Mr. Askin's discerning direction contrive to impart the proper mood to each of the uncounted episodes. The miniature pageant is presented in only two acts that are run off with such celerity and surety that the final curtain is down at 10:40—a remarkable feat in itself.

It would be ridiculous, of course, to pretend that this streamlined version of a play of stupendous proportions affords opportunity for unbroken dramatic continuity or, in more than a few instances, sustained characterization. It makes no such pretension. But what it does accomplish with fine effect is to provide a believable and inspiring cross-section of middle-class American life without too much waving of the flag.

In the two roles that are most minutely developed, Harrison Libby and Dorothy Van Liew Flynn perform with something more than mere adequacy as Martin Luther and his wife, Irma. Murray Sheehan offers a brief silhouette of the mayor of the proud little city of Mapleton ("Look out, Cleveland") that will make many homesick for their youth and Paul Bradbury Walter does well by the part of the banker, so important to the action. Evelyn Freyman's "new woman" is an arresting figure, even if seriously overplayed. One of the most appealing characters among the principals is the servant girl, Anna, as portrayed by Virginia Rand. It is not so much individually, however, as in concert that the huge acting personnel brings its greatest value to an imposing tribute to America.

That value is so great that it should make "The American Way" one of the Civic Theater's memorable successes.

Dean Powell's Consecration Set Tomorrow

By Robert Tate Allan
The Post Church Editor

With all the beauty and solemnity of the Episcopal ritual, the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of Washington, tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. will be consecrated Bishop-Coadjutor of Maryland in services at Emmanual Episcopal Church, Baltimore, Md., his former pulpit.

Marching in the procession opening the service will be a surpliced choir and vested churchmen, followed by the Presiding Bishop, the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, and his official consecration party.

At the climax of the service, the new bishop-coadjutor will be vested with his Episcopal habit. A pectoral cross will be placed about his neck, and an Episcopal ring of office on his finger.

Many local churchmen are expected to attend the services, at which the consecration sermon will be delivered by the Right Rev. Beverley D. Tucker, D.D., Bishop of Ohio and brother of the presiding bishop.

There will be a brother of the bishops in the congregation—the Rev. F. Bland Tucker, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Georgetown, and prominent worker in the social welfare department of the Washington Federation of Churches.

Mrs. Ida Mullican Buried in Rockville

The funeral of Mrs. Ida Elizabeth Mullican, 83, wife of James Arthur Mullican, of Derwood, Md., who died Sunday at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. Thelma P. Zeigler, at Clifton Park Village, Md., was held yesterday afternoon from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Zeigler. The services were conducted by the Rev. Herbert O. Cooper, pastor of the Rockville Baptist Church, and burial was in Rockville Union Cemetery.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Mullican is survived by a son, Horace Ricketts, of Washington; a brother, Henry Bean, Hagerstown, Md.; two sisters, Mrs. John Buscher, Washington, and Mrs. Agnes Reed, Westmore, Md.; four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. She was the mother of the late Mrs. Essie Penn, of Washington. Mrs. Mullican was a lifelong resident of Montgomery County.

Shanholtz Will Filed

Under the will of Benjamin Lee Shanholtz, of Darnestown, Md., district, which has been admitted to probate in the Orphans' Court at Rockville, Mrs. Susanna J. Schwartzbeck, of the Darnestown neighborhood, receives his entire estate, the value of which is not revealed, and is named executrix. The will was executed August 15, 1940.

It was all very disconcerting for a 24-year-old actress and singer like Mignon Laird, she said today—so very disconcerting (fortissimo) that she and the piano tuner were invited to West Side Court to explain the racket.

Miss Laird said she had rented a rehearsal studio in Seventh Avenue for three hours to brush up on her vocalizing. She was just getting warmed up, she said, when this piano tuner barged in and said "How's the old piano? Does it need a tuning?"

Miss Laird said it needed a little tuning, all right, but she was very busy and would he please come back some other time.

He went away but he was back again in a half hour and announced that this time he was going to tune the piano, and no more shilly-shallying.

Well, Miss Laird said she tried to carry on, but every time she started up the old scale there would come a series of dismal plunks. From there on the story is a little blurred. Miss Laird said the piano tuner finally hauled off and socked her. The piano tuner, George Zorn, 41, said he merely tried to protect himself when she became "temperamental," scratched his face and threw his bag of tools at him.

In court, they charged each other with disorderly conduct and were paroled for a hearing Friday.

Bishop Freeman To Speak Oct. 28

Leonardtown, Md., Oct. 15 (AP).—The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D.D., Bishop of the Washington Diocese of which Southern Maryland is a part, will be the guest speaker of the Southern Convocation of the Protestant Episcopal Church to be held October 28 at Oakley.

Twenty-one visiting clergymen will take part in the convocation at All Saint's Church. Other speakers on the program are the Rev. Gerald Catlin and the Rev. Walter V. Reed who will discuss their work as missionaries.

Following the convocation, Bishop Freeman will hold confirmation services, assisted by the All Saint's rector, the Rev. J. M. B. Woodrow.

Four-Footed Draftees Become Accustomed to the Selective Service System

Lieut. Fred J. Hughes, jr., watches two remounts learning to trot closely together, as they will do later in close-order drill. These two youngsters have been at Fort Myer less than a week and are in the first stages of military training

Post Staff Photos—Del Vecchio

Accidents will happen, even in the well-regulated life of the Army. This horse is receiving treatment for a punctured hoof, in the super-sanitary Fort Myer veterinary hospital. Most injuries in garrison result from kicks

Learning how to line up is no easy job for horses who have spent most of their lives on pasture. These remounts are getting the idea rapidly enough to be able to go on maneuvers with the rest of the Third Cavalry at the end of this month

'A Military Secret'

Well-Regulated Army Custom Keeps Horses in Top Shape

Horses Are Given Excellent Care and Good Training; Job Takes Patience

By Anne Hagner

"There's one military secret I'd certainly like to learn," sighed a veteran civilian horseman as he watched Capt. Charles B. McClelland's Smacko leap to the championship of the Washington Bridle Trails Horse Show last Sunday. "I wish they'd tell me how they keep horses in shape to turn in performances like that!"

"And while they're about it," chimed in another railhanger, "they can tell me where they find their jumper prospects. I think they pull 'em out of a hat."

The answers to both are just a well-regulated Army custom, as we discovered when we dropped in on Capt. McClelland at Fort Myer yesterday. With Lieut. Fred Hughes, jr., he was watching the progress of 30 brand-new draftees to the cavalry, all of them four-legged recruits with plenty of ideas not permitted by military equine etiquette.

"These have been in the Army less than a week,' McClelland explained as a burly bay gelding shied merrily into the middle of the riding hall ring. "Most of them have been through the barest fundamentals of the breaking process, and you can see how green they are."

All products of the Remount Depot at Front Royal, Va., they were bought from farmers by military purchasing agents for the usual Army average of $165.

Fit the Need

"More than half of this crop has been graded 'excellent' according to our own requirements," McClelland said. "As you can see, most of them are smallish but they fit our needs. The best height is from 15.2 hands to 16, but we get them from 15 to 16.2 hands."

Leading the group of enlisted men—many of them almost as new to Army life as their mounts—was a sergeant mounted on a bay old-timer. His steed's coat shone in contrast to those of the newcomers, who had been turned out on pasture not many weeks ago, and he was completely imperturable in the face of their giddy capers.

"We're working hard on these youngsters because many of them will be needed to go on maneuvers with us October 29. We'll be in the South as a part of the First Army until the first week in December, and we need all the horse power we can get," McClelland went on.

Work in the ring continued, with men concentrating on schooling their mounts to work in ranks with other horses. Most of them needed trimming and steady grooming, but even in the brief period they exercised in the riding hall, many of them showed signs of working like veteran troopers' mounts.

Guess Was Right

Few show followers realize that many far-famed jumpers have come up from the ranks with just such beginnings as these $165 bargains from the remount depot. Capt. McClelland's Smacko, winner of five jumper titles this season, came to Fort Myer as a remount four years ago, when McClelland discovered him and decided that he might have possibilities as an open jumper. Blue ribbons at Madison Square Garden and two championships at Warrenton are only part of the proof that McClelland's guess was right.

Another good hunter-jumper, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's Billy Do, is an alumnus of Fort Myer training who has gained tremendous success. He received most of his Army schooling from Capt. Henri Luebbermann and has won major awards all over the East.

Troopers' mounts live on a rigid

Alsab Turns In Another Good Workout

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct 15.—Alsab, the 2-year-old champion that has a chance to become the first horse of his age to race in the sporting Pimlico Special, turned in an impressive workout today in a tuneup for the Spalding Lowe Jenkins at Laurel Saturday.

With Jockey Joe Marinelli in the saddle, Alsab worked a mile and one-eighth in one minute, 53 3-5 seconds at Pimlico. That equals the best time made for that distance at Pimlico last year and is only two and three-fifths seconds over the track record.

It was supposed to be just a breeze for Alsab but the colt had other ideas. Trainer Sarge Swenke told Marinelli to rate him to run a mile in about 1:45. Alsab turned the quarter in 24 seconds, the half in 49 2-5 and three-quarters in 1:15, then took the bit in his teeth and hit the mile in 1:40 2-5.

Faces Colchis

In the Spalding Lowe Jenkins, Alsab will go a mile and one-sixteenth against horses his own age and will get another crack at R. Sterling Clark's Colchis, which deadheated him in the 6 furlongs Eastern Shore Handicap at Havre De Grace September 3.

Trainer Swenke and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sabath, of Chicago, who own Alsab, are expected to wait until after Saturday's race before deciding whether or not to send the youngster against older horses in the Special on October 30.

With Whirlaway definitely out, the probable field has narrowed down considerably for the Special, which will be run over a mile and three-sixteenths for a $10,000 winner-take-all purse and the Maryland Jockey Club Gold Cup.

Three Acceptances

So far only three acceptances have been received. They were for Lou Tufano's Market Wise, Circle M. Ranch's Big Pebble and William Woodward's Fenelon. Still considered possible entries are Woodvale Farm's Haltal and Samuel Riddle's War Relic.

Another candidate will be the winner of the Washington Handicap at Laurel October 25. Likely favorite for this race will be Pictor, owned by William L. Brann, whose Challedon won the last two renewals of the Special.

Jockey Basil James Gets 1-A Rating

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Basil James, one of the country's top ranking jockeys, today was given a 1-A classification after taking his physical examination for the United States Army.

James, who makes New York his home but was born in Sunnyside, Wash., is expected to be inducted in two or three weeks, according to Army officials.

Breaks to Decide G. W. Game, Says Hagerty

Spirit Rated Equal Factor By G.U.Coach

But Team Is Ready This Time, He Says; G. U. an Outfit That Makes Own Breaks

By Jack Munhall

Post Staff Writer

"Team spirit and the breaks will decide our game with George Washington Friday night," Georgetown Coach Jack Hagerty predicted yesterday.

He spoke at the finish of his team's final rough workout for its third modern meeting with the Colonials. The varsity had impressively stopped freshmen armed with George Washington plays, though in fairness to G. W. it should be mentioned that the frosh were rather sloppy.

"You can say this much," said Hagerty, "we have a better chance of beating G. W. Friday than we had last year and the year before. I say this solely on our spirit. For the first time we haven't had to pep up our boys for G. W. For two years they took G. W. as a lark, and as a result G. W. nearly took them. This year they're ready. That, I think, takes care of the spirit angle.

"As for the breaks, who can tell? But I think the team that gets them will be the team that wins Friday night."

What Hagerty neglected to say about breaks is that Georgetown is one of the teams that plays for the breaks and almost invariably turns them into touchdowns. For three years when the Hoyas were rolling along with the Nation's best elevens there was heard the cry "Georgetown's lucky."

That was true, in a sense. Georgetown was lucky, if you call blocking kicks and intercepting passes luck. That's the way the Hoyas played the game. Their strong forte during those years was their line It still is. When you have a great line and only average backs, then

WASHINGTON, OCT. 16, 1941

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Don Meade has apparently ducked a bum rap. The New York Racing Commission has found nothing to substantiate the accusation that Jockey Meade was betting on horses other than his own mounts at Jamaica and the charges have gone up in vapor. Investigation showed that it was a flimsy case against Meade.

POVICH

The New York sports page columnist who made the charge and was unable to prove it, was guilty of unpardonably rotten journalism. He admitted that his original story was based on mere hearsay and gossip. It was particularly unforgiveable in that the story was aimed at a jockey who might have a tough time producing character witnesses. Meade had been in trouble before. There would be folks ready and willing to believe even the flimsiest charges against him.

One of the rules under the general heading of "the rules of racing" is that which forbids a jockey to have a bet on a horse other than his own mount in any race he rides. That rule is understandable enough. There would be, of course, the temptation to win his bet and forget about his duty to his own mount and its backers. Actually, the rules of racing forbid riders to make any bets, even on his own mount, but because that rule is unenforceable, it is winked at by racing officials.

In Meade's case, the charge made against him was peculiarly a nasty one because it was on a similar charge that he was formerly barred from racing. His accuser had the vantage point of potting at an old offender. Meade was barred "for life" in Florida a few years ago when it was revealed that he had betting interests in races he was riding, and not on his own mounts. He stayed out of racing for two years until Col. Edward Bradley interceded for him and, one by one, prevailed upon State racing commissions to lift the suspensions.

Colonel Staked Reputation

Col. Bradley was staking his own reputation on Meade's determination to reform, and no jockey in Meade's plight could have had a more powerful backer. Col. Bradley who, once upon a time told a Congressional investigating committee with some pride that "my profession is that of a gambler" has been a pillar of clean racing in America. Despite his gambling enterprises which included big temples of chance at Miami and Palm Beach, no slur has ever visited Bradley's name in racing. It was Bradley's willingness to vouch for Meade that brought the boy back to racing.

Since he resumed riding, there never has been any complaint with Meade's efforts. His reformation has been entirely satisfactory to track stewards and backers of his mounts, and it is understandable

Baby Boy Wins First, Pays $204

Gimpey Completes Huge Mutuel; Lone Known D. C. Winner Won Accidentally

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Laurel, Oct. 15.—They bet rowboats and collected battleships here this afternoon. At least a chosen few in a crowd of 7500 carried away a good piece of the race track as the daily double paid $1323.30 and an individual mutuel produced a pay-off of $204.10. Both were records for the fall season in this State. Benny Bortnick, the wrestling referee from Washington, was one of 11 to cash the double. He bought the ticket accidentally.

The big punch of the afternoon, in a monetary way, was provided by an obscure 2-year-old named Baby Boy. This youngster, after four mediocre efforts, picked the thirteenth day of the meeting to stretch out his legs and when the first race was over his number, with "99 to 1" showing on the board, was flashed in the winning position on the results board. While a select few backers of the son of English Knight danced with glee, the others looked at the past performances to try to stretch their imagination enough to find some reason for such an upset.

Baby Boy, owned by Mrs. E. R. Mitchell and trained by her husband paid $40.60 to place and $13.90 to show in addition to the $204.10 on the front end.

In addition to those who collected the small fortune on Baby Boy, the race put "in action" exactly 116 daily double tickets. With the "double" here going over to the third race, the customers had a long wait. The possible pay-offs from Baby Boy in the first race to the horses in the third event were mountainous.

The list showed that only one

Detroit Tops All Rivals on Total Offense

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Oct. 15.—Detroit on total offense; Tulane in total defense.

Those are the principal team leaders in today's American Football Statistical Bureau rankings.

Detroit, in winning a 14-to-7 victory over Indiana, then slaughtering Wayne and Central, averaged 410 yards per game from rushes and passes.

Tulane, despite its 10-to-9 defeat by Rice last week, ranks high as a defensive club against rushes and passes, holding three foes to 48.7 yards per game.

In the case of both leaders, two other schools could rank ahead of them, but neither Georgia nor Vanderbilt had turned in results of their last game played. For two games Georgia had a total offensive figure of 448.5 yards per game, and a defensive mark of 11.5 yards. Vanderbilt had yielded 42.5 yards in its first two games.

With Georgia's 363.5 yards rushing drawing a king's-x because of insufficient returns, Ike Armstrong's T formation Utah eleven gets the week's rushing leadership with 350.5 yards rolled up as an average for two games.

The Kimbrough-less Texas Aggies, last year principally a rushing club, hold a big lead as the Nation's best forward passing outfit, having completed 49 of 95 passes for 231 yards average per game in three tilts.

Nebraska, giving up 16.5 yards per game on the ground, tops the coun-

Georgetown, G. W. Finish Heavy Drills

Georgetown and George Washington finished their heavy training yesterday for their meeting tomorrow night at Griffith Stadium by testing their defenses in scrimmages with freshmen.

And from the Hilltop and the Polo Field came reports that the respective varsities more than held their own. At Georgetown Al Blozis was a one-man terror in smashing off-tackle plays and reverses around his position on the weak side. Also conspicious on defense for the Hoyas were Tackle George Perpich, Guards John McMahon and Angelo Paternoster and Center "Whitey" Erickson, who was backing up the line.

Down on the Polo Field Coach Bill Reinhart paid special attention to mapping a defense for Georgetown's spread formation, from which the Hoyas run opposing ends ragged. To bolster his flanks, Reinhart sent Burnell Martinson and Bill Bess to defensive wingback positions. This seemed to help, for Left End Stan Ziobro, a converted guard, not yet has mastered his new berth, while Right End Johnny Picco was handicaped by a bad leg.

The Colonial freshmen were unable to dent the varsity line fom tackle to tackle, and what few gains they made were mostly around the flanks. John Konizewski, big sophomore tackle, and Henry Agusiewicz, junior guard, were especially valuable to the varsity's defense.

Offensively, the George Washington practice was featured by a

Sewanee 'De-emphasizes' And Then Goes Big Time

By the Associated Press

Sewanee, Tenn., Oct. 15.They "deemphasized" football at the University of the South (Sewanee), but it didn't take.

Tired of being shoved around like a step-child year after year by their larger and more ambitious colleagues in the Southeastern Conference, Sewanee withdrew from the league a year ago and decided to take on schools of an equal size as an independent.

And now look what's happened! Sewanee is among the Nation's unbeaten, united teams today, conqueror of Washington and Lee, 20-19, and Davidson, 7-0, both of the Southern Conference, and is looking ahead to its most successful season in years.

The man behind this sudden upsurge in the Tigers gridiron stock is Coach Jenks Gillem, but a large assist should be credited to the Rev. George A. Hall, Sewanee chaplain who was drafted for coaching service after Gillem's two assistants, Lex Fulbright and Joel Eaves, were summoned for Army duty.

There aren't any scouts and various assistants that usually go to make up a college football retinue. Gillem and Hall, a former guard at Sewanee, are the whole works.

"Spirit is the thing that has done it," says Gillem of the Tigers' unblemished record. "The boys want to play football, and they're getting away from their defeatist complex. When they get a bad break, they don't seem to let it bother them. They're willing, and that will make up for what we lack in manpower part of the time."

Saturday's foe will be Southwestern at Memphis and then come Tennessee Tech, Vanderbilt, Chattanooga and the Citadel.

Misses Berg, Wall Advance in Texas Open Golf Play

By the Associated Press

Fort Worth, Oct. 15.—Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, and Mary Agnes Wall, of Menominee, Mich., were among the favorites today who advanced to the quarterfinals of the Texas Women's Open Golf championship.

Miss Berg eliminated Bettye Jane Mims, of Dallas, 3 and 2, and Miss Wall turned back Mrs. R. S. Johnson, of San Antonio, 5 and 4.

Duke of Windsor Misses Short Putt, He, Partner Lose

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 15.—The Duke of Windsor missed a 4-inch putt on the eighteenth hole today and lost an opportunity to extend his team match at Five Farms Golf Club to extra holes.

R. Denison Frick and Herman Stump defeated the duke and his partner, T. Courtenay Jenkins, 1 up. The duke, firing an 89, was 19 strokes over par on the 70-par course.

Whirlaway a Saddle Horse Now

Turf's Third Leading Money Winner Won't Race Again 'Til '42

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 15.—Whirlaway, at 3 years of age the third biggest money winner in the history of racing, now is leading the life of an ordinary saddle horse.

"He's out of training at present and we're going to give him a couple of months rest—he won't race any more before 1942," Trainer Ben Jones said today.

"We're treating him just like a saddle horse. He'll get a lot of ordinary riding to keep him legged up, but he won't be breezed for a couple of months yet."

That may be good news for Market Wise, Fenelon and Big Pebble, the lone entries so far for the Pimlico Special on October 30. A decision is yet to be made on whether Alsab, the year's 2-year-old, will run.

It even seems to be good news for Whirlaway himself, for Warren Wright's famed colt, you can take it from the genial Jones, "looks fine right now—I never saw him look better."

Jones insists that Whirly "shows no effects" from his strenuous second year of turf campaigns, in which he tucked away the triple crown by winning the Kentucky Derby, the Belmont and the Preakness, among other races.

Still, Jones admits, the long-tailed ground burner did look "kind of tired" when he ran second to Market Wise in his last outing in the Jockey Club Gold Cup at Belmont, September 27.

Whirlaway is resting at Keeneland race course here, a stone's throw from his Calumet farm home, but he won't be there long.

Jones said the three-year-old champion would be taken to California "real soon—in just a few days" preliminary to going after Seabiscuit's money-winning record of $437,730 next winter.

Navy Prepared to 'Shoot the Works' Against Cornell Team

Saturday's Foes Offer Major Test

Middies Confident Of Taking Victory In Stride; Large Turnout Expected

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 15.—The Navy has no misgivings about this football business with Cornell next Saturday on the turf of Baltimore Stadium and somebody should warn Carl Snavely that the future admirals are going to shoot the works against the Big Red storm he's brewing up at Ithaca.

It'll have to be a pretty heavy blow to rip the Navy with "Barnacle Bill" Busik, a great man-of-all-work quadruple-threater, and a host of mates around to batten down the hatches.

The Middies are plenty good and plenty tough, but nobody knows just how good off their rough-shod triumphs over William and Mary, West Virginia and Lafayette. They haven't even been slowed up, much less threatened with a stop.

With Lou Bufalino heading a list of star ball-toters behind a classy line, Cornell may be just the team to apply the brakes under Snavely's smart tutoring, but you can't tell the Middies that.

It isn't because they're overconfident, it's because they're determined to head on up football's glory road.

To meet this first major test, Head Coach Swede Larson and his cohorts are mixing a fancy dish of razzle-dazzle to dress up the Navy land and air attack and more than 40,000 fans likely will see a great show, plus pomp and pageantry thrown in for their dough.

The entire Midshipmen regiment, 3110 strong, the largest in Academy history, will parade onto the field before the clash, and there will be the Cornell and Navy bands and boxes and stand seats filled with dignitaries and gold briad.

Scored 17 Times

Thus far Navy has pounded 17 touchdowns and with Busik—a first rate blocker in addition to passing, running and punting prowess—leading the way, the Middies have piled up 1077 yards ground-gaining, 907 on land and 170 in the air.

Although he's scored only 18 points, Busik has averaged 6.2 yards per try rushing and has set up a punting average of 45.5 yards per kick.

Big Gene Flathmann at 250 pounds, and Bill Chewning at 220, the tackles, are as good as you want in a thus-far invincible line. Larson has averaged four full teams per game so there's no dearth of reserves.

Yes, sir, the Big Red will have to kick up a rougher storm than it did in eking out one touchdown edges over Syracuse and Harvard. The Navy is on the range.

Bill Tallant Wins Starting Guard Berth With Army Eleven

By the Associated Press

West Point, Oct. 15.—Bill Tallant of Fort Lewis, Wash., was promoted to first string guard on the Army football team today, replacing Lee James of Lexington, Ind., as the Cadets put in a hard session in preparation for Saturday's tussle with Yale.

Yale Drills Hard

New Haven, Conn.—Coach Spike Nelson sent his Yale squad through a long offensive and defensive scrimmage in the rain and mud. The varsity backfield was composed of Harrison, Seymour, Wallace and and Taylor, with Fullback Willoughby relegated at least temporarily to the second team.

Rams' Babula Wakes Up

Lions Star Won't Start

New York—Don Snavely, Columbia's great center, positively will not start against Georgia on Saturday, even though his injured knee has healed sufficiently to permit him to practice the last two days.

3 Star Backs To Perform in Va.-VMI Game

Special Dispatch to The Post

Lexington, Va., Oct. 15.—Three of the greatest backs in the history of Old Dominion football will be the featured players in what promises to be the outstanding gridiron show in the State when the Virginia Military Institute meets the University of Virginia on Wilson Field in Lexington this Saturday.

Abisha (Bosh) Pritchard, V. M. I.'s elusive triple-threat ace from Hopewell, has definitely shown that he is submitting his bid for a place among Virginia's grid immortals and possibly a position as an All-American. Pritchard's play during the Keydets' first three contests has been irreproachable and he has spelled trouble with a capital "T" for all of his opponents. His running ability has proven itself to be on a level with Virginia's highly touted Bill Dudley and Saturday's game may be the determinant of which one of these boys will be chosen as All-American from the Big Six.

Joe Muha, the flashy Keydet back from Pennsylvania, is expected to afford the Cavaliers quite a bit of suspense during the coming tilt. Muha, who is improving as the season progresses, has shown that his ability is not confined to running plays. In last Saturday's clash with Army, Joe made one of the finest kicks that has ever been witnessed by the West Pointers, and a quick kick at that. Standing on his own 15-yard line, Muha quick-kicked on the third down. The ball sailed to the Army 12-yard stripe and rolled slowly to the 1-inch line and stopped dead. Players, spectators, and officials could not believe their eyes and it was several seconds before the referee could recover sufficiently to render a decision on the kick. Should history repeat itself, the story will be sad for the Cavaliers.

Perhaps the most unsung player on the V. M. I. eleven is Capt. Nelson Catlett, 179-pounder from Hampton. Catlett has played the best possible ball in all of V. M. I.'s contests so far. His offensive play has been a decided spark to the Lexingtonians, and his work on the defense is above criticism. Catlett's steadiness has made him one of the mainstays of the Fighting Squadron, and most of the scoring by the Keydets has been due in a great measure to his actions.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

WESTERN BOYS HAVE A TOUGH LIFE

New York, Oct. 15.—Curious bunch . . . those rodeo riders. They look frightened and forlorn and lost, clacking along Broadway and Eighth Avenue in their tight pants and high-heeled boots, waiting to go back to work at the Garden. But once inside, what men they are, and what women!

CONSIDINE

The promoters, as usual, have laid $50,000 on the line in prizes, but it would be almost physically impossible for a performer to win as much as $5000 of it during the three-week duration of the show. However, that means a lot of hay. Even the saddle-sore cowhands who barely make enough to cover the expenses of living in the $2.50 hall room off Eighth Avenue, and eating in the quick and queasy diners, will move along optimistically to the next stop on the rodeo circuit. That's their living, pard, and for aches and knocks and slim chances of getting rich—it's about as tough as livings come.

There's a strange amateur spirit to this rodeo business. Maybe the boys won't die for dear old Circle T, but they'll come pretty close to it. We imagine some of that sleepy livestock has to be pep-talked into simulating the West when it was wild. But, nonetheless, if you get close enough to the riders who loll around the Garden's steel and concrete corral, you learn about that amateur spirit. Bits of riding, roping and bull-dozing skill that go unnoticed by the majority of the crowd, bring a clipped comment from the horny-handed hands. They have their own heroes among themselves, just as they have their own clannishness, their own little squabbles, ambitions, hopes and despairs.

A Short Cut to Their Goal

The common ambition of cowhand or cowgirl seems to be to get a ranch of his or her own, stock it and settle down. The gold along the 50-week rodeo trail offers them a short cut to that goal. That it has proved a mirage to many who hit that trail doesn't deter those that remain or the thousands of kids growing up in the West today who look upon Hugh Bennett, of Fort Thomas, Ariz., or Fritz Truan, of Victorville, Calif., with as much pure idolatry as a kid in the Bronx regards Joe DiMaggio and Carl Hubbell. For every rodeo rider who says "To hell with it," and goes back to fence riding, there must be three kids who come into the game.

Not all the rodeo riders were born with a horseshoe in their mouths. Bob Matthews, of Phoenix, an expert bronc rider, taught figure skating in Chicago and holds many amateur skating titles. Shorty McCrory, of Springtown, Tex., a steer rassler of great distinction, was a good heavyweight fighter in Texas in the early '30s. He also has done a lot of rassling.

Bennett, whose average of $10,000 a year in rodeo prizes just about makes him the Babe Ruth of the profession, played football for Hardin-Simmons and keeps going in the calf-roping and steer-twisting trade even though he now owns three ranches. Bennett says football is kid stuff compared to his racket.

Hank Mills, you know, was an outstanding jockey. He was barely nosed out by Johnny Gilbert for outstanding jockey honors in 1932. Took on a lot of weight, bought a Colorado ranch and got interested in rodeo work.

Two-Gun Gal Best Bronc Buster

Hoot Gibson is back in the business after making and spending a lot of Hollywood money. He was perhaps the best all-around cowhand in the country before he went to Hollywood. Yakima Canutt was a polo player. So was Jimmy Minnick, of Crowell, Tex., who now raises polo ponies on the side. Jimmy Downs, of Fort Worth, was a boxer and now divides his time between the rodeo business and auto racing. Melvin Harper, of Markam, Tex., wanted to be a baseball pitcher. Bob Crosby, of Roswell, N. Mex., and Irby Munday, of Shamrock, Tex., are preachers.

Fox Hastings, first cowgirl bull-dogger, could never watch her husband do that kind of work. She was afraid he'd get hurt. Alice Greenough, a two-gun gal from Red Bluff, Mont., is the best woman bronc rider in the country. She has ridden bulls in the bull rings of Spain and Mexico City. When she's not busting broncs, she flies her own plane, designs clothes or writes. She coauthored a Western novel entitled "Riding High."

Thirty years of age is about the limit for cowgirls in the rodeo business, but Fanny Neilson, of Fort Worth, rode until last year, though grandmothered twice. There are six good-lookers around the show this year for ornamental purposes, but the tops is Mary Mercier, otherwise known as Miss Sun Valley. Mary is from Pickabo (pronounced Peek-Aboo, of all things), Idaho.

TerrorsDepend On Air Attack At Gettysburg

Special Dispatch to The Post

Westminster, Md., Oct. 15.—Boasting an aerial attack increasing in effectiveness with every game, Western Maryland's Green Terrors will meet the Gettysburg Bullets at Gettysburg Saturday.

Aerial football has proven to be both the strength and the weakness of the Terrors in their three contests this year. The 6-6 tie with Maryland and last Saturday's see-saw 24-21 triumph over Mount St. Mary's both came as the result of Manny Kaplan's accurate tosses.

On the other hand, four of the five touchdowns tallied against the Westminster eleven have been via the air, and Coach Havens has devoted much attention to perfecting the Terrors' pass defense coverage during this week's practice sessions.

Kaplan rifled a 40-yard pass to Bob Bricker to bring the Terrors their victory over the Mounts with a little more than a minute left to play. The husky fullback also wafted an aerial to Irv Biasi for the score which deadlocked Maryland.

With the sole exception of Mike Phillips, able center, the entire Terror squad is fit and ready for the game with the Bullets. Phillips is nursing a leg injury, but is expected to be ready by Saturday.

Owner Denies Sale Of Hagerstown As Nats' Farm

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 15.—The Hagerstown franchise in the Interstate League will not be sold to Clark Griffith of the Washington club or any other person, Owner Oren E. Sterling said today in denying rumors that he intended to sell the club as a farm. It had been reported that "Goose" Goslin, former major league player was to be installed as manager of the club if Griffith bought the franchise.

Sterling said that he will again have a working agreement with the Buffalo club, of the International League, which sent a number of promising youngsters here this season for seasoning, and that the club would again take its spring training at Rocky Mount, N. C.

Manager Dutch Dorman already has signed Edward Bumsted, of York, Pa., a promising right-handed pitcher, who was with the Huntington, W. Va., club of the Mountain State League this season.

Boyer's High Game, Set Aids Lions' Team

T. Boyer's high game of 133 and 330 high set topped the Epworth Church Mixed League at the Fort Davis Alleys last night. Boyer led the Lions to two wins. The Nationals had high team game with 486.

Ankenman Is Named Pelicans' Manager

New Orleans, Oct. 15 (INS).—Norman Ankenman, one of the smallest men in organized baseball, weighing only 130 pounds, today was appointed manager of the New Orleans Pelicans of the Southern Association, it was announced by Charles Hurth, the club's business manager.

Ankenman, a native of Houston, Tex., has been the Pelicans' second baseman for two years.

Arlington Youth at Roanoke Boasts Enviable Record

Harold Landis Has Played 60 Minutes In Each Grid Game

Special Dispatch to The Post

Salem, Va., Oct. 15.—Sixty-minute football is a pretty rare thing in these days of high-pressure sport. But that is the record of big Harold Landis, 200-pound Roanoke College lineman from Arlington, Va., who has played 60 minutes in each of the three football games that the Maroons have played this year.

Even in the sweltering weather which marked the first three weeks of the current gridiron campaign, "Porky" was in there fighting. And to complicate things even more he was continually shifted from guard to tackle and back again.

Landis, the son of James H. Landis, of 1703 Nelson Street, Arlington, played football at Washington and Lee High School. He is a senior at Roanoke now and has left a mighty imposing record behind him.

Football has by no means occupied all of Landis' time, as he is now president of Blue Key, national honor fraternity for leadership and scholarship. He has been active in literary work and is a member of the Y. M. C. A.

A major in business administration, this husky football player hasn't made up his mind yet as to what he will do when he leaves school, but he wants to go into business of some sort.

Rut Coffey to Defend Middle Atlantic Golf Crown Today

Local Pros Entered at Richmond

Winner's Share Will Be $500; Houghton, Worsham, Cox and Others to Play

The Middle Atlantic P. G. A. members will wind up their season today in Richmond with the annual 36-hole championship tournament over the James River course of the Country Club of Virginia, in Richmond.

Bobby Cruickshank, host pro and Virginia tournament chairman of the association, announced the purse would be around the $500 mark.

Rut Coffey, the Hagerstown professional, will defend his title won in Baltimore last year by a one-stroke margin over Al Houghton, the Beaver Dam mentor who last Sunday won the Eastern Shore Open.

Cofavorite of Event

Cruickshank, playing over his home layout, will share the favorite's role among the Virginians with Chandler Harper, the nationally known pro from Portsmouth who is eligible for the championship this year for the first time.

The tournament is open to non-association members and amateurs this year for the first time but the title will go to the first P. G. A. member finishing in the money, if an outsider should win.

The Washington Open title also hinges on the outcome of the tournament as Cruickshank, Houghton and Leo Walper, who tied for the crown at Indian Spring and divided the money, agreed the first one to finish in the championship event would hold the D. C. Open crown.

Several of the District professionals entered played practice rounds at the club yesterday including Walper, the two-time champion who has been predicting for weeks he will regain the title, Lewis Worsham, Al Jamison, Houghton, Cliff Spencer and others. Wiffy Cox, the association president and one of the favored players, left last night with George Diffenbaugh after speaking at the Traffic Club dinner.

Detroit Tops All Rivals on Total Offense

Georgetown Prep 125-Pounders Beat St. Alban's, 13 to 0

Connie Harrell, fleet-footed left halfback, made two touchdowns for the Georgetown Prep 125-pound Futures to spark the attack against St. Albans, which bowed, 13-0, on the prep field yesterday.

Harrell's first score came in the first period, when he ran 40 yards off tackle. His third-period touchdown came after a 25-yard run around left end. He also ran across for what looked like a third touchdown in the last few seconds of play, but it was called back on a holding penalty.

All-America Candidate Blozis Still Learning

long passing drill in which Sophomores Paul Weber, Don Pinnow and Jimmy Graham "pleased" Reinhart with their throwing. Pinnow, particularly, was impressive and it is likely that he will be entrusted with the bulk of the Colonials' aerial attack against the Hoyas.

Weber is expected to start the game at tailback, supplanting the injured Scott Gudmundson, since he is rated the best runner and kicker of the three. With Gudmundson, the team's best kicker on the sidelines, George Washington will rely heavily on the comparatively inexperienced Weber, and also on Graham, for its punting.

A surprise element in George Washington's attack may be the frequent appearance of basketball star Matt Zunic on the receiving end of passes. Too tall and slender to stand much rough action, Zunic, nevertheless, is one of the squad's best pass catchers and probably will be used at propitionus times.

Terps Work On Defense For Florida

By the Associated Press

Al Heagy, Terp line mentor who scouted Florida last week in its game against Villanova at Gainesville, directed the proceedings today as Maryland spent much time in tuning its attack to beat the kind of defense the Gators will present at College Park Saturday.

And Heagy says it is a plenty tight defense too, as just 12 points have been scored against Florida in four games, a touchdown each by Mississippi State and Villanova on one-shot plays.

The Terps, however, have a feeling that they can better this record against the Gators, especially if they can make their yardage count. In three games the Terps have not made points commensurate with the ground gained.

DuVall to Run Team

Maryland will have two "shoot-the-works" signal callers running the team from the left-halfback position Saturday will be Senior Mearle DuVall, who is playing his best football this season, and Jack Brenner, a soph, who shone during the time he functioned against Duke last week.

Tommy Mont, the usual starter in this job, will be watching from the sidelines because of an injured shoulder.

An injury to Jack Moore, reserve left end, has brought Kenny Daniels, 6-foot 5-inch Hagerstown lad, into the picture as the supporter of Bob James and the tall boy may be expected to do some pass snagging Saturday. He's also a basketball player and knows how to handle a ball.

Right now it appears as if Duval will be the only new face in the starting lineup, unless Soph Duke Alexander should get the call over Junior Luther Conrad at right end. On their relative play against Duke, Alexander would get the job.

While offense occupied most of Maryland's time today, defensive angles also got attention. One 'Gator especially was brought to mind. He was Tommy Harrison, Florida's fleet triple-threat back, who was the difference between the teams when the 'Gator won 14 to 0 here two years ago.

A. U. Coach Still Believes 'V' Formation Will Click for Him

Eagles Prepare for Invasion of Hopkins Team; Russ Arnaud Returns to Line-up

His American University eleven didn't even score a point in losing its first two games, but Coach Staff Cassell hasn't yet given up on his "V" formation.

"I still think it's going to produce some touchdowns," Cassell declared last night as he mapped plans for defeating arch-rival Johns Hopkins here Saturday.

"So far we've gained plenty of ground but we just haven't had the old scoring punch. We need a back with enough speed to run outside but with all our injuries we've so far been unable to find such a back."

The player Cassell was really counting on to make the "V" work hasn't yet made his debut for the Eagles, but he may get in there Saturday. He is triple-threat Russ Arnaud, the former Washington-Lee High School star who has been laid up with a dislocated shoulder.

"I've got plenty of faith in Arnaud," Cassell said, "but I don't know what he can do. He hasn't even been in a scrimmage for weeks. So many of our boys have bad bruises and sprains that I can't risk scrimmaging. This has been our worst year for injuries."

The injuries to which Cassell refers will keep several dependable players from the Hopinks game. These include "Pudge" Maloney, prospective fullback regular, who is out for the season with a broken leg; "Bunny" Rabbitt, a fleet little back who pulled ligaments last week against Swarthmore; Bart Fugler, also a back, and also suffering from torn ligaments, and End Mac Potter, who has a broken hand.

On the bright side, however, is the return to action of Arnaud and also Cocapt. Carl Byham. The latter missed the first two games with a fractured cheek bone. Heretofore a tackle, Byham will be shifted over to Potter's end position.

Cassell is hoping his team will perk up for the Hopkins game. He said they were "terrible" against Swarthmore and that some of the new boys were upset by the two consecutive defeats.

Last year A. U. created an upset by holding Hopkins to a scoreless tie and outplaying them by a wide margin, including 21 first downs to the Baltimoreans' two. The Eagles have beaten the Blue Jays for as long as Cassell can remember, but he thinks they have a good chance this time.

Gophers Drill Two Ways on Passes

Minneapolis, Oct. 15 (AP).—How to use passes offensively and defensively was the theme of Minnesota's workout today.

Bug Higgins, 148-pound standout of last Saturday's Illinois game, received most of the attention as Bierman drilled him in the tossing of passes. Higgins spent practically the entire workout tossing accurate passes to receivers, winding up by acting as the passing threat for the second team in its drill against the first team.

Urban Odson, equipped with his new knee brace, took a more active part at tackle in the workout. Another casualty, Bob Sweiger, took his turn on pass defense. Sweiger, without pads, moved around well despite his back injury.

Michigan Players Drill Amid Trains

Denver, Oct. 15 (AP).—Michigan State's gridder dodged switch engines today in loosening up train legs with a short, lively workout in civilian clothes.

The train taking them to California for an intersectional tussle with Santa Clara Saturday paused only 45 minutes.

Coach Charley Bachman led his 35 players across tracks on which trains were puffing and they were split into three teams for signal drill on a concrete loading platform.

Bachmanan said Michigan State came out of last week's Marquette victory without serious injury and that his starting line-up probably would be the same against Santa Clara.

Rendezvous Beats Arcadia Pinmen

Rendezvous bowlers shot a 620 game yesterday in the Ladies' District League to turn back Arcadia, 2 to 1. Annetta Behan rolled high set for Rendezvous with 370, and Beth Minson had 381 for Arcadia.

For Spillway, Mary Magnotto rolled 351 to help her team defeat Hi-Skor, 2 to 1.

Prentiss Rolls 153 to Take Pin Honors

Fred Prentiss, Harrison Roofers, sparked a two-game win over Willis Hardware with his high single of 153 in the Friendship League at Silver Spring, but Al Hanlein's 390 was best set for Wright Hardware which took the odd game from Wakefield Dairies. Roper, Herzog's, had 360 to spark a sweep over T. L. & W. Brick to keep the former in first place. John Stewart's 150-378 led the Stewart Bros. team to three wins over Atlas Decorators and team highs of 616 and 1753, the latter a season record.

INTERIOR LEAGUE

Mike Umali, Petroleum Control, topped the Interior League at Penn with a 161 single and 407 set that aided in an odd game win over Cartography. National Capital Parks won the odd skirmish from Indian and posted team highs with a 613 game and 1737 set. Wildlife Service won a sweep over Reclamation No. 2. Bituminous Coal and Reclamation No. 1 also scored sweeps over Survey and Engineers, respectively.

TAKOMA LEAGUE

Norval Clark, High's Ice Cream, led the Takoma Duckpin League at Bill Gartell's alleys with his 142 single that also won three from Stevens Decorators. Howard Russell led for high set the second straight week with a 394 count, and his Youngblood Hardware took all three from Melvern Dairies and high team game with a 600 total. Takoma Ambulance won high set after a 1706 pinfall. Youngblood leads with High's following.

ARLINGTON LADIES

Catherine Hans, Conklyn's Flowers, and Virginia Wright, Heflin's, were the leading pinswomen in the Arlington Ladies' League with respective totals of 123 and 330. The Utopia Club had high team game of 506, while a 1462 total earned the set honors for Marge's Beauty Salon, who also won two from opponents.

Premier Cab League

Wally, Reed, RCCR, and Gray, Directors, were top scorers in the Premier Cab League at Petworth, both posting games of 163 but with the former going on to chalk up a 400 set. Dupont and Fairfax led the teams in highs, the first with a 581 game and the latter after a 1657 set.

Elks League

The two Elks Leagues at New Recreation were topped by Charlotte Skinner, Canaries, for the women with a 125 single and 302 set, while Hershey's 146-371 for his Esquires were the best scores for the men. The Dance Committee took the team highs with a 513 game and 1476 set and three in a row from the Band as well.

Commerce League

Danny Leonard, Wildcats, was responsible for his team going into a first place tie with the Tommyhawks in the United States Chamber of Commerce League at the Ice Palace when his record single of 156 and 355 set enabled the boys to take all three games from the Arrows while the erstwhile leaders dropped two to the Aces. Baron von Chase's 324 sparked his Rifles to a sweep over the Indians and Rick Keefer's 343 was what gave the odd tilt to the Aces over the leaders despite 'Curly" Thomas' 346.

Lucky Strike, Del Ray Win In Bowling

Last night's play of the Men's District League was featured by six clean sweeps out of nine matches, something of a record, and the continued charge of the Lucky Strike boys as well as the splendid scores totaled by Hap Newman's Del Ray Cavaliers.

Again Hokie Smith topped an inspired Lucky Strike team to whitewash Russ Diehl's Brookland boys and the former is now out in front by a three game margin over Arlington, who could win but two from the Ice Palace. Smith's 152-407, his fourth 400 effort in six matches, led the charge.

The Del Ray Cavaliers, sparked by "Sidewinder" Bert Lynn's 164-451—individual highs for the night—led the Virginians to a season record set of 1988 which upped their own record by 42 sticks. The Cavaliers put together a high game of 693 with 665 and 630 in amassing their fine total. Lou Jenkins rolled 154-421, El Geib 382, Andy Gleeson 379 and Buck McDonald 355.

The King Pinners jumped on Hiser's Bethesda team for a sweep, with John Chaney, Bill Beatty, Sam Shreve and Lindsay Stott tossing in 398, 392, 385 and 380 which, with Bob Miciotto's 343, totaled an 1898 set. Their high game was 668. Convention Hall, only fair so far this season, finally hit the heights with a sweep over the Penn Recreation quintet. Julie Singer's 144-424 and Harvey Duckett's 142-406 sparked the play. Bill King's 151-384 and Red Hamilton's 384 led the losers.

Tartans Unafraid of Irish

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Oct. 15.—"Yeh, Notre Dame has a good team, but we're not dying of fright."

So cracked Coach Eddie Baker of the Carnegie Tech Tartans today, aiming a verbal boot at the mourners' bench set up because his undermanned squad is scheduled to play the mighty Irish on Saturday.

"We're up against a good team and ours may be subpar," Baker added, "but that's the only concession we'll make to Notre Dame. We're not moaning—the newspapers are doing it for us."

There was some agitation among the students to get the footballers a reprieve from an expected slaughter by demanding cancellation of the game, but the move died aborning and such sentiments don't exist on the squad.

"You know our boys," Baker said. "They never concede defeat. There is no such thing as a defeatist attitude on a Tartan football squad and you can count on that.

"Sure, we've been knocked off by a couple of small college opponents, but these boys may show the crowd Saturday some football ability nobody knew they possessed."

Redskins Sell Jack Banta to Eagles; Recall Elmer Gentry

Locals Hold Light Drill At Stadium

Eagles, Sunday's Foes, Release Harrison; Neale Warns His Players

The Redskins sold rookie back, Jack Banta, to their Sunday opponents, the Philadelphia Eagles, yesterday and thus made room on the squad for Elmer Lee Gentry, who played a prominent part in the morning workout for a second day after being recalled from the Long Island Indians.

Coach Ray Flaherty eased up a bit on the boys yesterday at Griffith Stadium after his precedent-setting move of Tuesday in ordering a mid-week scrimmage and blocking and tackling drills.

The backs handled a slippery ball for the first time this season as scattered showers fell during the two-hour forenoon session.

The Eagles were short one player of a full squad of 33 as "Flagpole" Harrison, big rookie end, was released immediately following the Giant game last Sunday. Coach "Greasy" Neale was reported seeking other backs and an end or two as soon as possible.

The Eagles, like the Pirates last week, have been catching it from the coaching staff before the Redskin invasion. Workouts have been ordered for the afternoons. Neale has been devoting considerable time to slow motion movies of previous mistakes and has installed several rookies in the potential starting lineup for the Redskins.

Played in Rose Bowl

Banta, who was notified yesterday morning of his sale to the Eagles, played the first time this season last Sunday against the Steelers and then for only a few minutes in the fourth quarter.

Banta, who reported two days late for practice on the Coast, never gained the respect of the Redskin management and it was with little surprise that he was sold to make way for Gentry. A Southern California graduate, Banta played in two Rose Bowl games, the East-West game this year and the Chicago Bears-All Star game. He and Gentry were both drafted.

The Redskin office reported yesterday that judging by the advance sale between 2500 and 3000 fans will follow the team to Philadelphia Sunday. A Pennsylvania Railroad excursion will leave at 10:40 a. m. Sunday, arriving at 1, and will leave 45 minutes after the game from the North Philadelphia station.

The round trip fare is $3. Tickets are on sale at the Redskin office and the railroad ticket office.

Band to March

The Redskin band of 115 pieces will march from the station to Shibe Park, which will require about 10 minutes, followed by the rooters. The Philadelphians will counter with their own 110-piece musical outfit, plus a swing band. The bands will share the field at the half.

The Eagles have won just one out of four and have scored only 23 points in four games, losing twice to the Giants without scoring and once to Brooklyn. They have in Tommy Thompson one of the leading passers in the league, however, with a record of 25 completions in 50 attempts—M. W. W.

Handicap Plan To Be Used in Ft. Myer Show

A two-way handicap system on both horse and rider will govern entries in the featured officers' open jumping class of the informal military horse show at Fort Myer tomorrow night in the post riding hall. The event starts at 7 p. m., admission is free.

Lieut. Fred Hughes, jr., heads the handicap list of riders with ten points, with Black Caddy, his high-leaping stallion, also given a ten-point handicap. Because he is recuperating from a recent appendectomy, his handicap will be taken over by Mrs. Hughes, who will ride Caddy over 5-foot fences on the basis of points won in earlier shows.

Behind Hughes' entry is the Government-owned Roffe with a 7-point handicap. Capt. Boyle, Capt. David Wagstaff and Lieut. Leo Nawn hold 5-point rider handicaps, as do First Sergt. Evans, Sergt. Andrews, Corporal Ross and Private Scanlon. Each will exhibit over fences graded in height according to the combined handicaps of horse and rider.

Other classes are for remounts, open jumping for enlisted men with less than one year's service, pack jumping, open jumping for officers with less than a year's service, enlisted men's open jumping, and ladies' horsemanship.

The ladies' class is open to wives and daughters of service personnel, to be judged on "the skill and tact with which the rider manages her mount." Horses will be shown at walk, trot and gallop.

Baylor Team To Be Feted Here

The Baylor Bears, unbeaten to date and a Southwestern Conference championship threat, will be entertained here Saturday morning before leaving for Baltimore and the Navy-Cornell game in the afternoon. The Texans play Villanova Friday night in Philadelphia.

The Baylor team will be breakfast guests at the Raleigh Hotel of Ralph Pittman, a former Baylor grid great and former president of the Touchdown Club, of Washington. The team will go sightseeing in the morning and leave just in time for the Baltimore kickoff.

Charlotte Hall Prepares for Woodward

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlotte Hall, Md., Oct. 14.—Coach Pop Ehringer got off the sick list today to return to the Charlotte Hall Military Academy grid squad and send his battered Cadets through a light drill in preparation for Friday's clash with Woodward Prep, of Washington, here.

Ehringer, who was forced to remain on the campus last Saturday when the Charlotte Hall team traveled to Garrett Park to take a 19-to-6 defeat from Georgetown Prep, will be forced to work his squad sparingly this week in order to have a full complement of able-bodied athletes ready to face the Washingtonians.

Two Cadet backs will be out of the Woodward game on account of injuries. They are Frank Cady, fullback, and Junie Dyson, speedy wingback. Dyson probably will be out for the remainder of the season, having suffered torn ligaments in his leg last Saturday, while Cady, hurt during the third quarter of Saturday's game after having turned in a fine performance, will be out of action until the St. John's game on October 25.

Ehringer will concentrate on two ball-carriers this week, readying them for the Woodward clash. They are Al Sondheimer and Chuck Peters, both of the "scat-back" variety.

The Cadet mentor warned his charges today against taking the Woodward Prep game too lightly. The feeling prevalent on the squad had been to regard the game as a "relaxer" sandwiched in between the Georgetown Prep and St. John's games. Ehringer soon dispelled that feeling, pointing out that Woodward never has beaten the Cadets and that the Washingtonians will go "all-out" to spring an upset.

Singh Meets Lou Plummer At Turner's

The first round of the elimination wrestling tournament to uncover a Washington challenger for heavyweight honors takes place tonight at Turner's Arena, and finds grapplers synonymous with the mat game in the East and Midwest decorating the card.

Double windup bouts are on the show. In one of them Nanjo Singh, the king of the "Cobra Clutch," who captured the imagination of the fans two years ago when he headlined 16 straight shows, will seek his third straight victory of the year in the District, facing Lou Plummer, the "Peck's Bad Boy" of wrestling. The other co-feature involves Ernie (The Terrible) Dusek and Milo Steinborn.

Other contenders for the elimination title include Big Jim Henry (The Green Hornet now unmasked) and Gino Garibaldi, towering Italian, who clash in a special 30-minute match.

Paul Boesch, one of the better-known of the scientific wrestlers, will engage Abe Yourist, and Maurice LaChappelle, the French star who has taken a page from Jim Londos' book with his airplane spin, will duel with Fred (Legs) Grobmier.

Singh is going great guns since his return here two weeks ago, having whipped both The Hornet and Grobmier by dint of his "cobra," a hold Promoter Joe Turner says is one of the most dangerous he has ever seen. Turner thinks, however, he could have broken it in his prime. Singh is offering $500 to any outsider who ventures into the ring and breaks this clutch.

Dusek was on last week's card, winning from Pat Fraley when the Irishman surrendered after spraining his wrist.

First match is at 8:30.

Hockey Eagles Sign Pair of New Centers

Two youthful centers, one a flaming redhead, have been added to the roster of the Washington Eagles for the 1941-42 Eastern Amateur Hockey League season.

Coach Redvers Mackenzie relayed this announcement here from Montreal yesterday following a scouting tour of Port Arthur, Ontario, training base of the New York Americans and Springfield Indians.

Albert Tilson, red-haired, 18-year-old brother of the New York Rovers' brilliant Red Tilson, has agreed to perform with the Eagles during the approaching season as has Kenny Ullyot, reportedly a swift skater and good scorer.

Inasmuch as the Tilson brothers both play center, there is a strong possibility that they may square off in an individual duel of redheads when the Eagles open their home Eastern League season against the Rover Boys at Riverside Stadium on November 18.

Bobo vs. Savold Tops Card Here

Heavyweight Fight Carded Ten Rounds At Griffith Stadium

Washington's second boxing show within a week will be presented Monday night at Griffith Stadium when Promoter Joe Turner stages a Harry Bobo-Lee Savold heavyweight scrap as his main event.

The top bout is scheduled for ten rounds. Four six-round matches are also on the card, the last outdoor show before Turner goes inside in his W Street Arena.

Bobo, Pittsburgh Negro, recently knocked out Bill Poland, Jack Kearns' heavyweight protege, in four rounds on the Dapper Dan program in the Smoky City.

Bobo holds a decision over Savold and also a knockout victory.

Oscar Wright, local Negro lightweight, vs. Billy Bullock, another local boy.

Jackie Senna, of Mexico vs. Johnny Yellovich, New Jersey, welterweights.

Another six will be added later.

Bobo will arrive here today and begin training at Turner's Arena at 1 p. m. The public is invited. Savold is expected in tomorrow.

Savold will be accompanied by Mike Gibbons, star middleweight of a past era, who will second him Monday night.

Matchmaker Johnny Attell, who promoted the Rodak-Wright fight at Uline Tuesday night, is working on a Phil Furr-Fred Apostoli match for his next offering, set for October 28.

Lions Buy Players For Game With Bears

Detroit, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Detroit Lions announced today acquisition of two players from rival National Football League clubs to assist in the game with the Chicago Bears Sunday.

General Manager Graham Smith said Wingback John Noppenburg, of Miami University of Florida had been purchased from the Pittsburgh Steelers and that Tackle Stanley Andersen, formerly of Stanford University, was secured from the Cleveland Rams on waivers.

Noppenburg, 6 feet tall and weighing 198 pounds, is a native of Nenominee, Mich.

Baths at Carlsbad Out of A's Training

Philadelphia, Oct. 15 (AP).—Mineral baths at Carlsbad, Calif., are not included in the 1942 spring training plans of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Manager Connie Mack made this known today with announcement his A's will assemble on the West Coast, at Anaheim, next February 24, to begin training.

"But that relaxation period we have been enjoying at Carlsbad is out," declared Connie. "The baths are fine, the meals splendid and the surroundings congenial.

"But I can't say that it did our boys a lot of good. In fact, my pitchers went stale at the end of the year. It is hardly worth the money."

Midgets in Action

The Landon Prep Midgets will meet St. Albans at 2 p. m. today on the St. Albans field. Ward Bates is coaching the Landon eleven.

Assistant Pro Tourney Set For October 21

Joe Curtin, assistant golf pro at Indian Spring, is getting the golf shop boys together for the second annual assistant pro championship next Tuesday, October 21, at Indian Spring. Play will be over the 36-hole route for the Wilson plaque and a small purse.

Buck Worsham, now in the Navy, will not be on hand to defend his title, but Curtin expects a field of about 25 for the affair. All assistants in the Middle Atlantic section are eligible.

Raymond Willett, the Woodmont assistant, will be the likely favorite with Worsham missing. Other probable local entries include Stanley Collinge, Columbia; Brick Wood, Washington; Eddie Lightbown, Army and Navy; Curtin, Lew Fahrenwald, Kenwood; Warner Gray, Congressional; Karl Kuster, Manor; Max Elbin, Burning Tree; Jimmy Kraft, Bannockburn, and Ernie Garlem and Fred Bolton, formerly at East Potomac and Bradley Hills.

The real art, the real skill, yes—and the real genius in brewing is proved by brewing the same great beer every day, and every month, year in and year out. The real test of great brewing is UNIFORMITY.

Flavor, body, color, uniformity—all of these qualities are important in a beer. But for you, the greatest of these is uniformity.

When you buy a bottle of Arrow Beer today—you can bank on it, you're getting the same quality of Arrow Beer you got yesterday. And you'll get the same tomorrow, and the same next week. The first fine bottle is just the same as the next. You're getting a beer with the same unchanging premium qualities Arrow Beer had when it was first brewed back in 1912.

It hasn't been, and it isn't an easy job now. We have succeeded only because all our resources, skill and art are dedicated to that job.

You can understand, then, the reason for the fixed policy of the Globe Brewing Company and its great Brewmaster Fitzgerald to brew only one beer of one great quality up to the one highest standard. We do not have to test any second-best beer for a second-best brand each day, or to test our first-best to see if it remains our first-best. We make only one beer—our best. And our best can't be surpassed. Arrow Beer holds its head up with the greatest of them—day in, day out—year after year.

Money can't buy a finer beer than

Sheriff Culkin Turns Back Favorites to Take Jamaica 'Cap

Myer Colt Sets Mark In Upset

McIntyre's Ramases And Speed to Spare, Heavily Played, Bow; Winner Pays $10.70

By the Associated Press

Jamaica Racetrack, N. Y., Oct. 15.—The vast majority of the 10,433 fans who visited this mist-shrouded course today thought the Worthmore (Class "C") Handicap, which drew only four starters, was a two-horse affair between B. A. Neale's Speed To Spare and J. J. McIntyre's Ramases. Then one of the two underdogs in the featured dash, H. L. Myer's Sheriff Culkin, stepped out and ran the fastest six furlongs of the meeting to win the event with two lengths to spare.

Beaten off in his last two efforts, the Sheriff displayed his badge of courage—and speed—on this occasion, whirling the distance in 1:11 2-5 under Carroll Bierman. Ramases, with Alfred Robertson still seeking his first success of the afternoon, was second, five lengths before Speed to Spare. Victory Morn was practically left, having no chance to catch his rivals.

Speed to Spare was a slight choice at $1.55 to $1, while Ramases would have paid a nickel more on the dollar. Sheriff Culkin returned $10.70 for $2.

Speed to Spare was first out of the gate. He took a narrow lead over Sheriff Culkin and the pair raced clear of Ramases. The front two remained two lengths in advance of Robbay's mount until the final turn, where the McIntyre colorbearer drew up in threatening fashion. Speed to Spare wilted in the run home and Sheriff Culkin easily moved away from Ramases.

Robertson lost one of his mounts when Dark Watch became a last minute scratch from the sixth race. The gelding, one of the choices in the early betting, broke his bridle and ran out among the stables. He cut one of his legs and had to be scratched, refunds being made to those holding tickets on his chances.

†J. Shouse-E. K. Bryson entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BABY BOY, $204.10, $40.60, $13.90; CUTH (entry), $3.20, $2.80; WAR ART, $4.10.

BABY BOY, within striking distance from the start, came through on the inside rail entering the stretch, responded when shaken up and was opening a gap at the end. CUTH broke in a tangle, came to the inside to improve his position and closed gamely. WAR ART came with energy in the closing stages. LIT UP set a good early pace and weakened badly.

SECOND RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $3500 added. The Governor Ogle Steeplechase Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:02. Off at 2:03. Winner, Mrs. Arthur White's b. g. (5), by Judge Hay—Jenny Dean. Trained by A. White. Not value to winner, $3620; second, $700; third, $300; fourth, $100. Time, 3:53⅘ (12 jumps).

†Mrs. A. White entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BAY DEAN (entry), $8.90, $3.30, out; CHUCKATUCK, $4.10, out; SUSSEX, out.

BAY DEAN took command at once, accompanied by ROLL AND TOSS, fenced well and was under pressure at the end to hold CHUCKATUCK safe on the final flat run. Penrod's foul claim against the winner was not allowed. CHUCKATUCK was steadied for the turn of the field, made a bad landing at the second fence, was slightly bothered when ROLL AND TOSS dropped back approaching the final fence and came boldly in the closing run. SUSSEX lacked speed on the flat and had no excuses. ROLL AND TOSS raced wildly on the outside of nis steblemate for a mile and a half, tired and dropped back.

THIRD RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:43. Off at 2:44. Winner, Mrs. H. Walters, Jr.'s dk. b. g. (5), by Groucher—Happy Lope. Trained by L. M. Carver. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 2:04⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GIMPEY, $57.60, $21.80, $11.30; BRIGHT SONINA, $9.60, $6.10; REPELLER, $4.60.

GIMPEY was steadied early, worked his way to contention on the outside, responded when put to a drive to take the lead and was going gamely at the end. BRIGHT SONINA was slow to begin, came between horses to better her position and closed full of run. REPELLER was allowed to settle into his best stride, went to the front boldly and weakened in the final test. CLEANING TIME saved ground while in the thick of forward contention and tired gradually in the stretch drive.

Daily Double—BABY BOY and GIMPEY Paid $1,323.30.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1100; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 3:11. Off at 3:12. Winner, C. F. Kohler's red ch. g. (3), by Tom Tiger—Shady Flirt. Trained by G. A. Cook. Value to winner, $800; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:48⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SLY TOM, $20.40, $8.20, $4.90; FAIR HERO, $15.10, $7.80; GOOBER LAD, $3.20.

SLY TOM, rated while closest to the pace of FAIR HERO, rallied when placed to strong handling and drew out to win handily. FAIR HERO went to the front at once, drew away and was tiring badly in the final drive. GOOBER LAD was steadied while well placed, came to the inside in the closing drive and closed willingly. HERESHECOMES raced well placed in the first flight and held on gamely.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1200; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:41. Off at 3:41½. Winner, Circle M. Ranch Stable's b. c. (2), by Sir Galahad III—War Banner. Trained by W. T. Anderson. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:46.

ANONYMOUS	(Young)	115	7	6	6²	7	7	7	7	57.95

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIR WAR, $4.20, $3.30, $3.10; GREY WING, $4.30, $3.90; ARTHUR C., $7.00.

SIR WAR, steadied when in close quarters at the far turn, came to the outside for racing room and wore down the leaders without effort to win going away. GREY WING set the early pace, was rated when INDIAN SUN went to the front and closed willingly. ARTHUR C was squeezed back approaching the far turn and came gamely in the stretch run. INDIAN SUN went to the front on the backstretch, assumed a clear lead and weakened suddenly.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $1500; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:10. Off at 4:10½. Winner, H. Bruce's ch. g. (8), by Wise Counsellor—Dry Girl. Trained by J. H. C. Forbes. Value to winner, $1000; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAY JAY, $4.20, $2.80, $2.40; HAPPY LARK, $3.30, $2.40; BATTLE JACK, $2.00.

JAY JAY was allowed to settle into his stride, came to the outside to improve his position and wore down HAPPY LARK to win going away. HAPPY LARK was slow to begin, came through on the inside to take command and held on gamely, but could not resist the winner. BATTLE JACK was in the thick of contention throughout and showed a good effort. STOLEN TRYST, off alertly, weakened gradually.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1100; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:39. Off at 4:40½. Winner, W. H. Leachman's b. f. (3), by St. Brideaux—Basquine. Trained by P. C. Stephenson. Value to winner, $800; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:49⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS BRIDEAUX, $4.60, $2.90, $2.50; MISS FIX IT, $5.20, $3.50; DOROTHY POMP, $3.70.

MISS BRIDEAUX was confidently handled, improved her position on the inside when asked, was in close quarters at the eighth pole and came with a rush when clear. MISS FIX IT went to the front at once, set a strong pace and was weakening at the end. DOROTHY POMP was in the thick of contention, but was forced to be taken up sharply when squeezed against the rail at the eighth pole. SHAILLEEN closed resolutely.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 5:07. Off at 5:07½. Winner, P. Reda's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DIZZY B., $4.00, $2.90, $2.60; MILL END, $8.50, $6.10; RESIDUE, $7.60.

DIZZY B. was not hurried to the backstretch, responded gamely when placed to a drive on the outside, went to the front with a bold rush and won with speed in reserve. MILL END was well placed early, worked his way to the leaders and closed willingly. RESIDUE moved up boldly and then weakened gradually. STAND ALONE went between horses with a rush to get to contention and then tired.

Selections at Laurel

Dear Al:

Everybody who ever saw a baby boy will tell you he should have played the winner named Baby Boy in the first race yesterday at that $204.10 mutuel. Many of them will tell you they should have had that $1323.30 daily double, too. Two men had tickets in front of the press box. One confessed that he had accidentally bought the "3 and 1" combination and another said he liked Gimpey in the third race and had purchased six tickets on horses in the first race to Gimpey. The Laurel publicity department put out the following note yesterday morning: "Horsemen who have watched the boy in action in the mornings and on his few mounts so far believe that V. Borsell, under contract to Circle M. Ranch, will develop into a first-class rider." After seeing Borsell ride Gimpey, I'm seconding the motion. Before the "objection" sign was lighted following yesterday's handicap steeplechase Mrs. Arthur White, owner of Bay Dean, the winner, inspected the trophy in the winner's circle. When her attention was called to the claim of foul she stepped back from the silver loving cup. The trophy was donated by Pete Bostwick, whose Sussex was a disappointing third in the race. When Bostwick came here he brought with him this trophy, which had been given to him by the late Thomas Hitchcock for winning the Ogle in 1932 on Hitchcock's Creek. Bostwick is not certain whether Hitchcock had earned permanent possession of the trophy through three victories in the stake or whether he merely thought it was a single cup but at any rate, Pete wants it put back in competition. The trophy originally was known as the Rappahannock Cup and was first presented in 1924 by Stephen Bonsal Brooks to the Somerset Stable when Saint Savin won the Ogle. The Spalding Lowe Jenkins on Saturday will have Alsab against Colchis. Trainer Gus Swenke said the Sabath star would start after seeing him go a mile in 1:40 2-5 at Pimlico yesterday morning. Jockey Joe Marinelli was in the saddle and could not hold the 2-year-old champion. See you on the rail.—BILL.

First race—ERIC KNIGHT appears the best of the maiden juveniles gathered for the day's opener. Has the speed and I'm going to string along. THANKSALOT is said to be a good one. STORMCOCK had early speed last out and is dangerous.

Second race—ROUGE DRAGON gets my call in the steeplechase. This one has jumping ability and speed on the flat. Should take care of this kind. MILL RACE carries top weight but is ready. BROTHER JONES to take care of the others.

Third race—LEVANA might be better suited at a shorter route but this is a fit one and I'm going to take my chances. DECATUR belongs with this cheap company and should be a threat. CONNIE PLAUT for the minor award.

Fourth race—WEATHERITE may take a long, lonesome lead and stay there all the way. Needs only to break in front. MACK'S DREAM was a winner here at long odds. REHEARSAL for the show end.

Fifth race—DOUBLE B. gets a steadying assignment of 109 pounds and promises to do a lot of running in this sprint. I see no reason for mistakes. POMIVA is good now and probably will take the place money from STUDY PERIOD.

Sixth race—UMBRIL had poor racing luck last out and then closed like the wind along the rail. FIREBROOM and BETTER HURRY for the place and show positions in a rather open affair.

Seventh race—HERE AGAIN gets in light for this and may forget to stop this time. BELLE D'AMOUR has been knocking at the door and belongs close up in this company. BANKER JIM is an outside possibility.

Eighth race—THE SCOUNDREL gets the nod in the day's finale. CHALOTAUR showed excellent speed last out and is fit as hands make horses. TRAMP SHIP to show.

Best bet—Double B.

CLOCKER MIKE AT LAUREL

1—Stormcock, Pretty Lady, Sir Chicle.
2—The McClain, Millrace, Scotch Tar.
3—Alseleda, Decatur, Levena.
4—Flaming High, Mack's Dream, Royal Echo.
5—Hardy Bud, Domkin, Maroc.
6—Star Copy, Umbril, Better Hurry.
7—George Lamaze, Banker Jim, Here Again.

The Outlook

By Merryle S. Rukeyser, Post Special Writer

U. S.-Sponsored Violations of Anti-Trust Law Assailed as Setting Up Bizarre Standard

Thurman W. Arnold, Assistant Attorney General in charge of anti-trust law enforcement, set up a bizarre standard for business security in his recent appearance before the Advertising Club and affiliated groups in New York.

Answering a question as to how companies would stand under the Sherman Act, if they banded together for simplification and other objectives sponsored by the O. P. M., Mr. Arnold said in effect that such conduct would be all right if conducted under the direction of Government officials.

Maybe Mr. Arnold was expounding the business law of tomorrow, but it is not based on the long series of precedents which lawyers ordinarily revere.

Without specific legal authority no bureaucrat has the authority to waive the technicalities of the law, and, if he does so for noble purposes, there is no assurance that his successors will take the same view.

A dramatic reminder of this truism inheres in the fact that oil leaders were subsequently criminally indicted for practices which grew up under Administrator Ickes' sponsorship in the N. R. A. days.

Businessmen face a similar dilemma each day. In New York, insurance executives, when puzzled by the ambiguity of the insurance law, ask the insurance commissioner for guidance, but his expression of opinion provides no immunity for prosecution in case they shall subsequently be found to have violated the technicalities of the law.

It has been a time-honored custom for businessmen to retain lawyers to tell them what the law is, but with the new composition of the Supreme Court this is a difficult, if not impossible, task, for the law is in a state of rapid flux.

Mr. Arnold takes pride in the voluntary character of consent decrees entered into by corporations. In consideration for such voluntary and spontaneous action, corporate executives are rewarded by quashing of pending criminal indictments.

Mr. Arnold sang paeons of praise for advertising, so long as advertising promotes competition, rather than "monopoly," but it seemed to me that when the Attorney General extended the hand of friendship, there were some reservations. He said that the anti-trust division would not restrict advertising during the national emergency, but he indicated that shortages of materials and power might tend to do so, and he significantly added that there was a question whether under new proposed price ceiling regulations, producers would have the right to include advertising costs in the sale price of their product.

The admonition was ominous in character, and before it is too late, it is suggested that the House Banking and Currency Committee thoroughly explore this possibility in the pending price bill. Inasmuch as Leon Henderson, price administrator; Secretary Morgenthau and Henry B. Steagall, chairman of the committee, want to leave untouched certain basic business costs, such as wages, I assumed that the only interest was in selling prices, not costs.

Of course, it may be physically impossible to limit selling prices without acting on basic costs, including wages, taxes and farm products. Nevertheless, under the theory advocated by the Administration, which is aimed to limit gross receipts of business, it was supposed that the private executives would have some discretion as to how they disposed of such receipts in meeting various elements of cost. In raising a question about advertising under price ceilings, Mr. Arnold has indicated that there seems to be a lack of a consistent and clear-cut theory of dealing with an economic question.

And by the same token, it is idle for politicians to pledge continuance of a free press, if by some devious control they intend to limit the revenue which makes such a press feasible.

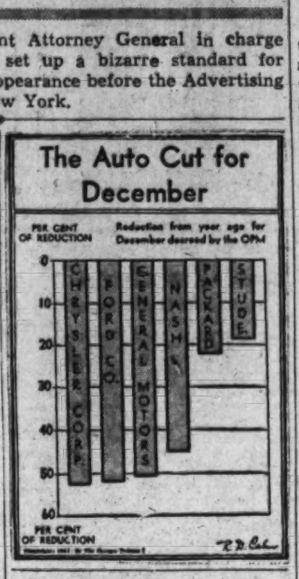
The Auto Cut for December



A. T. & T. Nets $2.41 a Share In 3 Months

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 15.—American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and principal telephone subsidiaries—the Bell System—reported today net income applicable to A. T. & T. stock in the three months ended August 31 was $45,073,155, equal to $2.41 a share.

This compared with $44,526,684 or $2.38 a share in the corresponding period of 1940.

For American Telephone & Telegraph Co. only, net income for the quarter ended September 30 was $47,340,803, equal to $2.53 a share, compared with revised net income of $44,375,345 or $2.37 a share in the September quarter of 1940.

Bell System earnings for the year ended August 31, applicable to A. T. & T. stock, totaled $201,513,370 or $10.78 a share, compared with $204,093,251 or $10.92 a share in the same period ended a year earlier.

A. T. & T. earnings for 12 months ended September 30, subject to revision, were $196,096,456, equal to $10.49 a share, against revised net income of $182,912,202 or or $9.79 a share, against revised net income of $182,912,202 or $9.79 a share in the 12 months ended September 30, 1940.

Walter S. Gifford, A. T. & T. president, in announcing the earnings said toll and long distance conversations for the first nine months of 1941 were 16 per cent greater than in the like part of 1940, and that the number of long distance calls was up about 29 per cent.

Reliable Stores Profit and Sales Spurt in Period

Consolidated net profit of Reliable Stores Corporation, which operates furniture sales outlets in Washington, more than doubled in the quarter ended Sept. 30, officials reported yesterday. Net profit before provision for excess profit tax and dividends on preferred stock totaled amounted to $341,271 in the third quarter as compared with $54,135 for the comparable 1940 period.

Provision for Federal normal income taxes amounted to $227,954 for the 1941 third quarter against $54,135 for the comparable quarter of 1940. For the twelve months ended September 30, 1941, consolidated net profit on the same basis amounted to $1,215,297 against $717,629 for the preceding twelve months.

Net sales for the third quarter totaled $3,253,042, compared with $2,502,371 for the similar 1940 period, while consolidated net sales for the twelve months ended September 30, 1941, were $12,789,722 against $10,315,452 for the year ended September 30, 1940.

Reeves Named Officer Of N. Y. Mutual Life

Clifford B. Reeves has been appointed assistant to the president of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York. This announcement was made yesterday by Lewis W. Douglas, president of the company, who stated that Mr. Reeves will undertake his new duties on November 1, when he will resign as vice president of Doremus & Co., New York advertising agency, to join Mutual Life.

D. C. Building Permits Soar In 9 Months

Washington building permits totaled $38,784,410 in the first nine months of this year as compared with $27,682,365 in the comparable 1940 period, Dun & Bradstreet reported yesterday. The Capital ranked sixth in a list of 215 cities in permits' volume during the first three quarters this year.

Among the leading cities, only the following outranked Washington in building permits this year: New York, Los Angeles, Detroit, Chicago and San Diego, Calif.

Permits in the 215 cities during the first nine months of this year totaled $1,152,449,427, or an increase of 14.2 per cent as compared with the sum of $1,009,415,732 for the similar period a year ago. Year-to-year gains were recorded in all sections except the Middle Atlantic, the survey indicated.

Although actual construction was hampered somewhat by shortage of materials in some lines, the volume of building permits issued during September remained on a par with the August level, while showing a fractional increase from the corresponding month of last year.

Permits for 215 cities of the United States amounted to $119,472,735 in September, according to Dun & Bradstreet. This was almost identical with the $119,520,628 for August, and only slightly above September, 1940, with $118,942,371.

Local Dividends Voted

David Bornet, vice president of the National Savings and Trust Company announced yesterday that directors have declared a quarterly dividend of $1 a share on capital stock, payable November 1 to stockholders of record October 23.

Directors of Best & Co., department store which operates a local branch in Chevy Chase, have declared a dividend of 40 cents a share on common stock, payable November 15 to holders of record October 25.

The National Metropolitan Bank yesterday paid a 3 per cent dividend on capital stock to stockholders of record October 5. An 8 per cent extra dividend will be paid December 20 to holders of record December 10.

T. H. Sanders to Speak

Thomas H. Sanders, chief of the cost advisory branch of the Office of Production Management, will address members of the Washington Chapter of the National Association of Cost Accountants at a meeting tonight in the Hamilton Hotel. Mr. Sanders' topic will be "Accounting for the Defense Program."

Dr. Sanders, since 1921, has been professor of accounting, Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration prior to that, he was associated with the University of Minnesota. He has had wide experience as a consulting accountant in Minneapolis, New York and Boston; is past president of the National Association of Cost Accountants and director of research to the American Institute of Accountants.

Jacobs Issue Offered

Offerings were made yesterday of 140,000 shares of the capital stock of Jacobs Aircraft Engine Co. by Riter & Co., as underwriter, marking the first time that the company's securities have been broadly offered to the public. The stock is priced at $5.25 per share. It is being sold for the accounts of certain stockholders to whom the net proceeds of the sale will go.

Manufacturing aircraft engines, with its enlarged production almost exclusively for military purposes, the Jacobs Aircraft Engine Co. had unfilled orders exceeding $22,000,000 on its books as of July 31, 1941.

Week's Advertising Dips

Retailers in 84 major cities placed 22,914,833 lines of display advertising in their local newspapers during the week ended October 4, according to Advertising Age. This compares with 23,198,348 lines during the same week last year, a loss of 283,000 lines, or 1.2 per cent.

For the year to date, however, embracing a 40-week period, Advertising Age reports total retail advertising in the 84 measured cities as 4.1 per cent ahead of last year. The 1941 total is 807,609,480 lines, an increase of 31,876,000 lines.

Wholesale Food Prices Drop

Foodstuffs generally trended lower this week and individual price changes in the commodities entering into the Dun & Bradstreet Wholesale Food Price Index showed declines more than double the number of advances.

A drop of 2 cents from the 12-year high recorded last week brought the October 7 index to $3.32. This compared with $2.32 for the corresponding 1940 week, or an increase of 43.1 per cent.

The Dun & Bradstreet Wholesale Food Price Index represents the sum total of the price per pound of 31 foods in general use.

Stocks Slip to 4-Month Lows in Thin Trade; Nazis' Successes Heighten Gloom in Market

New York, Oct. 15.—Stocks, bonds and commodities fell back today in a trudging continuation of the retreat which began with the German successes against Moscow's outposts.

The news from Russia, suggestions of an approaching crisis with Japan and spreading defense labor troubles served to increase operators' pessimism.

The Associated Press average of 60 selected stocks dropped .4 of a point to 41.2, its lowest level since June 9. This was accomplished on very thin dealings, only 483,400 shares changing hands. Even this was better than yesterday's trade of 435,420 shares.

Some share leaders established their lowest prices for the year. These included Consolidated Edison, Union Pacific and Westinghouse, the last slumping 5 points as rights to trade a propoed new stock issue were admitted to the floor of the stock exchange.

Other issues which fell included United States Steel, Chrysler, Boeing, Glenn Martin, du Pont, American Can, General Electric, Kennecott, Phelps Dodge, American Telephone and Southern Pacific.

Among the few gainers were Goodyear, United States Rubber, Owens-Illinois, Santa Fe and Southern Railway.

On the curb, where 94,000 shares were traded, compared with 98,000 yesterday, losers included Gorham Manufacturing, R. Hoe & Co., New Jersey Zinc, Singer Manufacturing and Pittsburgh Plate Glass.

Commentators expressed varied opinions as to probable future market directions, many suggesting that share levels indicated at least partial discounting of the probable effect of the fall of Moscow.

Rails and utilities drifted irregularly lower in today's bond market, but other groups exhibited stout resistance and showed small gains in most cases.

United States Governments followed a steady course over the counter as reports were heard that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation might shortly come into the money market for a loan of around 800 million dollars with which to finance November 1 maturities and add to working capital. The big Government agency has never undertaken such a large piece of financing at one time before, but when it offered 571 million dollars of 1 per cent notes last July subscriptions were received in excess of five billion dollars.

Malone Is Named Chief Controller Of the Hecht Co.

Harold G. Malone, for the last 19 years with the Hecht Co., has been appointed executive controller, it was announced yesterday by Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager.

MR. MALONE

Mr. Malone joined the store in 1922 in the statistical department and served as head of research, assistant controller, and now executive controller.

He is chairman of the National Capitol Group of Controllers, director of the Controller's Congress of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, member of the Washington Board of Trade, Knights of Columbus and the Elks.

His former position as controller of the Hecht Co. has been assumed by Oscar C. Weitzberg, formerly with the Interstate Department Stores.

Int. Paper Votes Dividend of $5

New York, Oct. 15 ((AP)).—International Paper Co., successor to International Paper & Power Co., has declared a dividend of $5 a share on its convertible 5 per cent preferred stock, wiping out the last of the arrearages which its stock inherited from the old company.

The dividend, which will go only to holders of the new stock, will be payable November 15 to stockholders of record November 7.

Dividends payable on new stock awaiting delivery to holders of unexchanged Paper & Power stock will be paid when such certificates are exchanged, the company said.

A dividend of $63, clearing all arrearages against the 7 per cent preferred stock of International Paper & Power, is payable tomorrow to holders of record October 7. This stock is to be redeemed.

Equipment Orders Placed by Brazil

Cleveland, Oct. 15 (AP).—Col. De Macedo Soares, head of the Brazilian commission placing steel mill equipment orders in the United States, announced today the awarding of three more contracts totaling nearly $5,000,000.

The largest order—$2,600,000—went to the Mesta Machine Co., of Pittsburgh, for a continuous hot-strip mill and a cold-reducing, bending mill. The United Engineering & Foundry Co., also of Pittsburgh, got a $2,264,755 order for a 72-inch plate mill. Ingersoll-Rand Corporation of New York, received a $24,419 contract for core-drill equipment.

Stores Spend .07% On Radio Advertising

Pittsburgh, Oct. 15 ((AP)).—A survey of 92 department stores in cities ranging from less than 50,000 population to 1,000,000 or more persons shows the average department store spends 3.45 per cent of its gross income for newspaper advertising and .07 of a per cent on radio advertising.

That is the report of John A. Garber, instructor in advertising in the University of Pittsburgh's research bureau for retail training, who has completed a study, "Survey of Broadcast Advertising," for the bureau.

Plans Aluminum Plant

New York, Oct. 15 ((AP)).—Reynolds Metal Co. announced today plans were being drawn for the third aluminum plant to be constructed at the site of its Lister Hill, Ala., properties. The new addition to production facilities is expected to bring the company's output to 160,000,000 pounds per year.

Retail Stores Spur Sales of Defense Stamps in Month

By the Associated Press

Sales of defense savings stamps set a record of 64,978,000 in September when they were placed on sale generally, for the first time, in retail stores.

The Treasury said yesterday the sales were $500,000 more than in August. This represented, in stamps, an increase of 2,942,000 over August, since the bulk of the sales are in 10 and 25-cent denominations.

As in previous months 25-cent stamps led in sales with 11,840,000 stamps. Dime stamps were next with 3,951,000, 50-cent stamps numbered 1,264,000, dollar stamps were 659,000, and $5 stamps sold numbered 66,000.

Altogether, since the stamps were first placed on sale on May 1, sales through the end of September totaled 61,855,000 costing $18,998,000.

Gasoline Supplies Off Another 264,000 Bbls.

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—The American Petroleum Institute reported today that gasoline supplies of the Eastern States declined 264,000 barrels to 21,652,000 barrels in the week ended October 11. It was the third consecutive drop.

A week earlier the section where gasoline is rationed had in storage 21,916,000 barrels of gasoline.

The nation's crude oil production rose an average of 210,200 barrels daily from the previous week's figure, running at a daily average of 4,070,950 barrels compared with 3,641,550 barrels a year earlier.

Beech to Boost Pay

New York, Oct. 15 ((AP)).—Beech Aircraft Corp., Wichita, Kansas, today announced it would increase the pay of its 5,500 hourly workers 2½ cents an hour effective Oct. 20. This is the second voluntary increase the company has given its hourly workers within the past five months, it said in a statement.

New York Cotton

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Cotton futures lost 24 to 33 points today in general liquidation, a late rush of selling orders keeping prices at or near the day's lows at the finish.

Delay in announcement of ceiling prices on gray goods, expected to bring a resumption of cloth trading, was a discouraging factor to traders.

While considerable buying by mills and trade interests was evident, it lacked the aggressiveness necessary to stabilize prices.

The factors which caused most financial markets to decline—hedging, war news and confusion over priorities—also entered into cotton dealings.

Trade Treaty Contributes to Staples' Drop

By the Associated Press

Heavy selling, attributed to profit taking, hedging, unfavorable war developments and to the new trade treaty with Argentina, drove most commodity futures prices downward yesterday.

The treaty will reduce sharply duties on some competing staples.

Cottonseed oil, cotton, lard and soybeans were the big losers.

Soybeans broke 3¾ to 5¾ cents a bushel at Chicago, unsettling other grains. Wheat lost 1⅞ to 2½ cents a bushel, corn ½ to ⅞ cent, oats 1¾ to 2 cents and rye 1 to 1¼ cents. Lard dropped .43 to .60 of a cent a pound. Hog prices declined 10 to 20 cents a hundred pounds, cattle about 15 cents and lambs were steady.

New York cottonseed oil futures fell .70 to .71 of a cent a pound, the sharpest break since a price ceiling was threatened. Cotton lost $1.20 to $1.65 a bale, closing near the day's lows.

Wool tops futures were mixed and hides slightly higher.

Among other commodities, Santos coffee gained .11 to .19 of a cent a pound, rubber was unchanged to a shade higher. World sugar eased and domestic sugar was about steady.

U. S. Bond Issue Subscribers Get 12½% Allotment

The Treasury announced yesterday that because subscriptions for new Treasury bonds totaled $10,446,000,000 while the Treasury intended only to sell $1,200,000,000 worth, subscribers will be permitted to buy 12½ per cent of what they asked for.

The bonds were offered for sale last Thursday. They are 2½ per cent securities maturing in 1967 to 1972.

Additional amounts of the same type of bonds were offered in exchange for $204,425,400 of old Treasury notes coming due December 15. The Treasury said holders of 92 per cent of the old notes accepted the exchange offer. The others will be paid in cash December 15.

An additional $100,000,000 of the new bonds will be sold for cash to Government trust funds.

Life Insurance Sales Spurt 27%

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—New life insurance written in September was 27.3 per cent higher than in that month a year ago and the largest for any month since June, 1939, the Association of Life Insurance Presidents announced today.

New business of all classes in the month totaled $699,549,000 compared with $549,336,000 in September, 1940.

This brought the total for the first nine months to $5,778,516,000, an increase of 6.8 per cent over $5,408,617,000 in the first nine months of 1940.

The report covers new business, exclusive of revivals, increases and dividend additions, of 39 United States companies having 82 per cent of total life insurance outstanding in all legal reserve companies.

'Flash' Strikes Blamed for Large Decreases In Week's Steel Output for Defense Program

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 15.—Strikes and interruptions by other factors has resulted in large losses in steel production invaluable in the present defense program, Iron Age said today.

"Events of the last few days have upheld the position of steel union leaders that there are two defense programs, the national defense program and the 'union defense program'" the publication stated.

"Flash strikes in metal-working plants vital to defense (the national defense program) continued this week in many industrial areas. In some ways the 'union defense program,' despite a belated plea by President Roosevelt for industrial peace, was, from the viewpoint of union leaders, making the greater progress. For example, last week's strike at Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation's Gary plant resulted in a loss, which cannot be made up, of 40,000 tons of steel ingots, of more than 30,000 tons of rolled steel products and about 25,000 tons of pig iron.

"The steel lost in the Carnegie-Illinois strikes, the Iron Age estimates, could have been used to manufacture 2856 fighting tanks, or more than 2200 railroad cars, or 54 submarines, or more than a half million 155 mm. howitzer shells, or 13 merchant ships.

"Ohio strikers this week continued to subjugate the national defense efforts to their particular demands for jurisdictional rights or higher pay. The Midland Steel Products Co. strike went into its second week, with indications that the wage dispute would soon be certified by Federal conciliators to the National Mediation Board. Meanwhile, this work stoppage had thrown 6,000 Studebaker employees out of work at South Bend, Ind., and was threatening Willys-Overland output of Army 'jeeps.' The Spicer Manufacturing plant at Toledo, Ohio, producing 70 per cent of combat vehicle transmissions, was idle because C. I. O. workers refused to handle parts made by A. F. of L. employees at Spicer's Hillsdale, Mich., plant.

"Ingot production this week is estimated by the Iron Age at 98 per cent of capacity, a gain of a half point above last week's revised rate of 97.5 per cent.

"For some steel companies the volume of incoming business is running midway between the August level, which was the high point, and the September level, which was the low point in the current movement. The recent upward trend in bookings apparently reflects success on the part of consumers in obtaining priority ratings for essential requirements. Distribution of available steel supplies to the most vital points continues to be one of the toughest problems ever faced by the steel industry, a condition which suggests that eventually direct allocation of steel will replace the priority system or that some simpler distribution system will be developed.

"Structural steel awards jumped to 23,900 tons from 8400 tons last week, the outstanding lettings being 8000 tons for the Douglas Aircraft plant at Long Beach, Cal., 4505 tons for a Navy hangar at Elizabeth City, N. C., and 4200 tons for a powder plant at Choteau, Okla."

Army Custom Keeps Horses In Fit Shape

hedule that is the Army's open cret of conditioning. Their first eal is given them shortly after wn, so that their drilling begins rly and lasts until around 11. Then ey are returned to the stables r grooming, lunch and tack clean- g. The afternoon routine varies ith the post program, but dinner me is at five. Some horses receive fourth feeding if they need added eight.

Their diet, except in isolated ses, consists of oats, timothy hay, little bran, a small portion of alfa hay, and an occasional dash linseed meal.

As a matter of general practice, horses are innoculated against ckjaw and sleeping sickness. Re- nt arrivals at the post, including mounts and privately owned rses, are kept in quarantine for ree weeks to prevent the spread any disease.

Schooling newcomers has been a ajor part of Fort Myer's work many months because its per- nnel has absorbed just twice as ny horses as the post had a year o. There are now about 1230 in e regiment and a total of 1500 rtered in the stables.

'Breaks to Decide Game'—Hagerty

you necessarily plot your strategy to take advantage of your strength.

In 1938, 1939 and last year Georgetown was winning ball games mostly because it had great lines, great punters and an alert if not consistent pass defense. They blocked kicks at the right times and turned around and drove for touchdowns. They intercepted passes just when the other team was threatening.

The disputed blocked kick on which Georgetown nosed out George Washington in 1939 was the result of a predesigned Georgetown play whereby Center Al Matuza cooperated with his linemen and shot through a prepared hole.

So it has been with Georgetown. Until this season they were winning on the breaks while some of the public was screaming "lucky." And Friday night they intend to win on the breaks again, if possible. It's easier that way.

Two Great Tackles

But to get the breaks you have to have the wherewith to do it. Georgetown has the kind of a smashing line, led by Tackles Al Blozis and George Perpich, to cause the enemy to hurry passes and punts. And they have the kind of punters in Lou Falcone and Frank Dornfeld to keep the opposing team in a hole with long and well-placed kicks.

That's how the breaks are born. A fellow who has to pass or punt before he's ready, to escape being murdered by on-rushing linesmen is not going to do his best. From his hurried efforts spring the opportunities for wideawake opponents to force their luck.

How Georgetown will play against George Washington is something the Hoya coaches couldn't tell you. Hagerty and his assistants know how they hope their team will react. The Hoyas may be sent out to play aggressive offensive football, or they may be told to be cautious and allow G. W. to make the errors. But, however, they start out to play, the chances are their second-half strategy will be based on what was learned in the first half.

It's the team that can quickly put to use what is learned in the course of the game that is dangerous. Therein lies the real reason for most of the "incredible" second-half winning rallies.

So our guess is that if Friday's game is decided on breaks, then it will be decided in Georgetown's favor. The Hoyas just seem to have the knack of getting the breaks and then rubbing them into the other team.

Eklund Cites Eavesdropping In New Plea

John Eugene Eklund, 26-year-old "sniper," yesterday contended that his death sentence ought to be set aside because detectives eavesdropped with a dictograph when he talked to his lawyer.

Filed in District Court by Attorney Harry T. Whelan was the bill of exceptions upon which the slender, black-haired engineering student pins his hopes that the United States Court of Appeals will save him from the electric chair.

Arrested after a series of "sniper" murders of Negroes last November 18, Eklund was questioned several days at headquarters. During this period he was allowed to talk to an attorney. When The Post disclosed that these conversations were followed by detectives hidden in the next room, officials denied it. Later Bernard W. Thompson, former detective chief, admitted the eavesdropping.

Eklund pointed out that only a few hours after this, the police went to a locust tree near the old airport and found some bullets which were used against him when he went on trial for the killing of Hyland G. McClaine, 17, Negro. Eklund will contend that the police could not have found these bullets without invading his constitutional rights and that their evidence ought to have been suppressed.

The bill of exceptions also recited that the jury which tried him was allowed to hear the details of several other killings of which he was accused, although he was on trial only for the McClaine death.

Eklund is under sentence to electrocution on January 16, having been granted a stay so his appeal might be heard.

Petrillo Calls Out Bands on Networks

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians (A. F. of L.) today ordered all bands off the sustaining programs of Columbia Broadcasting system and National Broadcasting Co. networks.

The union said the order resulted from a dispute with two radio stations in Pittsburgh—WJAS, C. B. S. outlet, and KQV, N. B. C. outlet there. The union has been deadlocked with these stations over a demand that they engage 11-man sustaining orchestras.

Women to Sign as 'War' Cops; Air Raid Protection Outlined

Capt. Milliken Will Interview 300 Prospects

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, commander of the police Women's Bureau, next Monday will begin interviewing some 300 volunteers for service as policewomen in the event of an emergency due to war.

Supplied with names of the Washington women by the Central Volunteer Bureau, Capt. Milliken will choose 25 women for immediate training. Later, 100 more will be called, it was said.

Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, said the auxiliary women will equal the present number of policewomen, just as auxiliary policemen will number the same as the regular precinct personnel.

Names of 50 of the volunteer policewomen were sent to Capt. Milliken yesterday. They were chosen from a master list alphabetically and are between 25 and 40.

Training of the women volunteers will match that to be given the male volunteers. They will be instructed in the law, court procedure, self-defense and city geography.

Just what the duties of the lady cops will be was speculative. Capt. Milliken said she could use several of them immediately for clerical work at the station house. However, Maj. Kelly said this could not be arranged.

In the event of an emergency the women will be used to relieve regular policewomen at the bureau and on emergency calls, it was said. The auxiliary force will do patrol duty with regular matrons.

Whether the volunteers will be allowed to carry arms had not been decided last night.

Bolles Instructs Group on How To Avoid Panic

Plans to establish facilities for combatting panic and fire spread in public and private schools in the event of an air raid on the city were outlined yesterday to local educational officials by Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive director of the District Defense Council.

At a special meeting in the District Building, Col. Bolles warned some 15 school representatives that the Capital could have "no assurances of any given length of time before an attack."

He said school authorities must prepare to meet any emergency by setting up protection programs within the various institutions. He suggested a system of air-raid wardens for each building to supervise fire fighting, control panic and provide first-aid facilities.

Notes Federal Provisions

In suggesting tentative interschool programs, Col. Bolles quoted from approved Federal provisions for air raid protection in vital plants and factories.

He told the meeting that similar arrangements for school protection will be ready soon.

Col. Bolles proposed a program which would include raid observers, fire watchers and first-aid workers. He said each institution would necessarily have to set up its own system depending on personnel and resources.

"I cannot urge you to start too soon," said Col. Bolles, explaining that District defense authorities would cooperate in any move undertaken.

Urges Trained Corps

He suggested that student bodies be organized into trained air raid defense corps and that particular attention be paid to morale and education in emergency activities.

Attending yesterday's meeting were representatives of the four universities—Catholic, Georgetown, American and George Washington—and public, private and parochial schools.

Public Urged To Aid Former Convicts

The Washington public was called upon yesterday to accept the responsibility of helping former inmates of jail and prisons to readjust themselves upon their return to society.

"If volunteer workers would assist these men and women in finding employment and in other ways, it would probably make unnecessary any habitual criminal law," the Bureau of Rehabilitation was told by James V. Bennett, director of the Bureau of Prisons, Department of Justice.

Addressing the bureau's opening fall meeting at the Y. W. C. A., Bennett pointed out that a large proportion of the 75,000 persons who emerge each year from behind bars have received training in skilled trades during their incarceration. Thus, they can contribute much to the defense effort in industry, he declared.

Airplane engine mechanics are being trained at the Federal Reformatory at Chillicothe, Ohio, said Bennett. At Lewisburg Penitentiary in Pennsylvania, working shifts are in operation, he declared.

G. Howland Shaw, president of the Bureau of Rehabilitation and who presided over the luncheon meeting, likewise urged community cooperation to help former offenders and called for an end to "emotional, unthinking" reaction by the public to the Capital's crime problem.

Shaw, an Assistant Secretary of State, is president of the American Prison Association.

Arthur Buckman Funeral Services To Be Tomorrow

Funeral services for Arthur L. Buckman, 66, well-known Washington real estate man and once secretary of the late Edward B. McLean, former publisher of The Washington Post, will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at the S. H. Hines Funeral Home, 2901 Fourteenth Street Northwest. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

BUCKMAN

Mr. Buckman died Tuesday night in Georgetown Hospital.

A second generation Washingtonian, he was born July 31, 1875, a son of Mahlon and Martha Buckman and grandson of Jonathan and Ann Buckman, who came to Washington in 1830 from Bucks County, Pennsylvania.

He became Mr. McLean's secretary in 1910, leaving 10 years later to enter the real estate business. He was a real estate salesman successively with the firms of E. E. Raney and Harry Wardman. For the past 10 years he had been associated with Weaver Brothers, Inc., in the same capacity.

Mr. Buckman is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mae Cissel Buckman, and two sisters, Misses Florence and Fanice Buckman, all of Washington.

A. M. A. President Urges Declaration Of War on Nazis

Minneapolis, Oct. 15 (AP).—Dr. Frank H. Lahey of Boston, president of the American Medical Association, tonight said he believed there should be an open declaration of war upon Germany by the United States.

In an address prepared for delivery before the International Medical Assembly, Dr. Lahey added that he believed "we are in fact at war with Germany and that meets with my complete approval."

Dr. Lahey said: "I believe that we should declare war openly and gain the moral, political, practical and psychic advantages of such a frank and open statement of our position." Then he added, "I believe that there should be no limitation as to our type or degree of participation in terms of men and where they go, in terms of material, or in terms of financial support."

Contract Bridge

What call do you make?

♡ 10 8 6
◇ A 8 7 4 3
♣ J 9 7 6

The bidding has gone:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	?	—

What is your best chance to take four tricks in the suit?

3. Sitting East, you hold these cards:

♠ A Q 7 3
♡ J 10 7 3
◇ Q 8 3

The bidding nas gone:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?	—

What call do you make?

Answers to Quiz

1. North cannot make a diamond call at the two level with only one high-card trick, and one no-trump is very risky with the possibility of partner passing and the opponents running spades. The wisest bid is a raise to two hearts.

2. North leads toward dummy and ducks on the first round, playing a low card. The queen is finessed on the next round, a daring move; and if East holds the king and the opposing cards fall 3-3, the suit will be brought in, declarer winning all but the first trick.

3. By making a reverse bid, showing a major suit after a minor, West indicates a strong hand in high cards as well as distribution. East has good support for his partner's heart suit and game looks promising; he may well jump right to four hearts.

that the lad should be bitter at this latest charge. In making a complete denial of any misconduct, Meade said:

"Since my return to racing, the slate has been wiped clean and I have had a high record of winners. What more can be asked of a guy? I am being persecuted by this latest story. All I ask is a fair shake. This last, unfounded rumor is the most vicious of all. I leave it to the public's sense of fair play."

When the Nation's racing pooh-bahs decided to give Meade another chance after his "lifetime" suspension by the Florida Commission, they had a notable precedent. Several years ago, Baseball Commissioner Landis, czar of a sport which guards its fair name even more zealously than racing, decided to give another chance to a convicted burglar who had served his time. Landis refused to bar Alabama Pitts from baseball on the theory that every man deserved a chance to rehabilitate himself. That's the chance Meade got, too, a few years ago. It would have been too bad if a sensationalist sports writer had queered him.

No Help for Jockey's Widow

Friend Dan Parker, justice-seeking sports editor of the New York Mirror, recites the sad plight of Mrs. Johnny Barba, widow of the jockey who was trampled to death at Jamaica last year. None of racing's magnates have beaten a path to the door of Mrs. Barba with offers of assistance, Parker relates.

"The Jamaica race track defrayed funeral expenses which amounted to a little more than $500, and the Jockey's Guild paid for hospitalization, but since then the widow and her small son haven't received a nickel from racing folk and if it weren't for the fact that her parents have been giving her an apartment rent free, she wouldn't have a roof over her head.

"Recently, Johnny, jr., was stricken with bronchial trouble and there was no money available for medical attention. After Mrs. Barber had tried to contact her late husband's employer by telephone several times, she went to the track to see him. She was welcomed by that old race track enthusiasm, and there were plenty of inquiries about the baby. When she told the improver of the breed that her child was sick, he asked, 'Why don't you take him to the doctor?'

"Thereupon the race track man who thinks nothing of betting $1000 on a race, reached into his pocket and came up with—a handkerchief with which he blew his nose noisily and bade the 98-pound widow good afternoon."

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia, Mary K. Antonacci, plaintiff, vs. Daniel Antonacci, defendant. No. 12369. Civil Action. The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce from the defendant, Daniel Antonacci, on the ground of willful desertion for more than two years and until the present time, and for other relief. On motion of the plaintiff, it is this 13th day of October, 1941, ordered that the defendant, Daniel Antonacci, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post newspaper before said day. DAVID A. PINE, Justice. Attest: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By JULIA W. SHIPLEY, Assistant Clerk. 16,23,30

WINNIE WINKLE — A Cross-Questioning Conscience — BY BRANNER

THE IDEA OF THOSE CRACK-BRAINED LITTLE DEBS AT VERA'S COMING-OUT PARTY INSINUATING THAT I'M IN LOVE! RIDICULOUS!
OH, I DON'T KNOW, DAN! THERE MAY BE SOME-THING IN WHAT THOSE GIRLS SAID!
PREPOSTEROUS! WITH WHOM WOULD I BE IN LOVE??
WELL-ER-IT MIGHT BE A GIRL NAMED WINNIE!
THAT'S PERFECTLY SILLY! I DON'T LOVE WINNIE-- OR ANY OTHER GIRL, FOR THAT MATTER-- YOU'RE SURE OF THAT??
OF COURSE, I'M SURE! OH, I'LL ADMIT I ADMIRE AND RESPECT WINNIE FOR HER COURAGE AND LOYALTY! WINNIE IS A SWELL GIRL, ALL RIGHT, BUT-- ER-AHEM-ER-I DON'T LOVE HER!!

NOW TO RUSH OVER TO POLICE HEADQUARTERS AND CONTACT SERGEANT CASEY!
I SAY, CASEY-- I'VE JUST LEARNED THAT YOU'VE CAPTURED SOME MEMBERS OF THE GANG THAT WORKS WITH PARALYSIS-- ROOS!
MY, YOU'VE GOT BIG EARS! YES, WE DID CAPTURE SOME OF THEM-- BUT HOW YOU SHOULD HAPPEN TO KNOW ABOUT IT IS SOMETHING I CAN'T UNDERSTAND!
THAT'S STRICTLY A TRADE SECRET. TELL ME... HAVE THEY TALKED YET?
NO, AND I'M AFRAID THEY NEVER WILL.
AND HERE'S ONE OF THE ROOS THAT'S CAUSING ALL THE MISCHIEF! EVER SEE SUCH A FIENDISH DEVICE BEFORE?
ONLY A WARPED MIND COULD CONCEIVE SUCH A HORROR.

Dennis McEvoy, Columbia's new Moscow correspondent, whom you hear over WJSV several times a week, is all of 23 years old.

And he sort of makes you wonder how one that age could have crowded in all the experience he's had. For he speaks seven foreign languages—Japanese, French, German, Russian, Polish, Italian and Malayan—and reads two more, Chinese and Spanish. He's been a reporter on the San Francisco Examiner. He's been a research assistant at Yale Medical School. He's been a reporter for the Chicago Times. He has taught Japanese at his alma mater, the University of Chicago. He was a United Press correspondent with the Japanese armies in Manchukuo and was one of the U. P.s cable editors in Tokio. He's been to school in both Germany and France.

The son of J. P. McEvoy, the well-known humorist, magazine writer and movie scenarist, he's something of a well-known author himself. He's written articles for Asia Magazine, for Reader's Digest and Coronet.

He was teaching at the University of Chicago and working on a cultural history of Japan—he learned Japanese by living for six months in a farmer's hut in northern Japan—when the Chicago Times sent him across the Pacific to cover the latest Russo-German misunderstanding.

And this is only the beginning—for, as we said before, Mr. McEvoy is all of 23 years old.

The Post Radio Highlights

7:30, WJSV—Maudie's Diary reveals that Davy has fallen from the good graces of her parents.

8, WRC—While Snooks sets down in her diary that she has been able to give daddy some razzberries.

8, WWDC—The Rev. John J. Cartwright continues his Washington Catholic Radio Hour.

8:30, WJSV—Archie pulls a fast one for his Tavern. He introduces himself.

9:15, WMAL—America's Town Meeting of the Air returns to this hour on the Blue network.

9:30, WRC—The N. B. C. Symphony, conducted by Dr. Frank Black and with Emma Otero and Albert Spalding as guest artists, plays a concert in the Pan American Union marking the end of the N. B. C. Good Neighbor series.

11:15, WRC—Walter Millis, who wrote "The Road to War," speaks on Rex Stout's Speaking of Liberty series.

Dr. Voegtlin Believes Cancer Will Be Beaten

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 16.—One of the Nation's leading authorities today likened cancer research to that in nutritional diseases shortly before discoveries which brought the dawn of preventive treatments for rickets, pellagra scurvy, beriberi and the like.

Dr. Carl Voegtlin, director of the National Cancer Institute of the United States Public Health Service, declared he was "confident that research will gradually solve the cancer problem." He addressed the American Public Health Association's annual meeting.

Cancer research, he said, already has piled up a tremendous fund of new knowledge which is growing every day, and scientists are looking optimistically to the day when the toll of 450,000 persons suffering from cancer will be cut drastically.

Conservative Scientist

Dr. Voegtlin, known to his colleagues as one of the most conservative of scientists, said research on enzymes, materials which promote growth, and discovery of cancer-producing properties of chemicals, including female sex hormones, "may well lead to the effective prevention of certain types of cancer."

Cancer as viewed today by the research scientist is not a single disease but a group of diseases with some common characteristics, he said. The hope is that these will soon fall together like the parts of a jig-saw puzzle, he said.

It is known that radium, X-rays, ultra-violet light and chemicals such as coal-tar derivatives can produce cancer of the skin and, "if we knew how many of these agents cause the transformation of normal into malignant cells, we obviously should have a key to the causation of cancer. This problem is being sutdied."

One of the biggest problems in cancer study is to find the reason why cancerous tissue keeps growing and invades and destroys normal tissue, sometimes in parts of the body remote from the original growth. "A satisfactory explanation of this question may lead to more effective curative methods."

Control by Diet

Work at the National Cancer Institute and in various laboratories to which the National Cancer Council has made grants for cancer research has proven that the growth rate of cancer in animals "can be strikingly slowed up by maintaining them on diets partly deficient in essential components such as certain amino acids and vitamins."

"The time may come when it will be possible to devise diets which will control the cancerous growth in patients."

The effects of cancer are not confined to a single area, Dr. Voegtlin declared. Recent experiments show that a fraction of cancer tissue from the liver when injected under the skin of a noncancerous animal upsets the enzyme activity of a supposedly normal liver.

"In these respects cancer research is entering rapidly into a stage similar to that which nutritional diseases occupied some 35 years ago, just before the discovery of vitamins and enzymes which are so important for normal nutrition and for the prevention of nutritional diseases."

Falls Church Units Will Meet Today

An all-day meeting of the Missionary and Ladies' Aid Societies of the Falls Church (Va.) Presbyterian Church will be held in the church parlors today, with Mrs. Paul Brown, Mrs. W. B. Crockett and Mrs. Ray Brown as luncheon hostesses.

A benefit showing of the motion picture, "Rebirth of a Nation," will be shown in the church this evening, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. Proceeds from the affair will go toward the United China Relief Fund.

WAS DEAFened
NOW HEARS CLOCK TICK

A. M. Bostchenon, Newark, N. J., writes: "Before using Orotune Ear Drops, I was so deafened that I could not hear the clock tick. After using Orotune, I can now hear the clock tick with both ears." Thousands now hard-of-hearing would hear clearly and distinctly again, and also get relief from buzzing, ringing head noises, clogged up feeling in ears, if impacted wax that blocks ear canals and presses on sensitive eardrums was removed. Try Orotune Ear Drops as directed. They are safe and contain an ingredient especially recommended for this purpose. Month's supply only $1.00.

Police Court Opens at 8 A. M.

For the first time in the history of Police Court, the jury branch of the court was convened at 8 a. m. yesterday by Judge George D. Neilson in an effort to clear an overcrowded docket.

With some 960 cases awaiting trial, Judge Neilson returned from vacation and presided over the first session of jury court for more than a month. On Monday he instructed the jury to be on hand for the early opening. Court generally convenes at 10 a. m.

Judge Neilson said that "personal sacrifices" on the part of jurors and court attendants will be necessary to speed up trials and bring the overloaded docket up to date. He said he intended "to come early and stay late" as long as he is assigned in the jury branch.

Seventy-six jury cases have been disposed of since Monday, most of them by guilty pleas or by nolle proses. The judge said he was particularly anxious to dispose of numerous negligent homicide cases which are pending.

Unable to reach them on the calendar yesterday, Judge Neilson ordered continued two traffic death cases. They involved the deaths of Irving R. Bell, jr., 15, of Takoma Park, Md., and Margaret Watson, 11, of 5112 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, who were killed here last December and August, respectively.
